CHIANG'S MEN KILL 100 IN WAR ON REDS IN SHANGHAI

Wounded Number 150 in Fighting Occasioned by Raids of Cantonese Soldiers.

NORTHERN ARMY CROSSES YANGTZE

Eugene Chen Understood to Be Preparing Sharp Answers to Five-Power Note on Nanking.

By the Associated Press.

SHANGHAI, April 13.—One hundred Chinese were killed and 250 wounded in fighting resulting from further raids in the native suburbs of Shanghai this afternoon by Gen. Chiang Kai-shek's troops engaged in routing out Reds.

The casualties were mostly among the communist supporters. The shooting was plainly heard in the international settlement causing considerable excitement. The general strike called by the red labor unions as a protest against the raids, which began yesterday, has made nearly 100,000 workers idle and delayed a number of Chinese-owned steamers.

Gen. Pai Tsung-Chi, commander of the Cantonese troops in this section, issued an official proclamation tonight dissolving the general labor union.

There were two attempts by Chinese to storm the barrier leading to the international settlement.

A group of Chinese tried to rush the barrier and a clash followed with the Italian guards on the Urga road. The Italians fired over the heads of the Chinese and they retreated. Last night a small mob made a sally to storm the barrier, but it was soon realized that this was impossible. The Chinese then set fire to circulars which they had thrown into the barbed-wire barrier, and several posts were burned.

The strike was due to Gen. Chiang Kai-shek's efforts to suppress the radical element of the Kuomintang, or Cantonese political organization.

The labor unions ordered the workers to leave their posts as a protest against Chiang's action in ordering raids on union halls. Labor leaders said the strike call was obeyed immediately by 50,000 workers, and they expected many others would join.

It was made clear by the labor organizations that the strike was not aimed at foreigners, but was purely a movement by the communists to bring about the overthrow of Gen. Chiang, commander in chief of the Cantonese armies.

Parading strikers attacked the headquarters of Chiang's troops in the Chapei native district. The soldiers fired, killing 20 of the attackers.

Military Situation.

The Northern Chinese troops, who turned suddenly several days ago against the Cantonese, appeared today to be following up their success. An official report was received that they had entered Pukow, on the northern bank of the Yangtze River, opposite Nanking, marching into the city in the wake of a bombardment and without encountering opposition from the Cantonese. The report said that Cantonese flags on the side of Nanking, facing Pukow, had disappeared.

Further east in the Yangtze valley, Gen. Sun Chuan-fang, original defender of Shanghai, assembled his troops in a drive on the Grand Canal, reaching a point opposite Chinkiang.

A later official report said the Northerners had crossed the Yangtze River, landing at Hsiaohoku, near Kiangyin, and that Gen. Chang Chun-li, Cantonese commander in that district, was fleeing toward Shanghai.

Foreign observers here believe the Northerners have determined to strike while the iron is hot, in view of the split in the Cantonese party.

The fall of Pukow to the Northern armies means that there are no Cantonese forces north of the Yangtze between Nanking and the mouth of the river.

Northern authorities in Pekin, in an official account of last week's raid on soviet buildings in the Pekin embassy compound, announced that among the documents seized were detailed plans for military operations, by which the soviet government would supply and organize cavalry in Mongolia and Manchuria.

The American Consulate-General in Shanghai made public a statement signed by 17 American mis-

38-Story Tower Burns In Fire on Fifth Avenue

Thousands Watch Spectacle — Apparatus Helpless as Flames Consume Hoists and Sparks Shower Down.

By Leased Wire from the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, April 13.—While hundreds of firemen, called out by five alarms, stood almost helplessly by, the most spectacular fire in years raged about the 38-story tower of the nearly completed $10,000,000 Hotel Netherland on the plaza at Fifth Avenue and Fifty-ninth street for hours last night.

Curls of smoke and sparks were seen from the downtown side of the construction scaffolding atop the tower, 559 feet in the air, at 8 o'clock. By the time the first apparatus had responded to the alarm the mass of interlacing timbers was aflame. Blown by a south wind, the fire worked quickly around to the north and east sides of the tower, where four outside wooden hoists for builders material ran down its walls to the first setback on the twenty-third floor, 15 stories below. The flames spread to this excellent fuel.

Sparks Carried Three Blocks.

With no elevators in the building as yet and with the interior filled with other hoists and scraps of material the firemen found themselves unable to reach the tower, and they watched the fire burn itself out.

The wind snatched thousands of blazing brands and carried them far into adjoining streets and to the roofs of buildings within a radius of three blocks, many of them the residences of some of the city's most prominent and wealthy families. Police and firemen were stationed on all roof tops in this area to stamp out sparks.

Other police stretched ropes around the entire Plaza and mounted guard along the low wall of Central Park to hold in check the thousands of spectators. Far back into the park and on the roof tops for blocks and along Central Park West and up and down Fifth avenue from the Public Library to the Museum of Art the crowds stood and gazed and gasped.

700 Police Handle Crowds.

For safety and because of the host of fire apparatus and the dense crowds, all traffic was stopped in the vicinity of the burning hotel. Seven hundred police reserves from 10 stations were assigned to this duty.

Firemen, police and many of the nearest members of the crowd had narrow escapes from falling timbers. One, a big, sizzling plank, landed among the spectators at the Central Park corner of the Plaza and missed several by inches. No one was hurt, however.

LAWYER, 93, ARGUES CASE

Appears Before Supreme Court; Questioned by Justice Holmes, 87.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, April 13.—A 93-year-old lawyer argued in the Supreme Court yesterday for nearly an hour. He was frequently interrupted by questions from the bench, Justice Holmes, himself in his eighty-seventh year, making a number of inquiries, to which the attorney gave ready replies.

The lawyer was Moses Hooper of Oshkosh, Wis., who has been in active practice for 70 years. He drove to Washington in an automobile to argue the case, which was in line with his specialty, water power litigation.

CLARENCE DARROW TO RETIRE AS LAWYER ON 70TH BIRTHDAY

Intends to Devote Himself Chiefly to Writing and Speaking After Next Monday.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, April 13.—Clarence Darrow, at 70, will sing his swan song as a lawyer at a dinner on his birthday next Monday and will henceforth devote himself principally to writing and speaking.

The defender of Leopold and Loeb, the McNamaras and "Big Bill" Haywood and counsel for John Thomas Scopes in the Tennessee evolution case, discussed with newspaper men today his previously announced desire to rest from the labors of 50 years in court.

Despite his belief that prohibition is a mistake, his conviction that free will and purpose in life are myths and his lack of religious fath, Darrow is an optimist of a sort, he confessed today "although," he qualified quickly, "not a shouting optimist." He is certain that society is slowly making headway in intelligent treatment of criminals, and that labor, in defense of which he has often appeared at the bar, is coming into a better relation to capital, which regards labor now, he thinks, not as raw material but as a consumer of the products it makes and entitled therefore to the wherewithal to buy.

"The aim of life," he holds, "is the pursuit of happiness and the avoidance of pain. To some, the grief of others gives discomfort. Some of us feel better if we try to do something about oppression. I've tried."

EDUCATION BOARD ORDERS HALF HOLIDAY GOOD FRIDAY

Defers to Request of Religious Organizations; Classes to End at 11 A. M.

The public schools will close Friday at 11 a. m. in observance of Good Friday. In previous years, schools have remained in session, but pupils desiring to attend religious services were excused without being recorded as absent.

Last night's action of the Board of Education was in deference to a request by religious organizations.

FOGS DELAY ARCTIC FLYERS

Return of Capt. Wilkins to Alaska base May Require Weeks.

By the Associated Press.

FAIRBANKS, Alaska, April 13.—Return of Capt. George H. Wilkins, Australian explorer, and Carl Ben Eilson, his airplane pilot, from a flight over the Arctic "blind spot" from Point Barrow, may be delayed weeks or months, due to the spring fogs and thaws.

Wilkins and Eilson of the Detroit News-Wilkins Arctic expedition set out from Point Barrow to explore the vast reaches of the Arctic Ocean between Alaska and the North Pole, March 29. Latest reports are that they have not returned and are believed to be making their way to land on foot, due to a mishap to their plane.

PENSION CHECKS PREPARED

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, April 13. — Department of Interior clerks today began making out checks for May pension payments, aggregating more than $18,000,000 to the 500,000 beneficiaries for whom Congress failed to provide funds before it adjourned. The checks will be placed in the mails in time to be received by the pensioners May 4, their regular monthly payday.

Funds for May and June have been advanced by the Treasury, and there will be no interruption in the distribution of checks.

STOLEN RADIO SET FOUND IN HOME OF OFFICER ON BEAT

$475 Outfit Taken From Sampson Store, 3624 Olive, on Policeman George Stippecs' Mantel.

SHOP ROBBED THREE TIMES IN ONE MONTH

Patrolman, Transferred Since Discovery, Says He Bought Apparatus From Stranger He Can't Find.

A $475 radio set stolen by a burglar last summer from the office of the Sampson Co., 3624 Olive street, has been found in the home of the policeman on the beat, Patrolman George Stippec, it was learned today.

Although the radio equipment was taken from Stippec's home at 3015 Henrietta avenue on March 19, he is still on duty, walking a beat in Central district, to which he was assigned in December. Chief of Police Gerk today ordered Inspector Walton to bring charges of unbecoming conduct and neglect of duty against the policeman but it was announced he would not be suspended unless an investigation developed more damaging evidence against him or the Circuit Attorney issued a warrant against him.

The Sampson Co.'s radio shop was robbed three times last June by a burglar, who apparently used a duplicate key. Altogether, almost $5000 worth of equipment was taken.

Loud Speaker Gives Clew.

There was no clew to the whereabouts of the property until this month when W. E. Guthrie, formerly a roomer at Stippec's home, went to the Sampson Co. with a loud speaker he wanted repaired. Julian E. Sampson, president of the concern, recognized it as having been stolen in June and questioned Guthrie, who said he had bought it from Stippec.

Policemen, called in by Sampson, found a stolen radio set on the mantel in Stippec's home and the patrolman was summoned to the Laclede Avenue Station to give an explanation.

He had bought the set, he said, from a man named LeMar whom he had met at Grand and Olive. In support of his statement Stippec exhibited a bill of sale signed "LeMar" which fixed the cost of the set to the policeman at $260. Stippec could only describe the man as "big and prosperous looking," but he pleaded that if action in the case was postponed, he might be able to find him. He has been unable to do so, however.

Stolen Articles Described.

Descriptions of stolen articles are placed in the hands of policemen after robberies, and officers on the beat where a robbery or burglary occurred are particularly bound to acquaint themselves with the description of stolen articles.

The burglaries at the Sampson Co. store were committed at night and Stippec was walking the beat at night at that time. They were discovered in the morning, however, and another policeman made the reports of the thefts.

Sampson's application today for a warrant against the policeman on a charge of receiving stolen property was taken under advisement.

DWIGHT DAVIS IN DIVING SUIT EXPLORES FLOOR OF OCEAN

Secretary of War on Visit to Haiti Descended With Beebee Scientific Expedition.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, April 13.—Secretary of War Davis, during his recent visit to Haiti, strolled about the ocean floor at a depth of 20 feet or so amid fantastic coral displays, visible at a distance of 50 feet and with strangely colored marine creatures thronging about him.

Davis found the Beebee scientific expedition at Port au Prince and at the invitation of the explorer put on a diving suit. Davis said the fish showed no terror of the human visitors but rubbed or nibbled at his arms and legs or peered into his helmet glass as they passed.

COUNTESS SALM GETS DIVORCE AND CUSTODY OF BOY

Paris Court Also Grants Separation Decree to Husband Who Charged She Deserted Him.

WIFE WAS FORMER MILLICENT ROGERS

She Declares Experience Has Taught Her Not to Marry Hastily or to Wed a Foreigner.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.
(Copyright, 1927.)

PARIS, April 13.—Count Ludwig Salm von Hoogstraeten and his American heiress bride, the former Millicent Rogers, have been both divorced and legally separated by the French courts, it was learned today.

Two decrees were handed down in the Seine Tribunal on Monday. One of them granted a divorce to the Countess; the other granted a legal separation to the Count.

Little Peter, son of the couple, is in the custody of the former wife.

Count Salm had no difficulty in backing up his charge of desertion with proof that his wife had refused to return to him or live with him. In view of the absolute proof offered by both sides the court had no alternative but to grant the demands of both parties.

She Gets Custody of Boy.

"The best part of it all is that I get the custody of my boy, Peter," the Countess said in an interview. "The agreement was that the Count should see Peter every three months, so if the court allows this private agreement to stand it means that I will have my boy."

The court's judgment was that the agreement between the two parties, dated Feb. 27, 1927, settled the question of the child's custody.

The Countess backed up her accusation of "injurious relations" with a letter from Count Salm, in which he had written to her: "Because of the attitude of your family and yourself toward me, I wonder how I ever lived with you as long as I did. Luckily everything is now over between us."

The Countess said that her marriage had taught her two lessons, not to marry hastily and not to marry a foreigner. She added: "Especially in the case of an American woman marrying a foreigner I would advise a long engagement."

Heiress to $40,000,000.

Countess Salm von Hoogstraeten is the daughter of Col. Henry H. Rogers of New York and grand daughter of the late W. H. Rogers, Standard Oil magnate. She is the heiress to the $40,000,000 estate left by the oil king.

Announcement was made by Supreme Court Justice Levy of New York in January that the separation suit had virtually been settled out of court, and it was published at the time that the Countess was to pay the Count $325,000. In turn, he was to drop suits against Mr. and Mrs. Rogers for alienation of their daughter's affections.

WASHINGTON, April 13.—Homer R. Sands, administrative assistant in the Commerce Department's air service section, was killed, and John L. Hosch, an aeronautical engineer of the department, was seriously injured when their airplane crashed here today at Bolling Field.

Both men were reserve army aviators and were flying an army training plane. They went into a tailspin, while flying at an altitude of 200 feet.

DIRIGIBLE WEATHERS STORM

Los Angeles Moored After Riding All-Night Gale.

By the Associated Press.

LAKEHURST, N. J., April 13.—The naval dirigible Los Angeles was safely moored in its hangar at 5:50 o'clock this morning after riding out a storm since 11 o'clock last night.

The huge ship circled about its landing field throughout the night in a wind that at times reached 60 miles an hour and Lieutenant-Commander Charles E. Rosendahl decided it would be unwise to attempt a landing. The wind, however, died down somewhat during the early morning hours and the landing was made without mishap. Commander Rosendahl said the flight to Plantation Flats, off Chesapeake Bay, upon which the ship set out yesterday forenoon, was entirely satisfactory.

36 PILGRIMS KILLED IN CRUSH TO BE FIRST GANGES BATHERS

Many Others Injured in Rush Against Barriers at Final Stage of Hindu Ceremony.

By the Associated Press.

HARDWAR, United Provinces, India, April 13.—Thirty-six pilgrims were crushed to death and many others were injured during a rush to be the first to bathe in the holy Ganges River as part of the kumbha mela, or Hindu religious bathing ceremony.

The ceremonies, which have been in progress since the first of March, reached their final stage last night, when vast numbers of pilgrims entered the water of the sacred river.

In the rush at the wooden barricades erected along the river, 21 women and 15 men were killed. Many others were taken to hospitals, suffering from serious injuries.

Hardwar, previously called Gangi-Dwar, or Gate of the Ganges, is at the spot where the river issues from the Himalayas.

The kumbha mela is a feast of peculiar sanctity which is held every twelfth year. The pilgrims attending have been numbered as many as 400,000. In early days riots occurred at these ceremonies, and outbreaks of cholera were attributed to them.

CARROLL COLLAPSES ON TRAIN ON WAY TO ATLANTA PRISON

New York Theatrical Producer Taken to Hospital, Unconscious, at Greenville (S. C.)

By the Associated Press.

GREENVILLE, S. C., April 13.—Earl Carroll, theatrical producer, collapsed on the train here today, while on the way to the Federal penitentiary at Atlanta, Ga., and was unconscious, it was said by physicians this afternoon.

Carroll was taken to a hospital and Marshal William C. Hecht, who was in charge, remained with the producer. He said that Carroll's collapse was due to the nervous strain of the last few months. The Marshal said that Carroll had eaten little since leaving New York and seemed depressed. He sat up until 2 o'clock this morning, writing letters.

The producer's wife was a passenger in another part of his train, but was not permitted to visit him during the journey. She will not see him again until he is permitted to have callers at the prison.

Mrs. Carroll has announced she will live in Atlanta during her husband's imprisonment. He was sentence dto a year and a day.

DURATION TEST FLIGHT PASSES 29-HOUR MARK

Two Civilian Aviators, Attempting Record, Watch 38th Story New York Fire.

By the Associated Press.

MINEOLA, N. Y., April 13.—Unmindful of signs of a gathering storm, two civilian aviators today listened only to a motor that had roared steadily through a day and a night, droning off the hours in their attempt to bring the world's duration flight record back to America. At 2:30 p. m. today the flyers had been in the air 29 hours.

Clouds hung low over Long Island and rain was forecast, but associates said these conditions would have no effect on the attempt of Clarence D. Chamberlin and Bert Acosta, former army flyer, to stay in the air 50 hours.

The plane was throttled down to 80 miles an hour as it cruised over Mitchel Field this morning. Speed had been reduced steadily since the plane hopped off at 9:30 o'clock yesterday morning. Through slower flying the airmen hope to conserve their fuel supply of 385 gallons long enough to remain in the air until tomorrow afternoon.

Rest was obtained in alternate naps on a mattress bunk in their Wright-Bellanca monoplane. Their food consists of coffee, soup, sandwiches, water and chocolate bars.

A message from the aviators was picked up at Roosevelt Field this morning. It read:

"8:50 a. m. Everything running fine. We will string it out for a new record. Glad the long night is over. Daylight was very welcome. Have just finished a light breakfast of vegetable soup and water. We stole occasional 'cat-naps' during the night, but probably will be so tired we will get some real sleep tonight."

"Our present engine revolutions are 1225 per minute and we estimate we have 170 gallons of gasoline left."

If they are able to remain aloft until 6:42 o'clock tomorrow morning they will have broken the world's record of 45 hours, 11 minutes, established by Drouhin and Landry at Etampes, France. By 9:45 o'clock tonight they will have broken the American record of 36 hours, 4 minutes, set by Kelley and Macready.

The flyers last night flew above a fire in the thirty-eighth story of a skyscraper under construction in Manhattan and their plane was visible to crowds from the light of the blaze.

PHONE OPERATOR STICKS TO POST TO SUMMON HELP

Relief Workers Take Possession of Rocksprings —Thirty-Three of the Dead Identified.

WIND CARRIES BABY 50 FEET, UNINJURED

Fire Breaks Out and Destroys Two of the Few Buildings Not Flattened by the Storm.

By the Associated Press.

ROCKSPRINGS, Tex., April 13.—A tornado struck this inland town last night, killed at least 62 persons and injured about 150 others, some fatally.

Sixty-two bodies had been recovered from the ruins of the town before noon today, 33 of which had been identified.

Of the injured, 20 were expected to die.

Most of the unidentified dead were Mexicans.

All telephone lines to Rocksprings were severed when the tornado struck about 8.30 o'clock last night. A lineman succeeded in tapping a wire about a mile from town and sent the first call for aid. The lineman soon improvised a temporary station and Gladys Lowery, operator, worked throughout the severe electrical storm to get relief calls through to nearby towns. Lightning several times forced Miss Lowery from the line.

The town was lashed into ruins in a few minutes by a tornado from the northeast which razed all except a few buildings in a two-mile path.

Strikes From the Notreast.

The tornado swept out of the northeast, striking this little plateau town soon after dusk. The town suffered the brunt of the blast, which cleared a space about four miles square. Fewer than 10 buildings were left standing.

Relief workers took possession of the town early today and more were arriving.

A Red Cross relief train that set out early today from San Antonio was still at Uvalde, 75 miles south of Rocksprings today. Ambulances plied back and forth over muddy roads between the two towns while the tracks of a narrow guage lumber line to Camp Wood, 37 miles from here, were tested with a view to running a relief train as close as possible to the torn town.

After the tornado passed two women, neighbors for many years, lay side by side. One on the verge of unconsciousness asked, "Are you sleeping well?"

"I'll be sleeping in a minute," was the reply. She died with the last word and her companion lapsed into unconsciousness.

A baby was hurled 50 feet through the air and landed safely, almost gently.

Revised List of the Dead.

Following is a revised list of the identified dead: J. T. Crowder and wife, Emory Willis and his mother, Mrs. William Phelts, David McKinney, Mrs. Ferris and her son, Mrs. Olga Pennington and her daughter, H. B. Griffith and daughter, Gus Henderson, wife and three children, H. Dollahite, editor of Edwards County Leader and daughter Mattie, Charles Baker, Mrs. P. T. Wittenburg and son, Burnett Babb, two children of Joe Billings, Mrs. Walter Adams and son, the Rev. M. Spiers of the Rocksprings Methodist Church, wife and two children, a child of the Renfro family, Charles McMain.

With a population of 800, Rocksprings, center of a sparsely settled goat-raising section in Southwest Texas, is one of the most isolated towns of the State. It is on a rocky dome of 2000 feet elevation, the highest county seat in Texas east of the Davis Mountains. Only the native stone construction of many of its buildings is believed to have saved the town, so exposed, from complete destruction.

Emergency Hospital Set Up.

Ambulances from Junction, Kerrville, Del Rio and other nearby points were conveying the injured to Camp Wood, to an emergency hospital in a theater.

LAW PROPOSED TO BASE VALUATION ON INVESTMENT

Senator Norris Will Try in Next Congress to Crystallize I. C. C. Decision in Form of Statute.

SUPREME COURT LEANS OTHER WAY

Suggested Act Combats Its Theory of Reproduction Cost as Basis of Rate-Making.

By CHARLES G. ROSS,
Chief Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, April 13.—Senator George W. Norris (Rep.), Nebraska, leader of the Progressive group in the Senate, has announced that an effort will be made in the next Congress to pass a measure requiring that the valuation of railroad property for rate-making purposes be based on the capital prudently invested in the roads.

The decision of the Progressives to press for such a law is one of the first fruits of the recent momentous findings of the Interstate Commerce Commission in the St. Louis & O'Fallon Railway case—a finding which overturned the railroad demand for valuation at the "cost of reproduction" and substituted the principle of valuation at the 1914 price levels, plus the cost of additions since that time. The commission's formula leans strongly toward the prudent investment theory.

Court's Attitude Feared.

It is with a view to safeguarding their gain that the Progressives now purpose to seek a definite rate-making law, embodying the investment theory or something closely akin to it. Without such a law, the formula laid down by the Interstate Commerce Commission appears to be in grave danger of reversal by the Supreme Court, a majority of whose members committed themselves to the cost of reproduction theory in the Southwestern Bell and Indianapolis Water Co. cases.

There is no certainty, of course, that the Supreme Court, in the absence of the congressional action sought by the Progressives, will apply the precedent established in those cases to the settlement of the railroad valuation question. They related, it is true, to public utilities, but to utilities other than railroads. The railroad problem in some ways is unique. Careful stress was laid on this fact in the majority opinion of the commission in the St. Louis & O'Fallon case.

"In important aspects," said this opinion, "it is a problem which has never before been presented to either a commission or a court. It may well be that the valuation of railroads on a national scale requires the beginning of a new chapter in valuation."

Eastman's Argument.

In effect, the commission was arguing its case before the Supreme Court when those words were written into the opinion. Commissioner Eastman, who concurred in a separate opinion, went even further in emphasizing the view that neither the commission nor the Supreme Court was bound by the decisions in previous public utility cases.

"Where public policy is the issue," said Eastman, "law is not a matter of dogmas nor should reasoning be confined to deductions from past judicial utterances. The vital thing is the essential purpose of the law in its relation to the public interest." Again, Eastman pointed out that it is the peculiar duty of the commission to acquire an intimate knowledge of the railroads. "As to such matters," he said, "it occupies a daily front seat upon the stage, while the Supreme Court of necessity is only an occasional visitor in the balcony."

Despite the hopeful spirit evinced in these utterances, the fact remains that the Supreme Court, by and large, is a conservative body.

Hence the fight that Norris and the other progressives, following the path blazed by the late Senator La Follette, are preparing to make in Congress. The railroads are now being valued by the Interstate Commerce Commission under a congressional act of 1913. This requires merely that a physical valuation be made of all railroad property; it does not lay down the formula to be used. What the Progressives seek is a definite law that will establish beyond dispute a formula of at least as great potency as that by which the commission, in the O'Fallon case, cut $10,000,000,000 from the valuation claimed by the railroads.

Richberg to Aid in Drafting Bill.

The proposed law will be drafted by a group of Progressives with the aid of Donald R. Richberg of Chicago, the lawyer who successfully combated the railroad claim at hearings before the commission. Richberg is general counsel for the National Conference on Railroad Valuation, a liberal organization formed in Chicago in 1923 at the instance of Senator La Follette. Senator Norris is now its chairman. The membership includes Congressmen, Governors, representatives of farm and labor organizations.

Norris makes no prediction that the bill will be passed by the next Congress. He believes, however, that it will furnish a rallying point for the progressives of both parties, and that the fight for it will focus attention on the railroad-valuation issue and result in great public support of the prudent investment theory. It is not inconceivable to him that this support, if it materializes, will have weight in the determination of the St. Louis and O'Fallon case, which then will be pending before the United States Supreme Court.

In this thought there is no reflection on the stability of the court: it merely recognizes the fact that no court, not even the highest, is wholly impervious to a sustained public opinion.

Statement of Missionaries.

The statement said:

"Out of our own first-hand experience and observation we unequivocally affirm that those outrages were committed by armed Nationalist (Cantonese) soldiers in uniform who acted with the knowledge and approval of their superior officers.

"Those outrages consisted not only in the looting of foreign homes, consular offices, schools, hospitals and places of business, but also in the burning of foreign homes and schools, in deliberate murder, in the twice shooting and seriously wounding of a young American woman, in shooting at and attempting to kill foreign men, women and children, in the attempted rape of American women and other shocking indignities to foreign women too indecent to be made public.

"To many such things we can bear sworn testimony as eyewitnesses, and numerous other cases have been proved beyond the least shadow of doubt.

"From statements made by many Nationalist soldiers to us and from the testimony of Chinese friends, it is an established fact that they entered Nanking with definite license, if not actual instructions, to rob and kill foreigners. From the actions of the troops it was evident that the plan was to loot foreign buildings, to force the occupants to disclose the location of their valuables, to strip them of their clothing and to maltreat them at will.

"Some of us were told both by these soldiers themselves and also by Chinese friends who helped us find places of concealment, that we surely would be killed.

Naval Fire Prevented Murders.

"It is our conviction that the firing of the naval vessels prevented the murder of many foreigners caught in the city. It was immediately after the shelling begun by the American and British ships that bugles were sounded and the soldiers ceased the systematic work of destruction, demonstrating that they were under control of higher military officers. These are all incontrovertible facts.

"It now seems the established opinion both of Chinese and foreigners that those responsible for these outrages were of the communist wing of the Nationalist Government, which is dominated and directed by Russian bolshevist advisers.

"They are enemies, not only of the foreign interests in China, but also China's truest welfare. It is our belief that unless checked they will make impossible the realization of an orderly unified government.

"We have always been of the deepest sympathy with the genuine Chinese national aims, and despite the fearful experiences through which we passed, we maintain this sympathy. For this reason we are appalled as we think of the inevitable consequences to China and to the world if the destructive influences which are now determining the policy of the Nationalist Government are unrestrained."

Signers of Statement.

Those who signed the statement were: A. J. Bowen, L. L. D., Methodist Episcopal Mission and president of the University of Nanking; P. F. Price, D. D., and Donald W. Richardson, of the Southern Presbyterian Mission; W. R. Williams and C. A. Matti, of the Friends' Mission; John S. Reisner, dean of the Agricultural School of the University of Nanking; J. C. Thompson, C. Stanley Smith, Harry Clemons and C. W. Loos Jr., of the Northern Presbyterian Mission; L. J. Owen, treasurer of the University of Nanking; Edwin Marks, secretary-treasurer of the Disciples of Christ Mission; L. B. Ridgley, W. P. Roberts, J. G. Magee, C. L. Pickers Jr. and Gifford Jr.

Gifford, who acted as spokesman for the missionaries, said that he, personally, had not witnessed any attempts to attack women.

Eugene Chen Is Expected to Reply to Five-Power Note.

By the Associated Press.

HANKOW, April 13.—Eugene Chen, the Cantonese Foreign Minister, it is understood, will reply Friday with separate communications to thefive-Power note of protest against the Nanking outrages. Those Powers which used guns to defend their nationals—Great Britain and the United States—will receive sharp answers, it is forecast.

The understanding is that Chen will accuse them of a "wicked, uncalled for bombardment, wrecking civilian homes and killing people without cause."

Italy and France, according to the reports, will receive notes agreeing to pay damages for the losses caused to their nationals, and it is believed the reply to Japan will be conciliatory.

GOV. FULLER SAYS SACCO-VANZETTI CASE MUST WAIT

Massachusetts Executive to Take No Action on Appeals Till After Legislature Adjourns.

AN exhaustive exposition of the Sacco-Vanzetti case, written by Felix Frankfurter, professor of law at Harvard University, for the Atlantic Monthly, will be found on pages 23, 26 and 29 of today's Post-Dispatch.

By the Associated Press.

BOSTON, April 13.—Gov. Alvan T. Fuller, who, since Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti were sentenced to death last Saturday, has been receiving communications urging clemency or further investigation from several continents, today announced that he had postponed consideration of the case until the Legislature ends its session. He anticipated the Legislature would adjourn shortly.

Fourteen members of the British Parliament, in a cablegram received yesterday, aligned themselves with 22 others who had previously demanded the release of the two men, but the flood of letters reaching the Statehouse was no longer unanimous in sentiment, several received urging the Governor to make no move to save the two radicals.

The cablegram from the members of Parliament read:

"British members of Parliament emphatically protest against rejection of new trial and view with horror violation of justice committed in this case and demand withdrawal of death sentence and their immediate release.

"Purcell, Kenworthy, Compton, Saklatvala, Adamson, Lodge, Lindley, Edwards, Williams, Salter, Welch, Barr, Montague and Barker."

Representative Roland B. Sawyer's petition, which would put the lower house of the State Legislature on record as favoring the appointment of a commission to review the case, still remains in the hands of a committee with no hint as to when it will be acted on. Meanwhile, the defense committee's letter advocating a similar course has reached the Governor, and 10,000 circulars urging petitions for clemency have been put in the mails.

Prof. Warren K. Moorehead of Phillips Andover Academy, Collins Cram, vice president of the National Surety Co. of New York, and Attorney Jesse D. Crook of Boston each has written the Governor urging him to take no action..

The Swedish Social Democratic Labor party and the Socialistic parliamentary faction of Switzerland today were added to the many organizations and individuals in foreign countries who have appealed to Gov. Fuller. Domestic protests against the sentence included one signed by President Mary E. Wooley and 51 members of the faculty of Mount Holyoke College.

Jane Addams Likens Sacco-Vanzetti Case to Dreyfuss Affair.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, April 13.—The Sacco-Vanzetti case was compared to the Dreyfuss affair in a letter sent to Gov. Fuller of Massachusetts today by Miss Jane Addams, social worker, and her associates in the Illinois branch of the Woman's International League.

The letter states that thousands of persons in the United States and other parts of the world are convinced that the verdict (condemning the Italian radicals Sacco and Vanzetti to death in Massachusetts as murderers) "did not rest solely upon the submitted evidence but is an example of the unfairness that is inevitable when an individual is judged not by his own acts but upon his group and racial affiliations which are grossly misunderstood."

Many held that prejudice inspired the conviction of the Jewish Capt. Dreyfuss in France in the last century.

FORD FAILS TO GET RIGHT TO INSPECT SAPIRO'S BOOKS

Reed Demanded It in Order He Said, to Show Exorbitant Fees Were Charged Farmers.

By the Associated Press.

DETROIT, Mich., April 13.—Henry Ford's attorneys and counsel for Aaron Sapiro in his $1,000,000 libel suit against the motor manufacturer, battled at length today over Ford's demand to be allowed to inspect Sapiro's records of income, and Ford counsel lost.

At the end of a long argument in the absence of the jury, Federal Judge Fred M. Raymond decided that he would not issue an order giving the Ford counsel the right of access to the books which have been in the courtroom daily, but would trust to the opposing attorneys to agree upon a time and place for an inspection of the books. They cover the period of 1917-1924, inclusive.

For 12 days Senator Reed of Missouri, chief of Ford counsel, has cross-examined Sapiro in an effort to establish the amounts and manners of fees obtained as legal counsel for farmers he organized into co-operative selling associations.

The defense explained in an affidavit that it wished to have the right to examine Sapiro's books because, it asserted, Sapiro's fees were in some instances exorbitant and that he failed to continue to collect fees from co-operatives because his fees were unreasonably high and not because of the alleged libels.

It became known that upon two occasions the books had been opened to a Ford accountant, Ansel F. Hosmer, but that he and Milton D. Sapiro, brother of the plaintiff, who carried the books from San Francisco, and in whose possession they remained, has been unable to make progress in eliciting data for Ford's use.

Hosmer made an affidavit charging obstructive tactics by Milton Sapiro, who in turn made one denying Hosmer's statement.

Aaron Sapiro made an affidavit that the books were not under his control and had not been since he had ceased practicing law in San Francisco, Dec. 31, 1924. His affidavit concludes by denying "that any exorbitant or unreasonable charges were made by plaintiff or any of his firms for any services."

Late yesterday Sapiro testified that he first became interested in Kentucky tobacco when he met Robert Bingham, publisher of the Louisville Courier-Journal and the Louisville Times, in the New York office of Bernard M. Baruch. Today Sapiro fixed the first meeting with Judge Bingham as "likely sometime in February, 1921."

Reed sought to introduce as evidence a long news story of a meeting at which Sapiro spoke, printed in the Courier-Journal of May 9, 1921.

Some of the jury got impatient while the Court, the witness and the attorneys in turn read the story and for the second time since the trial started Juror Amos Duart made his presence known vocally.

"May it please the Court, may the jury, or rather this juror suggest that "all of the article be read?" he asked.

Judge Raymond explained the rules of evidence to Duart and declared a recess so that the attorneys might agree on whether all or only excerpts of the article would be offered. The Judge then ruled he would permit all of the speech as quoted to be read but that his ruling should not be regarded as a precedent opening the record to other speeches.

Stewart Hanley of Ford counsel saved Senator Reed's voice by reading.

Gallagher's Offer.

William Henry Gallagher, chief of counsel for Sapiro, told the Court he did not resist the "privilege" to the Ford counsel to inspect the books, but they were, he said, demanding a "right" not granted by precedents, several of which he cited.

"The Court is disposed to leave the matter upon the statement of counsel for the plaintiff that facilities will be provided for examination of the books," ruled Judge Raymond.

The jury was recalled, and organization of the Kentucky Burley Tobacco Growers' Co-operative Association was taken up again.

ECHOES OF OPERATIC CRASH HEARD IN $104,000 SUIT

Singer Says Poster Company's Attachment Damaged Business and His Reputation.

The woes of a group of Italians who attempted to produce grand opera at the Odeon in March, 1924, were rehearsed today in Circuit Judge Killoren's court, where M. A. Rossini, singer and music teacher, is suing the St. Louis Poster Advertising Co. for $104,000 damages.

On the third night the opera was given the St. Louis Poster Advertising Co. sent a Deputy Sheriff to serve an attachment against the promoters of the show for $292, representing advertisements prepared by the poster company.

Rossini testified the appearance of Deputy Sheriff Julius Goldsmith injured business so much that only 150 persons attended on the fourth night and injured his reputation to the extent of $100,000. The extra $4000 represents what Rossini thinks he would have got in profits from the venture if the defendant had not interfered.

Deputy Sheriff Goldsmith testified he did not think his appearance injured the show. He thought he made as good an appearance as any of the actors. The defendant claims that it was entirely within its rights in collecting the unpaid bill and that Rossini was one of the promoters of the performance.

TEAPOT DOME APPEAL ARGUED IN SUPREME COURT

Sinclair Attacks Government Contention That Decision in Doheny Case Applies in This Suit.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, April 13.—The appeal of Harry F. Sinclair, to set aside the decision of the Circuit Court of Appeals cancelling his lease and contract on the Teapot Dome naval oil reserve, made while Albert B. Fall was Secretary of the Interior, was called for argument today in the Supreme Court.

In combating the decision by Judge Kenyon, of the Federad Circuit Court of Appeals, cancelling the lease on the ground of fraud, counsel for Sinclair contend that the Federal District and Circuit Courts found it was made to protect the reserve from drainage and that it was authorized by law. They hold this removed the case from the controlling effect of the Supreme Court decision in the case of canceling E. L. Doheny's leases on the Elk Hills naval reserve in California. The single question before the Supreme Court, they insist, is whether the Government had established fraud and corruption.

Special counsel for the Government contend that the case is controlled by the Doheny decision, and that the lease was invalid because it was made without authority of law as well as by fraud and corruption.

Sinclair and a party of friends were present when argument was begun.

Opening for Sinclair, John W. Lacey of Cheyenne, Wyo., asserted it had been agreed in the testimony of witnesses that the lease and contract was most favorable to the Government. It was necessary, he said, to take oil out of Teapot Dome to save it, because it was not possible, in the opinion of the Secretary of the Navy, to preserve it in the ground on account of drainage by outside wells.

Two lower courts found for Sinclair on all issues raised by the Government, Lacey argued, but the Circuit Court of Appeals had found against him on an issue not raised by the Government, that of bribery, and he insisted that the Circuit Court was not warranted in its finding of fraud and corruption by the evidence before it.

STATE POLICE SAY BIRGER GANGSTERS KILLED LORY PRICE

Seven Men and Two Women in Party Which Abducted Officer and Wife at Marion, Jan. 17.

CASE TO GRAND JURY AT NASHVILLE, ILL.

Investigators Believe Birger Aids Also Murdered Steve George and Three Others at "Shady Rest."

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

NASHVILLE, Ill., April 13.—The circumstances, as reconstructed by State Highway Police, of the abduction of State Patrolman Lory L. Price and his wife from their home in Marion Jan. 17 and the subsequent murder of Price, were learned today by the Post-Dispatch as the Washington County grand jury opened an investigation of the case here.

After three months' inquiry by six State highway policemen, the investigators have concluded that Price was abducted by members of the Birger gang, who believed he "knew too much," and not by the Shelton gang, as was originally supposed. While his body, riddled with machine-gun bullets, was found in a field near Dubois, in this county, on Feb. 5, his widow is still missing.

Under Chief John W. Stack of Kankakee, five other State highway policemen on detached duty have been at work on the case since the disappearance of Price and his wife was discovered on the morning of Jan. 18. When the officers arrived at Marion from various points they found that the Prices had disappeared after returning from a motion picture show. The telephone wires to their house in Marion had been cut, but there was no other evidence of violence. Some of Price's fellow townsmen expressed the opinion that the Shelton-Birger gang feud in Williamson County had got too hot for him and he had elected to leave the State, but police went to work on the theory that he had been abducted by gangsters and their conclusion was confirmed when his body was found.

Police Reconstruct Crime.

Without a clew, the policemen made a canvass of the Price neighborhood for such bits of informations as they could pick up. Later they arrested a former Birgre gangster into Ohio and smuggled him into Illinois without the formality of extradition and finally they gleaned some valuable information from another former Birger adherent and his wife. Piecing together the facts contained in the various statements made to them, the investigators reconstruct the story of the abduction and murder as follows:

Price had been a friend of Charlie Birger and his men. His motor cycle was frequently to be seen at "Shady Rest," Birger's fortified roadhouse, 10 miles east of Marion, and the policeman was known to feel at home there.

He had a failing, however, which was to prove fatal; he talked too much. He was friendly to various peace officers, particularly to Sheriff Coleman of Williamson County, and the Birger crowd began to fear that Price might tell Coleman some of their most cherished and most damaging secrets.

Price was one of the last persons to leave "Shady Rest" on the night of Jan. 8, when it was bombed and burned. Four persons, including Mrs. Steve George, the wife of the gang's "killer," lost their lives in the fire, and it now appears that the crime was committed by some of Birger's men, who were anxious to get George out of the way—for reasons explained later.

While investigators will not give out for publication the names of suspected Birger gangsters, they have concluded that seven Birger gunmen actually participated in the abduction of the policeman and his wife, and that two of the gangsters' wives helped to carry out the plans.

On the Wednesday (Jan. 12) after the destruction of "Shady Rest" the wives of two Birger gangsters visited Mrs. Price at her home and had dinner there. Ostensibly their mission was peaceful, but actually they were lookouts, "lacing things up" for the abductors.

On the following Sunday evening (Jan. 16) one of the same women visited Mrs. Price again, her excuse this time being the gift of three pairs of silk stockings which she presented to the policeman's wife. Had Price been home, the gangsters would have taken Price and his wife then.

While the gangster's wife was in the Price home, two automobiles circled the block, their gangster passengers apparently waiting for the signal to pull up in front of the Price home.

As it happened, however, Mrs. Price was at home alone. After learning that Price might be home late or not at all, the gangster's wife departed, and the plan was given up for that night.

Return Following Evening.

As it happened, however, Mrs. Price was at home alone. After learning that Price might be home late or not at all, the gangster's wife departed, and the plan was given up for that night.

Return Following Evening.

The following evening, however, the same machines were back in the neighborhood, five men in one and two in the other.

The telephone wires were cut as some of the party summoned Price to the door. Apparently he and his wife were persuaded to leave through some ruse, but it is also possible that Price was covered by the kidnapers' revolvers and forced to leave and that his wife also was forced to leave. Whatever the circumstances, there was no evidence that Price put up a fight before he left.

Whether Price was killed the night of the abduction or later has not yet appeared. Circumstances indicate, however, that the kidnapers finally decided to separate him and his wife, and the policeman, in desperation, put up a fight. It was then that he was machine-gunned to death. When his body was found it was apparent from its condition that he had been killed not long after the abduction.

The most baffling mystery now confronting the investigators is what became of Mrs. Price? There have been rumors that she has been killed, that she is in an Indiana insane asylum, her mind wrecked by the horror of her husband's murder, and that she is being guarded in an Indiana town, stupefied by drugs, by one of the slayers of her husband.

Mrs. Price Believed Slain.

It is the opinion of the investigators, however, that she has been killed. They point out that it would be extremely hazardous to the gangsters to permit her to live because of the incriminating evidence she would be in a position to give relative to her husband's murder.

The policemen working on the case—Chief Stack and Sergts. O'Keefe, C. W. Roth, J. Frank Nuckolls, C. McCracken, William M. Pilger—began their investigation on the theory that the abduction of the Prices was the work of the Shelton gang. However, after they had questioned the Birger gangster who is now one of their chief witnesses, they changed their view, and as circumstances developed they became convinced that their first position had been incorrect.

On information given by the Birger gangster they found Jack Crews, another Birger follower, in Akron, O. He was arrested there March 12 by local police and when Stack and his men arrived they unceremoniously bundled the gangster into an automobile, drove him through Indiana without extradition and lodged him in jail at Nashville.

Crews has done very little talking beyond admitting that the seven gangsters suspected of the murder were assembled at the home of one of their number the night before the abduction. The highway officers are still making an active search for three other Birger men.

Birger Volunteers Testimony.

So far the investigators have made no effort to question leaders of the Birger gang. Charlie Birger himself, and his lieutenant, Connie Ritter, voluntarily conferred with Stack and three of his men, several weeks ago, but the officers did not seek them out for interrogation.

Art Newman, once Birger's chief associate, but latterly a bitter enemy of the gang leader, has left this section of the country. Freddie Wooten, Newman's closest associate, is in Atlanta Penitentiary serving a sentence of a year and a day for interstate transportation of a stolen automobile.

During the investigation the officers came upon many circumstances indicating that Birger gangsters fired "Shady Rest." Chief among these is the fact that George, the caretaker there, was shortly to be sent to the penitentiary to serve an eight-year sentence, confirmed by the State Supreme Court.

There is some evidence that the gang feared George might break under prison discipline and lay bare the operations of its members, and that for this reason it was deemed best to get rid of him. Another consideration pointing to the same conclusion is that the Birger gang removed its arsenal from the roadhouse just before it was bombed, with the apparent intention of salvaging as much as possible.

3.55 INCHES OF RAIN SO FAR THIS MONTH

Fall 2.21 Above Normal—River Des Peres, Other Streams Again Overflow.

There has been a total of 3.55 inches of rainfall, 2.21 inches more than normal, during the first 13 days of this month, the Weather Bureau announced today. The normal figure for the full month is 3.52, so that the first 13 days have recorded more than the normal fall for the month.

Only nine-tenths of an inch fell during the 24 hours ending at 7 a. m. today, but the accumulation of almost constant rainfall for the past several days was sufficient to overflow the River des Peres once more, and inundate low areas in Forest Park and in South St. Louis.

Twelve families were driven from their homes in the vicinity of Mecklenburg avenue and Fairfield place last night by high water, but it receded after eight o'clock without doing any appreciable property damage. In Forest Park a few automobiles were stalled by high water on the low drives in the Municipal Theater section. As usual, the wooden block paving on Skinker road, west of Forest Park, was floated up by the rain.

On the East Side many roads were blocked by high water in the lowlands. Indian Lake, north of the East St. Louis highway subway was rising and threatening to cut off the Collinsville road. High water east of the Granite City road is momentarily threatening to overflow the pumping of the East Side Levee and Sanitary District and 40 men are at work today protecting the station with sandbag barriers.

Sandbags also are being laid along Collinsville road to cut off the Indian Lake overflow. Dog race fans last night drove their automobiles through four inches of water on the road which leads to the Madison County Kennel Club track.

The East Side situation has been aggravated by the fact that the high water in the Mississippi has necessitated the closing of flood gates to prevent it from backing up into the bottoms and, the result is that there is no outlet for water in the lowlands except that provided by the pumping stations which are working day and night.

Mississippi, Due to Heavy Rains, Again Above Flood Stage.

Heavy rains in Missouri and most of Illinois, which are predicted to continue, have raised the Mississippi and other rivers again, and the Mississippi reached 30.7 feet at St. Louis today, or .7 of a foot above flood stage, and will reach 32.8 by Friday night, covering levee railroad tracks.

At towns above and below St. Louis for some distance it is above flood stages and continuing to rise. Alton, with flood level of 21 feet, has 25.9 today and will get 27 by Friday, and Crafton, with flood mark 18, has 21.8 today and Friday's crest will be 22.5. On April 5 the Mississippi here was 31.1 and in April, 1922, it was 34, while the record, in 1844, was 41.4

DETECTIVE POSING AS CLERK TAKES CONFIDENCE MEN

Two Swindlers Arrested After Unfolding Their Scheme to Isaac M Brown in His Office.

By impersonating an office employe, seated before a desk at the Brown Machinery Co., 2323 North Ninth street, yesterday afternoon, Lieut. Elias Hoagland, former Chief of Detectives, heard two visitors unfold a $5000 confidence game, and arrested them.

Three years ago, Isaac M. Brown, president-treasurer of the firm, acting in behalf of a local improvement association, purchased fireworks from a young salesman. Yesterday morning the salesman renewed the acquaintance by telephone. He invited Brown to call at a downtown hotel to get in on the ground floor of a highly confidential and highly profitable proposition.

Detective Poses as Employe.

Brown refused, whereupon the man called in person at his office, accompanied by an older man, and explained the "proposition." Brown was suspicious. He excused himself for a moment and called Lieut. Hoagland. The latter, in civilian attire, hurried to Brown's office, and busied himself at a desk, as if he were an employe. Brown induced the visitors to repeat their "proposition."

The older man, so he said, was in a position to get confidential information sent over telegraph wires by Morgan & Co., and various stock brokers and race track operators. He was, he continued, an employe of a telegraph company's "distributing bureau" at Cleveland, through which the confidential information was relayed. He promised to withhold this information long enough for Brown to play the stocks and horses and profit accordingly. All he asked was that Brown draw $5000 from his bank, accompany his two "friends" to Cleveland, bet the $5000 on horses and stocks, on the basis of the telegraphed "tips," and share his profits—there could be no losses, of course—with his "friends."

Two Prisoners Confess.

Having heard this story, Lieut. Hoagland turned from his desk, and arrested the two callers, much to their surprise. The older man, Hoagland reported, had been introduced to Brown as William C. Simpson, but confessed that he is a "con" man, known also as Walter Simpson, W. C. Reed and Harry Stone, that his real name is Clyde Smith and that he is 40 years old and a native of Montgomery, Ala. He was stopping at Hotel Mayfair under the name of Reed. He had $1510.

The other man said he was Harry Peter Dupont, 26, a salesman, of 1705 North Grand boulevard. He said this was his first "job."

Warrants will be sought. Lieut. Hoagland says "Simpson" has been associated with an Atlanta, Ga., ring of confidence men, who specialized in swindling business men by fake stock speculations and race betting.

HELD FOR TWO MURDERS

Beer Runner Admits Killing Florida Man and Wife.

By the Associated Press.

MIAMI, Fla., April 13.—Clayton H. Collins, formerly of Detroit, Mich., is held for murder today as a result of his confession that he killed both Mr. and Mrs. Edward Nevers in their home, March 15, during a drunken brawl in which they quarreled over money.

Collins was brought to Miami last night from Memphis, Tenn., where he was arrested. He first told police he killed Nevers, his partner in a beer running business, but said that Nevers killed Mrs. Nevers first. Later he admitted that he killed both persons, declaring he wanted to plead guilty and get a quick trial.

FUNERAL OF CHARLES GASS

Belleville Man Shot by Robber Sunday Night.

Funeral services for Charles Gass, a former resident of Belleville, who was fatally wounded by a bullet wound inflicted by Cletus Bleisch, a robber, at Highland, Ill., Sunday night, will be held at the home of his brother, William Gass, 3325 Sylvia avenue, Belleville, tomorrow afternoon at 1:30 o'clock. The sermon will be preached by Rev. O. F. Pessel of St. Paul's Church and interment will be in Walnut Hill Cemetery.

Gass is survived by his widow, Mrs. Lettie Gass, three brothers and two sisters. Gass was born in Belleville.

JUSTICE PLACES WIFE'S VALUE AT 60 CENTS, CASH

British Judge Denies Husband's Plea for $1000 for Loss of Unfaithful Mate.

By the Associated Press.

LEEDS, England, April 13.—Action of Lord Hewart, Lord Chief Justice, in valuing a wife at 2 shillings sixpence (about 60 cents) has aroused much comment throughout this country.

It was an undefended divorce petition, the plaintiff having shown that his wife had been receiving attention from another man. The husband sought £200 ($1000) for the loss of his wife.

"I am asked, in the absence of a jury, to put a money value on the worth of this wife to her husband," remarked the Justice. "I award two shillings and sixpence."

INVENTOR OF HEATER LEAVES $150,000 ESTATE TO CHILDREN

James Wilson's Two Daughters and Son Will Share in Fortune Founded on Stove.

The will of James Wilson, 81 years old, inventor of a down-draft wood stove known as the Wilson Heater, was filed in Probate Court here yesterday, disposing of an estate estimated at $150,000. He bequeathed his property to his two daughters and a son—Miss Susan Gray Wilson of 6811 Kingsbury boulevard, Mrs. Catherine Long of Paducah, Ky., and James B. Wilson of Metropolis, Ill. Miss Susan Wilson was appointed executrix.

Mr. Wilson died in St. Louis last Saturday. He was president of the Wilson Stove and Manufacturing Co. of Metropolis, which business he started in this city in the early '90s at Seventh and Poplar streets. In 1907 the business was moved to Valley Park, St. Louis County, and 10 years later to its present site. While at Valley Park, Mr. Wilson established Lake Hill Park, an amusement resort. He was a large owner of stock in the Odeon Building until 1922, when he sold his interest to Henri Chouteau. He was a native of Scotland, where he learned the tinner's trade.

62 PERSONS DEAD, 150 INJURED, IN TEXAS TORNADO headed by Dr. W. A. King of San Antonio, were here to give aid. Fire Chief Sarran and Chief of Police Miller of San Antonio were with him.

Fire for a time this morning threatened to add to the tornado tragedy. The ruins of the postoffice and a restaurant were ignited and sent flames to the debris surrounding them. Efforts of the fire fighters were futile until rain ended the blaze.

Red Cross Headquarters in St. Louis Directs Tornado Relief.

The Midwestern branch of the American Red Cross, with headquarters in St. Louis, is directing relief work for the tornado-struck town of Rocksprings, Tex.

Telegrams were sent last night to all Red Cross chapters in Texas, asking for financial assistance for Rocksprings. Physicians and nurses have been sent there from San Antonio and Kerrville, Tex. Firemen, trained in first-aid methods, accompanied the San Antonio contingent. A staff headed by Arthur Shaw, field director of Fort Sam Houston, will proceed to Rocksprings to take charge of relief work.

William Baxter Jr., assistant to the vice chairman of the national organization, is directing operations from the St. Louis office.

Two Killed, Six Hurt and 50 Houses Wrecked at Fort Smith, Ark.

By the Associated Press.

FORT SMITH, Ark., April 13.—Two persons are known to be dead and six injured as the result of a tornado which struck Fort Smith late yesterday. The dead are: Miss T. L. Fuller and Mrs. S. T. Hester.

The injured: Mrs. L. B. McAleb and two small daughters, Jasper Stewart, a Mr. Anderson and Cleme Berry.

About 50 houses were wrecked and the roofs blown off many others. The storm moved from the southwest.

ELECTRICITY KILLS STUDENT

440 Volts Pass Through Ohio University Senior's Body.

By the Associated Press.

COLUMBUS, O., April 13.—Ira W. Miller, Delphos, O., senior in the college of electrical engineering at Ohio State University here, was electrocuted today while at work in the school laboratory.

Miller was working on an electrical test when he accidentally touched a cross terminal, which sent 440 volts of electricity through his body.

Woman Germ-Hunter Trying to Trace Source of Three Diseases

St. Vitus Dance, Rheumatism and Heart Disease Studied Here by Dr. Ervine-Jones, First to Hold Catlin Fellowship.

—By a Post-Dispatch Staff Photographer.

DR. EDITH ERVINE-JONES.

The answer and the end for three diseases, that twist the bodies or take the lives of thousands of children every year, may lie in one of the scores of test tubes in the laboratory of Dr. Edith Ervine-Jones, first Catlin research fellow at Children's Hospital.

With the traditional reticence of the scientist, Dr. Ervine-Jones is inclined to emphasize the "may." But her associates, although admitting that many quests into the same riddle have been in vain, are hopeful of her research. Against the failure of other workers, they balance promising preliminary work she has done here and elsewhere.

Her appointment announced Sunday, was made possible by a gift of $25,000 by Theron E. Catlin. The fellowship is to be maintained for the study of communicable disease. Dr. Ervine-Jones, a born in Scotland and a graduate of the University of Edinburgh, came here in September from the University of California, where she was a teacher.

Heart disease, St. Vitus' dance and rheumatism are the objectives of her attack. She is working on the possibility that they are caused by poisons given off by streptococcus infections in the throat and sinuses. That may lead also to disclosures on infections frequently called grip or flu, but not traceable to the germ which has been isolated in influenza.

How Germ Hunter Works.

"What we're looking for may be a single strain of streptococci, a combination of several strains, or it may not be a streptococcus at all," she said to a Post-Dispatch reporter. "Even the 'toxin' may not be the sort of thing we generally call that, such as the toxin of diphtheria."

Her task is to go through that vast range of possibilities one by one. In the way of tools provided here, "It's the best place to work in I ever saw," she says. "Everything you want right at your hand."

Dr. Ervine-Jones is checking the laboratory by the clinic—the microscope and test tube by actual cases under treatment. Adjoining the laboratory where she does her bacteriological work is another where she tries to measure the precise physical effects of the diseases. The clinic provides data on the inception and progress of the infection, on the contacts, for example, of two children in a family with apparently the same symptoms of rheumatism, as well as providing cultures for the laboratory.

Experiments on Herself.

From the throat or sinuses she obtains every different strain of streptococcus she can find in the diseases under scrutiny and plants each in its test tube, each identified so that she can check what the laboratory shows by all the available history of the case it came from. Each strain goes through a series of tests, including inoculation, for its actual reaction on a laboratory worker, frequently Dr. Ervine-Jones herself.

In those tests lies a chief departure from the work of others in the same field. Others have depended largely on the microscope; from patients with one of the diseases studied they took cultures of all the various streptococci found—some of them are present even in a normal throat; one they identified as present in all the cases studied, and so they judged it to be the one doing the damage. But different students described different streptococci, and gradually the work of each—hard and earnest though it might have been—was broken down.

But Dr. Ervine-Jones is studying every strain from every angle. From one of them she may—notwithstanding her emphasis on the "may"—find and stabilize a single serum that will free children of three diseases prolific of tragedy.

DRUNKEN DRIVER FINED $35

Edward Creedon Admitted Charge in Police Court.

Edward Creedon, a truck driver of 3973 Evans avenue, admitted today, contrary to the general custom, that he was intoxicated when he drove his truck up a dirt pile in front of 1847 O'Fallon street yesterday. Provisional Police Judge Stemmler let him go with the comparatively light fine of $35, with no workhouse sentence attached. He did not appeal.

Frank Fiede of 1523 Park avenue denied being intoxicated when his automobile struck a wagon on April 2. He was tried and found guilty by Judge Rosecan, fined $100 and sentenced to 30 days in the workhouse. Later he asked permission to plead guilty and the workhouse sentence was withdrawn.

'SUNKIST SIRENS' ARE IN SEA OF TROUBLE

Theatrical Nymphs Stranded, Agent Faces Warrant and Producer's Meals Bologna.

Cal LeVance's "Sunkist Sirens"—20 persons, mostly girls—are stranded at the St. Francis Hotel, and LeVance, who complains his daily diet is now bread and bologna, is out for the scalp of Edward M. Allen, theatrical promoter, of the Woodbine Hotel.

Allen conceived the idea of a 20 weeks' run at the Marshall Theater, 7410 Manchester avenue, Maplewood. LeVance and his troup trod the boards there for three days, beginning April 2, whereupon Allen proffered a slender roll of bills and announced, "I'm through."

LeVance took his troubles to the Prosecuting Attorney, frankly admitting he wanted revenge. Assistant Prosecuting Attorney Fania obliged this morning with a warrant charging Allen with operating a business under a fictitious name without registering it with the Secretary of State.

The basis of the complaint is that Allen was the Midwest Theatrical Exchange, with offices in the Gem Theater Building, where LeVance went recently, seeking a contract for his troop. According to LeVance, Allen contracted with him for 20 weeks at $525 a week, and also contracted to pay $100 a week rent for the Marshall Theater.

"We put on a good show Saturday, Sunday and Monday," LeVance related, "but nobody much came to see it. Then Allen handed me $60 and told me he was through. My company has been stranded ever since. We can't pay our hotel bill, and we've had nothing to eat this week but bread and sausage."

At the Woodbine, Allen gave a somewhat different version. "LeVance told me his gang was trained in seven different shows," he declared. "They put one on Saturday and it was rotten. The audience—we had a pretty good crowd—booed and hissed, and I told him to try a different line Sunday night. He put on the same show and I found out it was the only one he had. Monday night I paid his $90 and quit. It was all they were worth."

LIQUOR SEIZED IN SALOON RAID

When Detective-Sergeant Coakley and his rum squad discovered a secret hiding place for a pint and a half of whisky in a saloon at 3101 Lawton boulevard yesterday, the bartender handed him a key and told him the rest was in a rear room. In the room Coakley reported finding 110 pints of liquor and 300 empty whisky bottles. The bartender, Louis Bignani, 24, was arrested.

TARIFF WILL BE BIG ISSUE IN 1928, F. J. GARRETT SAYS

Democratic House Leader, Here to Address Jefferson Club Tonight, Discusses Party's Problems.

CONGRESSMAN FINIS J. GARRETT.

Congressman Finis J. Garrett of Tennessee, minority leader of the House, here to address the Young Democrats' Jefferson Club at its dinner at Hotel Jefferson tonight, sees the tariff as a certain issue, and farm relief and foreign policy as possible issues, of the 1928 campaign.

While he met many of Senator Reed's supporters during the day, Garrett said he had not determined how large a strength the Reed presidential boom has in the nation at large. As to Gov. Al Smith, he said that Smith, if nominated, would carry the dependably Democratic States, but might lose votes in some close States, usually Democratic.

"The Democrats will insist," he said, "that tariff revision lies at the basis of any substantial and permanent plan of farm relief. It is impossible to tell now just how much prominence the farm relief issue will have. This year's prices on farm products will make a difference as to that. The farm relief measures, up to this time, have not been partisan measures, but the Democratic position on the tariff is fundamentally for the farmers' welfare.

"Prohibition is not likely to be an issue between the parties," he said. "It has not been a party question in the past, in Congress or the state Legislatures.

"I believe the next campaign will emphasize the revival of respect for local self-government, which has been forgotten in the mad rush toward Washington for things that could be done as well or better through state and local governments.

"Foreign policy is not usually a party question, but a deplorable condition has arisen, and something must be done. The development, or lack of development, of our foreign policy in the last six years has left this country without a friend in the world."

Congressman Garrett, United States Senator Harry B. Hawes and Congressman George H. Combs Jr. of Kansas City, 28 years old, youngest member of the House, are the chief speakers scheduled for the dinner.

The dinner is held on Thomas Jefferson's birthday, and Congressman Garrett, in his speech, will discuss the principles of Jefferson and Alexander Hamilton, in their own times and as developed into the governmental policies and party differences of today. A large attendance is expected at the dinner, tickets for which are obtainable at the clerk's desk of the Jefferson.

Nerves!

That one word explains why a strong healthy stenographer can be completely fagged by three o'clock. She blames her chair, the light, or the unusual press of work. But it's nerves.

The delicate sensory nerves in her finger-tips must take the brunt of 50,000 shocks a day—a steady drain on her nervous energy that is more fatiguing than hard physical labor.

If your stenographer suffers from afternoon fatigue, let her try an L C Smith. It's the one standard typewriter that does not recoil against the finger-tips, because its keys never touch bottom. Ball-bearings throughout give it a smooth and easy action that leaves the operator fresh after hours of steady typing.

You invest many hundreds of dollars a year in your stenographer. Give her the machine that keeps her fresh and fast and accurate.

ARMOUR GRAIN CO. SUSPENDED FROM BOARD OF TRADE

Order Against Largest Grain Trading Concern in World Due to Collapse of Cooperative Organization

OFFICERS TO FACE BOARD TRIAL LATER

Committee Says "Acts of Dishonesty" Were Committed by Persons in Employ of Armour.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, April 13.—The Armour Grain Co., the world's largest grain trading corporation, has been ordered suspended from the Chicago Board of Trade under charges of dishonest acts.

The concern has sold as high as 5,000,000 bushels of cash wheat in a day.

Privileges of the company as to trading through the board were ordered removed, effective Saturday.

No officers of the grain company have been suspended, but the Board of Trade directorate in its statement last night said the officers would be brought to trial later. John Kellogg, president of the company, said the concern has no statement to make concerning the suspension "at this time."

Two-Year Investigation.

It was the result of two years of investigation by the Board of Trade into the organization and subsequent wrecking of the grain marketing company, an ostensible co-operative enterprise formed.

Farmers, however were apathetic toward the corporation which after a year was dissolved. There followed charges by the Rosenbaum Grain Co. that the Armour Co. had falsified its records "and deliberately set forth to cheat the grain marketing company."

An arbiter, after a year's investigation, assessed damages of $2,700,000 against the Armour Grain Co., principally in favor of the Rosenbaum Grain Co. and the Rosenbaum Brothers Co., which were in the co-operative company.

The arbiter held that the Armour Grain Co. had mixed inferior grain and turned it in as grain of higher quality when the Grain Marketing Co. was formed.

Publicity attending the organization and dissolution of the grain marketing company prompted the State inquiry which within the last fortnight has produced testimony which it was indicated caused the board to announce the suspension now although its investigation still is under way.

Report of Committee.

"The testimony," said the Board of Trade committee, "clearly shows wrongful acts for which we deem the Armour Grain Co. responsible, since these acts were those of persons then in the employ or under the continuing influence of the Armour Grain Co. Several persons engaged in these wrongful acts are not members of the Board of Trade or subject to its discipline. These acts were such as to constitute major offenses, being acts of dishonesty.

"As under Board of Trade rules corporations may not become members, but may enjoy certain privileges through the Board of Trade memberships of certain executive officers, the provision is wisely made that such executive officers become responsible to the Board of Trade for acts of the corporation whether or not such individuals are personally guilty of wrongdoing.

"Pending the outcome of trial of officers of the Armour Grain Co., who are to be held accountable under the rules, this committee recommends that all privileges which the Armour Grain Co. now enjoys under the rules, be withdrawn. Our reason for this is that the conduct of the Armour Grain Co. has had wide publicity and has tended manifestly to impair the dignity and good name of the association, and the continuance of privileges to the Armour Grain Co. tends further to impair such good name."

While the grain company still retains the Armour name, members of the Armour family of packers have not been in active control for some time. The family is said to own about 85 per cent of the stock.

$1,300,000 ESTATE IN TRUST

Payments to Edward Hillman's Son Discretionary With Trustees.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, April 13.—Under terms of the will of Edward Hillman, founder of a large department store, the trustees of the estate may at their own discretion withhold payments to his son, Edward Hillman Jr.

"I have observed that the possession of large sums of money by an inexperienced young man is likely to bring ruin," he said in the will. The trustees may also at their discretion pay to the son parts of the principal. The widow and the son are to share equally in the income of the $1,300,000 estate after certain bequests are made.

SHIPPERS WILL ASK MAYOR ABOUT BRIDGE

Conference Wants to Know His Plans for Municipal Span Southern Approach.

The St. Louis Shippers' Conference Association, comprising traffic managers and other representatives of 167 shippers, meeting at the Annex Hotel yesterday, voted to have its officers and directors arrange a meeting with Mayor Miller as soon as possible, to learn the Mayor's plans about construction of the southern approach of the Municipal Bridge.

This association wants the southern approach erected as soon as possible, to permit the Manufacturers' Railway and Missouri Pacific Railroad to connect with the Alton & Southern, an East Side switching line, and put the bridge to work serving industries. The association has not taken a position on the general question of exchange of uses of the Municipal and Eads bridges. The sense of yesterday's meeting was to make it known emphatically that the traffic managers wanted a voice in the terminal discussion, as spokesmen of the interests most vitally affected, and as experts on the subjects.

Too many amateurs have been trying to settle the problem, some members said at the meeting. A motion was passed also to request City Counselor Muench to advise the association how an ordinance calling for construction of the southern approach may be originated and what public officials would be responsible for handling it. One member said he was advised that the Mayor, who is preparing a new bridge ordinance understood to call for utilization of the bridge on the user basis, was including provision for this approach. The 1923 bond issue gave $1,500,000 for building it.

There was a general discussion of complaints that the Terminal Railroad is slow in moving freight cars through the St. Louis switching district under some circumstances. One traffic man told of trying to route cars from the East over the Pennsylvania Railroad and the Alton & Southern, thence to St. Louis via the Missouri Pacific's East Carondelet ferry, but said he was informed this would force the Pennsylvania to absorb an additional charge of $6.35 per car over the cost of crossing the river by bridge via the Terminal. The association will investigate this situation.

GYPSY CAMP CELEBRATION BROKEN UP BY DETECTIVES

Light-Fingered Trio and 13 Others Arrested as Suspects in Robberies.

The gala day atmosphere of the gypsy camp at 8609 South Broadway, the spot selected for the annual reunion, was somewhat marred today by the appearance of detectives, who arrested 16 men and women of their number suspected of robberies committed recently in Illinois.

Voluble protestations of innocence greeted the detectives when their mission was announced and one shrewd young woman snatched up a child and held it tightly when they arrested her, relying on their respect for motherhood for immunity. Later it was discovered the infant did not belong to her.

At police headquarters, Fred Schroder, owner of a gasloine filling station at Eighty-eighth and State streets, East St. Louis, identified two women and one man as the trio who took his purse while he was giving them gasoline yesterday. He discovered the loss and they returned the purse, but later he found $30 had been removed from it. They are being held for extradition. At Duquoin, Ill., members of the same band, traveling in expensive automobiles, were forced to return $70 stolen from persons there under the pretence of fortune telling.

TWO MEN BRAVE BULLETS TO SEIZE $200,000 LIQUOR CARGO

Capture 1600-Ton Freighter at Hoboken, N. J., and Two Members of Its Crew.

By the Associated Press.

HOBOKEN, N. J., April 13.—Two customs officers today captured the 1600-ton freighter Fort Gaines at the Fletcher dry dock here, seizing its cargo of 4000 cases of Scotch whisky, Holland gin and champagne valued roughly at $200,000.

Two members of the crew were caught, the rest escaping under cover of bullets from a .32 caliber gun mounted on the freighter's deck which raked the two small customs launches as they raced into the dock.

TRIES TO END LIFE WITH AX

Man Gashes Back of His Neck in Noonday Darkness.

Thomas Volsac, a lawyer, of 7414 Lohmeyer avenue, Maplewood, attempted to commit suicide with an ax yesterday about 12:15 o'clock, when a heavy rain cloud obscured the sun and caused darkness throughout St. Louis County. He ran to the cellar of his home, seized the ax and managed to strike himself three times on the back of the neck, cutting gashes. After the third blow, he ran upstairs screaming for help from neighbors. He was taken to city hospital for observation. His son, Clarence, was at school, and his wife, Amelia, was at work. He is expected to recover from the ax wounds.

LIQUOR CASE REVERSED ON JUDGE'S COMMENT

U. S. Appelate Court Says Oklahoma Jurist Virtually Ordered Verdict of Guilty.

The United States Circuit Court of Appeals, in a decision here yesterday in an Oklahoma liquor case, took judicial notice of demands in and out of Congress that the Federal Judges' privilege of commenting on the evidence be restricted or revoked. The Court of Appeals reiterates its condemnation of abuse of that privilege. It reminds trial Judges that they should not attempt to "lead jurors by their noses."

The opinion, written by Circuit Judge Lewis and concurred in by Circuit Judge Kenyon and District Judge Trieber, says that commenting on evidence is a "helpful function of the court, but can be abused."

"Because of abuse, it may be restricted or taken away, as has been proposed," the opinion continues.

"It is said that the Judge is not a mere moderator, that he must see to it that there is no miscarriage of justice, but with equal truth it may be said that jurors have an important and independent duty. They are not to be led by their noses, nor by argument persuaded to accept the Court's estimate of the facts.

"Every juror in this case must have known that the Court fully expected him to return a verdict of guilty, as much so as if he had been expressly directed to do so."

Holding thus, the Court of Appeals reversed the convictions of Marcelle Smith and J. L. Ostrom of Slick, Ok., and remanded the case for retrial. They were under sentence of two years in prison, having been found guilty by a jury in Federal Court at Tulsa, of selling whisky.

District Judge Kennamer, the trial judge, is criticised by the Court of Appeals for abusing his privilege of comment in instructing the jury. Two Government witnesses had testified they had bought whisky from Ostrom and Marcelle Smith at a hotel by the woman. The defendants contradicted the testimony. Judge Kennamer instructed the jury:

"Now, gentlemen, the way the evidence strikes me, these people (Ostrom and Smith) were in the whisky business down there at the hotel."

Judge Kennamer added that the jury might view the evidence differently, but said he believed the chief witness for the Government had told the truth, as the witness had not shown ill will or malice toward the defendants.

POLICEMAN SCORES 294 OUT OF 300 WITH REVOLVER

Patrolman Frank Evans Has Held Title of Best Marksman in Department 5 Years.

Holding a commanding lead with a score of 294 points of a possible total of 300, Patrolman Frank Evans is almost certain of remaining the best revolver marksman in the Police Department, a title he has held four times in the last five years.

The tournament opened yesterday at the pistol range at Laclede Avenue Station and will end tomorrow. One hundred and fifty-one policemen who qualified as experts by averaging 255 points or better in an elimination contest are participating. The entrants take 20 shots at stationary targets and 10 shots at a moving target, all targets being 36 feet distant.

A gold medal is awarded the tournament winner, and silver and bronze medals are awarded holders of second and third place. Last year Evans, who is now an assistant instructor at the range, won the contest with a score of 279. His score this year is considered remarkable by his superior officers.

FAST TRAIN FLAGGED WHEN BOYS FIND TRESTLE WEAKENED

Four Youths Credited With Averting Wreck on Rock Island at River des Peres.

A desire to loiter near railroad tracks, despite warnings of parents and police, averted a possible wreck of the fast Rock Island train No. [illegible] a week ago Sunday at the River des Peres trestle, west of De Baliviere avenue, it was learned yestrday.

Jack Barry, 12 years old, of 319 Rosedale avenue; John Farrell, 12, 6218 Waterman avenue; Dolor Murray, 12, 6124 Pershing avenue, and Edward Gund, 12, 280 Skinker road, were exploring the rising river in the vicinity of the Rock Island trestle. They noticed that piling at the west end of the trestle had weakened and informed F. F. Bitler, ticket agent at the De Baliviere avenue station of the Rock Island.

Train No. 40, Colorado flyer, was flagged and delayed for 40 minutes at the scene while emergency repairs were made.

Date of Easter Sunday Determined by the Moon

Easter is a movable feast and cannot be earlier than March 22d nor later than April 25th, the date being governed by the old Paschall lunar month.

Easter begins the season of much entertaining, and now is an opportune time to check up home needs. The Prufrock-Litton Furniture Company, Fourth and St. Charles streets invite you to visit their store this week during their sale of bedroom furniture.

Select a bedroom suite this week and save as much as one-third!

Scotland first!

The Magic Word for Travel

From Paris to Samarkand, from Egypt to Bombay: travel thrills, I've had them all!

So now this year I'm not surprised to learn that Scotland is the magic word to those who are in the travel-know.

Scotland—with its legends of rugged charm—still full of the flavor of medieval gallantry.

Jolly, isn't it, to see legend turned into fact; to find chivalry in the rich words of those who serve you?

And this during the crossing, mind you, before you set foot on Scottish soil—aboard wonderful new ships and in an atmosphere as thoroughly friendly as the Scotland you're anticipating. It costs less, too!

ED. HOWE'S DAUGHTER WRITES PRIZE NOVEL

"Rebellion" Is Its Name and It Is Based on Father's "Story of Country Town."

By Leased Wire from the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, April 13.—Mrs. Mateel Howe Farnham, daughter of Ed Howe, Kansas editor, author and philosopher, entered the literary world in her own right yesterday.

It was announced that from approximately 1500 manuscripts of "first novels" entered in a recent prize competition, in which Dodd, Mead & Co., the Pictorial Review and First National Pictures, Inc., participated, hers has been selected as the best.

Her book is said to be a modern version of "The Story of a Country Town," by which her father first won note as an author. It is entitled "Rebellion."

She will receive more than $10,000 as a special prize and royalties. "Rebellion" will be published in the Pictorial Review beginning in August and in book form by Dodd, Mead & Co. in November.

Through the dissent of First National Pictures Inc. she will not receive the full prize of $16,500 announced for the winner of the competition. It was said yesterday by Curtis Brown, who organized the contest, that the film company did not feel that for its purposes "Rebellion" was the best manuscript submitted.

However, if her book approaches the success of the "Wild Geese" of Martha Ostenso, which won the first of these competitions in 1925, Mrs. Farnham will profit to the extent of at least $50,000.

Mrs. Farnham has been married more than 16 years to Dwight T. Farnham, consulting industrial engineer.

She said she had been writing, off and on, for 20 years, and had published several of her short stories and one serial story. She is already well into another novel.

"'Rebellion,'" she said, "is the story of a girl in revolt against her parents."

Except in a general way, she added, it is not autobiographical. Mrs. Farnham has no children. But she said, she tried to treat the parents as sympathetically as the rebellious girl in her novel.

SEEK REPEAL OF NO-PARKING RULE ON GRAND BOULEVARD

Business Men Organize Association to Urge One-Hour Privilege in Effect Downtown.

To combat the no-parking ordinance which affects Grand boulevard between Laclede and Easton avenues, a group of Grand boulevard business men yesterday organized the Grand Avenue Improvement Association. Contending that the ordinance has proved disastrous to business in that section, the association will ask the Board of Aldermen to change it to the one-hour rule which prevails downtown.

Edward Mays, president of the Grand National Bank, was elected president of the association; Joseph Darst, real estate dealer, vice president, and J. A. Guhl, secretary-treasurer.

DOCTOR'S SON HURT BY AUTO

Louis Alexander, six-year-old St. Louis boy, who suffered a fractured skull in an automobile accident near Yarmouth, Mass., Monday afternoon, is the son of Dr. Joseph Alexander, a member of the medical staff of Barnes Hospital and associate professor of medicine at Washington University.

Dr. Alexander left St. Louis yesterday for Boston, where the child is at a hospital. Louis was riding with his mother in an automobile when she lost control of the car and ran into a telephone pole.

INITIATIVE PLANNED FOR ROAD BOND VOTE

Missouri Auto Club to Circulate Petitions for $120,000,000 Issue.

Initiative petitions calling for an election in the State for a $120,000,000 bond issue to carry on the State road program are to be circulated by the Automobile Club of Missouri. About 50,000 signatures will be required. Gov. Baker may be asked to call a special election when the petitions are completed, or the vote may be called for at the general election of November, 1928.

Failure of the House to pass a similar bond-issue proposal passed by the Senate in the recent legislative sessions means that unless the issue is obtained by initiative action the road program will be on the pay-as-you-go basis, supported by the gasoline tax and motor license fees, which will retard completion of the system. Interest and principal of the bonds would be met from the same revenue sources, but construction would be much faster.

The proposal in the Legislature, which likely will be followed in the initiative plan, was that $60,000,000 of the money be used to complete the existing 7640-mile system of highways and the rest be apportioned among the 114 counties and the city of St. Louis, in proportion to automobile registration, for building permanent feeders to the State roads and reconstructing main streets in St. Louis and Kansas City.

STOLE CHICKENS ALL WINTER TO SUPPORT HIS FAMILY

Cackling Hen in Basket Leads to Arrest of Farmer in Street Car in County.

Henry Bartlett, [illegible] years old, a tenant farmer living a mile northwest of Valley Park, confessed yesterday he had supported his wife and three children during the winter by stealing [illegible] chickens in Valley Park, Kirkwood, Maplewood, Oakland, Richmond Heights and outlying districts of St. Louis County.

He made the mistake of picking Webster Groves for his operations last night. First he visited the hen house of E. M. McGarry but was frightened away. Then he lifted eight Rhode Island Reds from the roost of W. A. Sprague, put them in a basket and boarded a street car. A fellow passenger, Fred Stickney, special policeman of Glendale, heard a cackle from the basket, and arrested Bartlett.

BOARD REJECTS THREE TEACHERS MADDOX SELECTED

Breach Between Committee on Instruction and the Superintendent Again Becomes Apparent.

HITCH OVER POLICY IN APPOINTMENTS

Members of Board to Insist That Residents of St. Louis Be Given Preference Over Outsiders.

The breach between the Committee on Instruction of the Board of Education and the Superintendent of Schools in the appointment of teachers again became apparent at last night's board meeting, when the committee declined to approve three appointments by the superintendent. As usual, the board followed the committee recommendation.

The appointments were three teachers for intermediate schools. Myrt A. Rollins inquired of the chairman of the committee, Arthur A. Blumeyer, the reason for the committee action. Blumeyer replied that the three were nonresidents of St. Louis. He said the committee believed that the superintendent should appoint St. Louis residents as teachers in preference to "outsiders."

Statement of Maddox.

Asked to comment, following the meeting, Superintendent Maddox said: "Our department has devised a method of scoring applicants for teaching positions which we believe to be more exact and fair than any heretofore employed. It includes written and oral examination and a marking upon the basis of educational preparation. My policy in appointments is to recommend for any vacancy that applicant who ranks highest under the scoring. I take no cognizance of whether the teacher is resident or nonresident. The end sought is to get the best qualified teacher. All things being equal, of course, a St. Louis teacher wolud get preference." He noted that of 30 appointments recommended at last night's meeting, 24 were St. Louis residents. Of the six "outsiders," three were men and three women. The committee approved the apopintment of the men and rejected the women.

The committee declined to approve, also, the recommendation that Walter D. Cocking, director of curriculum and supplies, be given a year's leave of absence, beginning next autumn, to accept a fellowship from Columbia University. The committee understood that the fellowship included $2000, presumably for expenses while in attendance at the university, and later expenses for Cocking to go to Europe for an inspection of schools in several large cities.

Argument as to Cocking.

In response to an inquiry by Rollins, Blumeyer stated that the committee believed that Cocking should resign and later apply for reappointment. President-elect Weidle, who last night was elected to succeed Stephen A. Wagner, defeated in last week's election, said after the meeting that he thought that Cocking wanted leave to prepare himself for taking a position elsewhere and that hence the leave should not be granted.

Superintendent Maddox said that the offer to Cocking was an unusual honor. He referred to an action of the board last year in amending its rules to permit teachers in the schools to have leaves of absence for further study without loss of the annual increase in salary to which teachers are entitled. Leaves for this purpose are commonly granted by the board, he said. He could not understand why exception was made in Cocking's case. It was reasonable to suppose, he said, that Cocking's usefulness to the schools would be greatly improved by his study.

Cocking occupies one of the executive positions created by the superintendent's reorganization plan which was opposed by a minority of the board and supported by the majority which now is harassing Maddox. Some members predict the early development of a unique situation—that the majority, who originally supported Supt. Maddox, soon would attack some of his appointees under the plan, if not the entire plan, and that the minority which opposed the superintendent would, in that event, be lined up behind him.

New Members Sworn In.

In that event, the alignment of the new members sworn in last night will be watched with interest. They are Arthur S. Werremeyer, Dr. David C. Todd and Henry P. Schroeder. Rollins was reelected. Their terms are six years.

Rollins gave notice that he interpreted his defeat of Wagner as public approval of his demand for open committee meetings. Most discussions that illuminate board actions occurs in committee meetings which are closed to the public. Board meetings usually are mere ratification of committee action and their significance usually is not apparent to persons attending board meetings. Rollins said that he would continue his fight to have committee meetings thrown open.

Blumeyer, in a statement to the board, declared that the board should reply to the campaign statement of the Citizens' School Board Committee that "something was wrong in the schools" and that they were deteriorating. He said: "I am sure that members who were indorsed by that organization do not subscribe to that statement." Werremeyer, Dr. Todd and Rollins were the members referred to. They did not say whether they did or did not subscribe to the statement. President-elect Weidle suggested that the motion of Blumeyer lie over and indicated that he thought the heat engendered by last week's campaign might, by that time, have subsided.

Blumeyer yas elected vice president of the Board.

GUARD THE DANGER LINE WHERE TEETH MEET GUMS

THERE have always been contradictory claims as to what is really proper oral hygiene. E. R. Squibb & Sons felt certain that their warning to guard The Danger Line from acids was correct in every way. But they thought that in view of the confusion the public should receive official advice.

So Squibb caused an investigation to be made throughout the entire dental profession. And the answers—the expression of the only existing authority on the matter—constitute a warning that no one can afford to overlook. 95% of the answers received agree that:

(1) Acids most frequently cause tooth decay and irritated gums.

(2) The trouble that occurs at the place where teeth and gums meet—The Danger Line—is the most serious and difficult to control.

(3) The best product known to neutralize acids in the mouth is Milk of Magnesia.

These statements remove all doubt as to the correct way to protect the teeth and gums.

Squibb's Dental Cream, because it is made with more than 50% of Squibb's Milk of Magnesia, can do this. Each time you brush your teeth, tiny particles of the Milk of Magnesia are forced into all the pits and crevices where acids can form. There they remain for a long while, neutralizing any acids that may form.

Squibb's Dental Cream is on sale at all druggists — 40c a large tube.

After Years of Bad Health North Carolina Woman Experienced Great Relief From Taking Black-Draught.

Gastonia, N. C.—Mrs. Mary Crawford, who lives in this town, says: "I was in bad health for several years. Nothing I ate agreed with me. After each meal I had bad gas pains, caused from gas on my stomach. My color was sallow. I complained a lot and was very nervous.

"Most of my trouble came from constipation, but I did not realize this until I was real sick. I let it run on, hoping for the best.

"One day I read about Black-Draught in the Ladies' Birthday Almanac. I had known of it for years, but had never used it. I thought it might help me, so I got a box to try. I started taking a small dose after each meal.

"In a very short time I could see that I was better; I slept better and could eat without being disturbed by gas pains. I no longer had the sick headaches.

"I experienced such great relief after taking Black-Draught, that I keep it in the house all the time now. "When I begin to feel dull and sluggish, and get constipated, I take a dose or two, and the next day I am feeling fine."

STOLE CHICKENS ALL WINTER TO SUPPORT HIS FAMILY

Cackling Hen in Basket Leads to Arrest of Farmer in Street Car in County.

Henry Bartlett, 51 years old, a tenant farmer living a mile northwest of Valley Park, confessed yesterday he had supported his wife and three children during the winter by stealing 250 chickens in Valley Park, Kirkwood, Maplewood, Oakland, Richmond Heights and outlying districts of St. Louis County.

He made the mistake of picking Webster Groves for his operations last night. First he visited the hen house of E. M. McGarry but was frightened away. Then he lifted eight Rhode Island Reds from the roost of W. A. Sprague, put them in a basket and boarded a street car. A fellow passenger, Fred Stickner, special policeman of Glendale, heard a cackle from the basket, and arrested Bartlett.

BOARD REJECTS THREE TEACHERS MADDOX SELECTED

Breach Between Committee on Instruction and the Superintendent Again Becomes Apparent.

Members of Board to Insist That Residents of St. Louis Be Given Preference Over Outsiders.

The breach between the Committee on Instruction of the Board of Education and the Superintendent of Schools in the appointment of teachers again became apparent at last night's board meeting, when the committee declined to approve three appointments by the superintendent. As usual, the board followed the committee recommendation.

The appointments were three teachers for intermediate schools. Myrt A. Rollins inquired of the chairman of the committee, Arthur A. Blumeyer, the reason for the committee action. Blumeyer replied that the three were nonresidents of St. Louis. He said the committee believed that the superintendent should appoint St. Louis residents as teachers in preference to "outsiders."

Statement of Maddox.

Asked to comment, following the meeting, Superintendent Maddox said: "Our department has devised a method of scoring applicants for teaching positions which we believe to be more exact and fair than any heretofore employed. It includes written and oral examination and a marking upon the basis of educational preparation. My policy in appointments is to recommend for any vacancy that applicant who ranks highest under the scoring. I take no cognizance of whether the teacher is resident or nonresident. The end sought is to get the best qualified teacher. All things being equal, of course, a St. Louis teacher wolud get preference." He noted that of 30 appointments recommended at last night's meeting, 24 were St. Louis residents. Of the six "outsiders," three were men and three women. The committee approved the apopintment of the men and rejected the women.

The committee declined to approve, also, the recommendation that Walter D. Cocking, director of curriculum and supplies, be given a year's leave of absence, beginning next autumn, to accept a fellowship from Columbia University. The committee understood that the fellowship included $2000, presumably for expenses while in attendance at the university, and later expenses for Cocking to go to Europe for an inspection of schools in several large cities.

Argument as to Cocking.

In response to an inquiry by Rollins, Blumeyer stated that the committee believed that Cocking should resign and later apply for reappointment. President-elect Weidle, who last night was elected to succeed Stephen A. Gastonia, N. C.—Mrs. Mary Crawford, who lives in this town, says: "I was in bad health for several years. Nothing I ate agreed with me. After each meal I had bad gas pains, caused from gas on my stomach. My color was sallow. I complained a lot and was very nervous.

"Most of my trouble came from constipation, but I did not realize this until I was real sick. I let it run on, hoping for the best.

"One day I read about Black-Draught in the Ladies' Birthday Almanac. I had known of it for years, but had never used it. I thought it might help me, so I got a box to try. I started taking a small dose after each meal.

"In a very short time I could see that I was better; I slept better and could eat without being disturbed by gas pains. I no longer had the sick headaches.

"I experienced such great relief, after taking Black-Draught, that I keep it in the house all the time now.

"When I begin to feel dull and sluggish, and get constipated, I take a dose or two, and the next day I am feeling fine."

For sale everywhere; 1c a dose.

WOMEN WOULD RULE BRITAIN BY NEW VOTING ACT

Cabinet Pledge of Equal Rights Will Give Them 2,500,000 Majority Over the Men.

CHURCHILL FOUGHT THE "FLAPPER VOTE"

Measure Is Expected to Be Presented Next Fall and Is Not Likely to Be Applied Before 1929.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, April 13.—Premier Baldwin announced in the House of Commons today that the Government would introduce a bill at the next session of Parliament to permit women to vote when they reach the age of 21, thus equalizing their franchise with that of the men. The present voting age of women is now 30 years.

The Prime Minister said it would take some time to prepare the bill, which could not be introduced before autumn. The women who will be enfranchised under the bill probably will be able to vote in the next general elections, which normally will occur about November, 1929.

Baldwin's statement followed a Cabinet meeting at which the franchise was thoroughly discussed. It is reported that Winston Churchill, Chancellor of the Exchequer, and Lord Birkenhead, Secretary of State for India, were against what was termed the "flapper" vote, but their coleagues overruled them.

The decision which the Cabinet had to make is momentous, since equal franchise will add 5,000,000 women to the voting list, giving them a majority of 2,000,000 over the men.

KIRKWOOD RESIDENT CHOSEN CITY CLERK OF BRENTWOOD

Newly Elected Board of Trustees Make Appointment at First Meeting, Despite Protest.

The Brentwood Board of Trustees, elected April 5, was installed last night at the Brentwood city hall and chose William A. Withrow to serve as Mayor and ex-officio Police Judge for the sixth consecutive term.

The old board withdrew after passing one ordinance which provided a fee of $2.20 for the Police Judge for each case he tried, regardless of disposition, to replace an ordinance which allowed the magistrate a fee only for convictions.

Expected complaints of irregularity at the election and a fight against Edward J. Burke, of the Withrow faction, because he has lived in Brentwood less than a year, did not develop. The reappointment of City Clerk William Sherick was confirmed by a three-to-two vote, over the strenuous objection of Joseph W. Hornback, independent, who complained because Sherick has lived in Kirkwood for the past nine months.

WOMAN VICTIM OF LEPROSY WILL REMAIN IN ST. LOUIS

Government, Unable to Transport Her to Colony, Sends Chaulmoogra Oil for Treatment.

Treatment with chaulmoogra oil has been begun at city hospital in the case of Mrs. Gussie Amundsen, 46 years old, who was found to be suffering from leprosy upon applying at the institution several weeks ago for treatment for a skin eruption.

A quantity of chaulmoogra oil, the only known effective agency in the treatment of leprosy, was obtained by the city from the United States Public Health Service, following an announcement that no Government funds would be available to transport the patient to the leper colony at Carlinville, La., until after July 1. Mrs. Amundsen is in an isolated room at the hospital.

FIRE DEPARTMENT GETS WATER TOWER FOR $1840

Chief and Master Mechanic Design Apparatus Built of Discarded Parts at Big Saving.

A motor water tower, which throws three streams of water into the air at the rate of 4070 gallons a minute, was put into service yesterday at Engine Co., No. 2, 502 North Fourth street, and will have an official test next week at the foot of Vine street.

It was designed by Fire Chief Alt and Oliver Meyers, master mechanic of the fire department, and built at a cost of $1840 from parts of obsolete equipment. A similar tower, purchased new, would cost about $23,000.

Indicted for Auto Fatality.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., April 13.—Ralph Chaplin, traveling salesman, with headquarters in St. Louis, has been indicated by a grand jury for manslaughter, in connection with the death of a 14-year-old girl. The girl, Sally Snyder, was fatally injured when her automobile collided with one driven by Chaplin April 5. Chaplin's bond was set at $3000.

SHOT TWICE WITH ONE BULLET

Boy, 9, Playing With Pistol, in a Serious Condition.

Playing with an automatic pistol in the basement of his home yesterday, Edward Krafft Jr., 9 years old, of 3631 Cleveland avenue, was shot in the hand and leg by the same bullet when the weapon accidentally discharged. He is under treatment at home and his condition reported as serious.

The weapon, police reported, had been taken to the Krafft home by a playmate living on Russell boulevard, who had found it in his father's closet. Young Krafft was examining it when it discharged and the bullet went through his right hand and into the leg.

Grapejuice Bubble's Burst Spatters Few Visible Stains

City Counselor Muench, for Instance, Thoroughly Satisfied — Others Say $20,000 Investors Expected Too Much.

The $20,000 which St. Louisans are estimated to have lost in what the posterity of bootleggers will call "The Great Grapejuice Bubble" has caused no very considerable distress or sadness among the victims, a survey today indicated.

Men who bought grapejuice in the expectation that it would turn into wine said they faced the future with fortitude, still having faith in their cellars. Others admitted that in their experience grapejuice-into-wine had been an illusion; but then, they asked, is not the grace of Bacchus, after all, an illusion? Some said, delicately, that they had been skeptics from the first and had not tried to make mediocre wine of excellent grapejuices.

One and all seemed to welcome the grapejuice inquiry in the spirit of searchers after the truth. They said the unfortunate experiences of many grapejuice buyers would provoke good, wholesome discussions about town. Indeed, among those interviewed, there was a pronounced variation in opinion. "Can grapejuice be made into wine?" all questioned, some wincing a little, some chuckling.

No, Indeed, Says Foristel.

Edward W. Foristel, attorney, said it could not. "Who could be dumb enough to imagine you can make wine by letting grapejuice stand in your cellar? That's absurd. I've made too much wine, myself, not to know what grapejuice will do. Yes, I bought grapejuice. I've still got it. Fine stuff, too. Made of white grapes. But wine? Now, really, it can't be done. Who says it can?"

He was shown a list of names of those who had, what with one thing and another, made, in a manner of speaking, some cussess. This list seemed to amuse him mightily, but such an attitude was characteristic of all those interviewed. They were humorously interested in the other fellows' experiences.

At the opposite viewpoint from Foristel is Henry L. Cornet, president of Cornet & Zeibig, real estate:

"I had very fair success with my report and sauterne made from grapejuice," said Cornet, "and I think most of the failures are due perhaps to lack of understanding." Good wine, Cornet said, with the solemn reverence of a frank connoisseur, is not made in a month or even two months. I am a bit afraid that many of those who spoiled their wine did so because they were too eager. Mine stood for almost a year before it was touched.

Most Salesmen Unknowing.

"The salesmen might be blamed for not giving buyers the proper instruction. I found them rather ignorant. An expert, fortunately, looked after mine, and later I had it bottled."

While he smiled when informed of failures in other homes, Cornet was not inclined to judge too harshly. Good wine, he said, is a beautiful and rare thing in this day when bootleggers are not, perhaps, what they should be, and men are to be pardoned for spoiling a barrel or two by awkward handling.

Albert Von Hoffman, president of the Von Hoffman Press, was a heavy loser in the "bubble," but one who remained loyal until he finally mastered the situation. He acknowledged that his first failures resulted from the mistaken notion that champagne can be made from grapejuices. Moselle, sauterne, claret, Burgundy, Rhine—all these, yes—but not champagne. Von Hoffman spoiled three barrels before sounder judgment came to him, he says. He blames the grapejuice salesmen for misrepresenting the possibilities of making champagne. "The champagne was a fake," he said, "but I got very good moselle and sauterne."

"The secret," said Von Hoffman, "is to let the grapejuice evaporate slowly while fermenting. You do this by using the patented bungsiphon they give you and allowing the gasses to filter out through water. Then you pour two quarts of mineral oil on top of the wine in each barrel. This stops evaporation and prevents the stuff from souring. Too quick evaporation always turns the stuff to vinegar."

Arthur Kocian's in Sewer.

One of the most depressing experiences with grapejuice was that of Arthur Kocian, member of the firm of Noonan & Kocian, art dealers. While he would not be quoted, he acknowledged he had bought from one of the smooth salesmen who went about selling "grapejuice as pure as a baby's dream." It is known that Kocian had to pour a barrel of "champagne" into the sewer without tasting it. More than half of the money lost by experimenters was on "champagne."

City Counselor Muench, another customer of the grapejuice companies, expressed himself as "thoroughly satisfied" with the results, remarking with some significance, "My grandfather was a wine maker in Warren County, Missouri."

One evening while the family of a grape juice purchaser was at dinner, an explosion occurred in the basement, necessitating an eemrgency call to the company which had agreed to look after the barrel down-cellar during its effervescent stage. An "expert" hurried out and managed to salvage most of the stuff.

Of those interviewed none had tried to get money back for the barrels of stuff that failed to turn into wine. Looking back on it now, they could be philosophical.

"It is just blooie!" one man said. "You know how those things are. Liquor is only a gamble under prohibition." Another, familiar with the scope of the grapejuice-into-wine trade estimated that more than 3000 families here took a chance.

Coughs Stopped Almost Instantly

A famous physician's prescription called Thoxine relieves the most stubborn coughs that otherwise would hang on for weeks. Acts on new theory, relieves the inflammation and irritation which is almost always the cause of the cough, and stops it like magic. Thoxine is equally good for sore throat, for which purpose it is far superior to gargles. Contains no dope, chloroform or harmful drugs. Once used you will never be without it. Pleasant taste and safe for children. Remember one swallow stops night coughs or sore throat within 15 minutes or money back. 35c, 60c and $1.00. At all druggists.

KIRKWOOD SUSPICIOUS OF COUNTY SEWER LAW

Takes Measures to Block Burdensome Charges on Property Under It.

Operation of the new St. Louis County sewer law, passed by the recent legislative session, is arousing objections in teh county, largely through fear that it will permit heavy charges to be made against property.

A resolution has been adopted by the Kirkwood Board of Aldermen, declaring that the Mayor and Aldermen objevt to incorporation of any sewer district which may include any of the existing districts in Kirkwood. Creation of new districts there is neither necessary or desirable, the resolution asserts, and would impose on the people "an expense for salaries, clerks, attorneys and collections, and needlessly duplicate the overhead charges of sewer control."

Hurries Its Own Plans.

In order to forestall, if possible, any effort to create a new district in the Kirkwood neighborhood, the resolution directs the City Engineer to plan at once extensions of the town system southeastwardly along Gravois Creek to Watson road and westward along Sugar Creek to Highalnd avenue, Osage Hills; to seek rights-of-way by donation, and negotiate for sites for septic tanks at the ends of these extensions. The City Attorney is to be provided with a certified copy of the resolution, for use as evidence in opposing any proceeding in Circuit Court to create a new sewer district.

The County Chamber of Commerce has engaged W. W. Horner, engineer of sewers and paving for the City of Ct. Louis and a nationally known authority, as advisor in planning a unified syste mof county sewers, and has decided to oppose 1 court any district systems differing greatly from his plan.

For Unified System.

The chamber intends to protect county residents "against imposition on the part of professional promoters and others," and has issued teh following statement of its attitude:

"The chamber is opposed to the building of a hodge podge system and is in favor of a unified sewer system as far as it is possible to build one under the existing law. The chamber is opposed to the gouging of St. Louis County property owners. The chamber is opopse dto the building of a too elaborate system of sewers or systems not needed now. In this connection, it will employ competent engineers to make a sewer survey of St. Louis County, said survey to be used to point out the danger of two many separate systems, etc. The chamber will do all possible to bring about the appointment of proper persons as supervisors of sewer districts."

MEXICAN REBELS HOLD UP TRAIN, REPELLED BY GUARD

Lack of Ammunition Thought Reason for Attack With Stones After Rails Were Torn Up.

By the Associated Press.

MEXICO CITY, April 13.—Scarcity of ammunition is believed to have prevented a rebel band of 100 from robbing passengers on a Laredo-Mexico City train, when it was attacked Monday night.

Commanded by Juan Mendoza, German Pichardo and Dionisio Aguilar, the band tore up the rails and forced the engineer to stop at Rinconcillo Canyon between Comonfort and San Miguel Allende. A representative of the newspaper El Universal, who was on the train, told how when the rebels were prevented from approaching by the military escort firing on them, they began showering the coaches with heavy rocks from both sides of the canyon and returned the fire of the soldiers. After an hour's fighting, the rebels, apparently out of ammunition, withdrew.

The din of rocks falling on the roofs of the coaches in the darkness added to the panic of passengers, three of whom were injured when a heavy rock crashed through a second class coach roof.

FOUR STENCH BOMB ATTACKS ON PLANTS OF CLEANERS

Police on Duty in Strike Dispute Report Assailants in Auto Got Away in Traffic.

Four stench bomb attacks were made against cleaning and dyeing company branches last night in a renewal of the trouble arising from attempts to unionize pressers and cleaners. Police were stationed at each of the establishments, but made no arrests.

A stench bomb was hurled at the plant of the Chenoweth Cleaning and Dyeing Co., 4731 Delmar boulevard, at 7:45 p. m., while two policemen were on guard. The bomb broke against a front wall. The two policemen reported that traffic was so heavy they were unable to detect the hurlers of the bomb.

The other attacks were made against branches of the Lungstras Cleaning and Dyeing Co. At 6832 Clayton avenue, a stench bomb was hurled through a plate glass window, valued at $100, and exploded inside the plant, damaging wearing apparel. At 2311 Thurman boulevard a bomb was dropped into a mail slot and exploded. An attempt tur hurl a bomb through a rear window of a branch at 274 Skinker boulevard apparently was frustrated by the approach of a policeman who found the bomb, unbroken, lying against a rear door early today.

GENEVA, Switzerland, April 13.—The United States can accept no supervision by the League of Nations in carrying out the provisions of any general disarmament treaty, is the announcement made by Hugh Gibson at today's session of the Preparatory Disarmament Commission.

If the members of the League desired machinery for international control, however, he added, the United States was ready to co-operate in the conclusion of such a treaty, provided the control did not apply to the United States.

Gibson said the fact that the United States was not a member of the League was not the prime reason for her inability to accept League supervision, but a conviction that such control was impracticable and likely to foment ill will and suspicion. The United States believed the treaty would be based on good faith, like the Washington treaty, which had been loyally executed.

Paul Boncour of France, replying, recognized the basis for the American stand. He therefore accepted the suggestion that international supervision be applied to League members only, preferring that to a general scheme which, not being acceptable to all, would be inoperative.

GIVES $100,000 FOR VACATION CAMP FOR BANK EMPLOYES

George F. Baker Provides Health Resort for Workers in His New York Depositories.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, April 13.—"Baker Camp" will be the name of the new health resort for the use of employes of four large New York banks and will be open for spring vacation in May. It is the gift of George F. Baker, chairman of the board of the First National Bank, who donated $100,000 for its construction. It is about 35 miles from New York City, on Lake Sebago.

The new camp will be run by a mutual corporation composed of the staffs of the First National Bank, the Bankers' Trust Co., the United States Trust Co. and the New York Trust Co. It will be open all year round for the benefit of employes of these four banks.

FUNERAL OF T. J. EINIG, RETIRED ARMY SERGEANT

Full Military Honors Accorded at Interment in New St. Marcus Cemetery.

Funeral services for Theodore J. Einig, 55, retired Sergeant of the United States Army, who died March 30 in San Francisco, were held today in the undertaking chapel at 2223 St. Louis avenue. He was accorded full military honors at the burial in the New St. Marcus Cemetery.

Einig was more than 30 years in active service in the army and was a veteran of the Spanish-American and the World War. He was stationed at Puerto Principe, Cuba, during the Spanish-American conflict, and took part in several engagements. He trained recruits at Fort Morrison, Va., during the World War.

ROTA REVIEWS MARCONI CASE

Annulment Decision Expected Soon from Church Court.

By the Associated Press.

ROME, April 13.—Proceedings for nullification of the marriage of William Marconi, wireless inventor, and the Hon. Beatrice O'Brien, daughter of the fourteenth Baron Inchiquin, have been considered by the Rota, or ecclesiastical court. Msgrs. Grazioli, Parrillo and Solieri, as judges, minutely examined evidence and read a report prepared by Msgr. Grabioli. The decision is expected to be announced within a few weeks. Proceedings thus far have caused belief that the annulment will be granted.

The cause presented for nullification of marriage lies in a condition established before the marriage of the Marconis in 1905 that they could separate whenever they wished.

OPPOSES OUSTING OF NEGRO

State School Chief Calls Nathan Young's Removal Unjust.

By the Associated Press.

JEFFERSON CITY, April 13.—Charles A. Lee, State Superintendent of Schools, has issued a statement that he considers the removal of Nathan B. Young, Negro, as president of the Lincoln University, State Negro college here, as "untimely, unwise and a gross injustice both to Young and to the cause of education of Negroes in this State."

Young was dismissed, effective June 15, when his term ends, by the Board of Curators of the university at a meeting here and Clement Richardson, Negro, president of Western Baptist College at Kansas City, and former president of Lincoln University, was named to succeed him. Young has been head of the university for three years.

Sleepwalker Killed in Fall.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, April 13.—Sidney Lang, 40 years old, a mining engineer of Houghton, Mich., fell to his death from a fifteenth-story window at the Allerton Club while sleepwalking early yesterday, a Coroner's jury decided. Lang was employed by the Barnsdall Zinc Co. of Joplin, Mo., and recently came here from Joplin.

EDISON SILENCES BARBER

"I'm Deaf, Fortunately," Inventor's Reply to Talkative Workman.

By the Associated Press.

FORT MYERS, Fla., April 13.—Thomas A. Edison doesn't always regard his deafness as an affliction.

After some strenuous work a few days ago he visited a barber shop. The barber was all smiles over his distinguished visitor and he applied a lot of talk along with the lather. When Edison failed to reply there were more questions. Finally, leaning up a bit in his chair, the inventor fairly shouted: "I'm deaf—fortunately."

FALSE ALARM VICTIM

EDWARD G. BORN

FIREMAN KILLED ANSWERING FALSE ALARM, 4 HURT

Edward G. Born, Driver of No. 5 Truck, Crushed to Death When Machine Skids on Wet Street.

Responding to a false alarm from a box at Blair avenue and Warren street, one fireman was killed and four others seriously hurt, when a combination engine and hose reel truck skidded on wet pavement and upset on the sidewalk in front of 1528 Benton street, at 8 o'clock last night.

The chauffeur, Edward G. Born, 35 years old, of 3558A South Compton avenue, was caught under the truck, dying of a crushed chest half an hour later at the City Hospital.

Lieut. William Henneberry, 43, 5558 Easton avenue, suffered fractures of the left ankle and right hip; Pipeman Hartwell Wilson, 48, 4823 Leduc street, fractured skull; Pipeman Henry Lydon, 42, 1730 O'Fallon street, internal injuries and cuts, and Pipeman Henry Heining, 41, 5447 Vernon avenue, injuries to the back and lacerations.

Police, who are investigating, attribute the fatal accident to boys who they think have sounded frequent false alarms from the same box during the last two weeks.

The combination truck, from Engine Company No. 5, at Twenty-second and North Market streets, was moving east in Benton street when the rear wheels skidded to the right, striking the curb where the truck upset. Every man on the truck was thrown to the pavement and injured.

Born had been a fireman since September, 1922. Until two months ago he was with Engine Company No. 19. He is survived by his widow, Kathryn, and two small children.

GRAND JURY INDICTS DOCTOR

Manslaughter Charged for Alleged Illegal Operation.

An indictment charging manslaughter was returned by the grand jury yesterday against Dr. George H. Rice, of 3507 Page boulevard. He is alleged to have performed an illegal operation upon a young Negro woman March 22.

Injured When Cement Falls on Him.

Harry C. Karle, 50 years old, a laborer, of 1707 Belmont avenue, East St. Louis, was taken to St. Mary's Hospital yesterday afternoon suffering from internal injuries suffered when several sacks of cement fell upon him from a wagon he was loading. His condition is said to be critical.

Alton Improvement Plans.

Public improvements of an estimated cost of $194,521 are planned for 1927 by the Board of Local Improvements of Alton. This total includes projects that either have been approved by the City Council and for which bids have been called, or projects on which the preliminary work is such that they will be placed before the aldermen. Of the total, $22,211 already is under contract. The program for 1927 exceeds the 1926 total of $179,141 and the 1925 record of $153,032.

Auto Stolen From Dealer's Lot.

The Negro watchman at the Yahlem Motor Co., 1035 North Grand boulevard, reported that three men stole an automobile from the parking lot behind the Yahlem office at 2:30 a. m. today. Hearing the engine start, he went outside to investigate and a man with a revolver ordered him back inside, he said.

PEETZ GIRLS LOSE 33-13 TO EDMONTON

St. Louis Municipal Champions No Match for Canadian Rivals in Opening Game of Series.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

EDMONTON, April 13.—Peetz girls' basketball stars of St. Louis, Mo., were defeated here last night in the first of the two-game series for the women's international basketball championship, by the Defenders, Commercial School graduates of this city. The final score was 33-13.

Over 3000 basketball supporters attended the game.

It was not very close, as the score indicates, but the Defenders were really at their best and, although the visitors put up a spirited fight for the night's honors, they could not overcome the seven-point lead established by the locals in the first quarter.

It was 11-4 at the end of this initial frame; 19-6 at the halfway mark; 23-8 at the end of the third chapter and the final was 33-13.

"Checking" strenuously, the champions were on their opponents from the start of the game. At times St. Louis broke away and seemed to be on the way to a score, but usually they were checkmated hard, before they could get into position.

Dorothy Brown Barred.

At the start of the game one of the stalwarts on the visiting aggregation was forced out of the lineup. She was Miss Dorothy Brown, who, it seems, played with the St. Louis Curlees the past season, and thus is not allowed to take part in an international basketball series with another team. One other girl, Margaret Ford, who also played with the Curlees, was allowed to participate.

In all of the practices held here previous to the first match of the series, these two girls have shown up very prominently in the attack and defense of the visitors. It was a most unfortunate decision for them that Miss Brown was forced to watch her teammates in action from the side lines.

With both teams just about even as far as defensive work went, it was the shooting end of the game that really decided the issue. The grads, with a sharp-shooting star in Miss Margaret MacBurney, led their opponents all the way, and long heaves from near the center of the floor proved to be just what they liked best.

Miss Bick Effective.

Miss Margaret Bick proved to be the most powerful factor in the invaders' attack, although she was a very small person, she was bumped around hard and often and her effectiveness thus suffered when she was trying to break through to the basket. She only got one basket, but her efforts and her fighting from the start helped the rest of the team considerably and in helping her teammates caught her spirit and hopped back too.

Margaret Ford was high scorer for the visitors with six points while Ruth Mortenson ran her a close second with five.

Margaret MacBurney of the grads was high scorer for the evening with 15 points. Three other members of the champions' aggregation finished with six points apiece.

Penalties were handed out well by Referee Syd Stephens, the grads getting eight to their opponents four.

Final Next Thursday.

The final, which will be played tomorrow, despite the fact that visitors face a 20-point deficit, will attract another good crowd, although it is not expected that a capacity one will attend.

PEETZ GIRLS LOSE 33-13 TO EDMONTON

St. Louis Municipal Champions No Match for Canadian Rivals in Opening Game of Series.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

EDMONTON, April 13.—Peetz girls' basketball stars of St. Louis, Mo., were defeated here last night in the first of the two-game series for the women's international basketball championship, by the Defenders, Commercial School graduates of this city. The final score was 33-13.

Over 3000 basketball supporters attended the game.

It was not very close, as the score indicates, but the Defenders were really at their bes t and, although the visitors put up a spirited fight for the night's honors, they could not overcome the seven-point lead established by the locals in the first quarter.

It was 11-4 at the end of this initial frame; 19-6 at the halfway mark; 23-8 at the end of the third chapter and the final was 33-13.

"Checking" strenuously, the champions were on their opponents from the start of the game. At times St. Louis broke away and seemed to be on the way to a score, but usually they were checkmated hard, before they could get into position.

Dorothy Brown Barred.

At the start of the game one of the stalwarts on the visiting aggregation was forced out of the lineup. She was Miss Dorothy Brown, who, it seems, played with the St. Louis Curlees the past season, and thus is not allowed to take part in an international basketball series with another team. One other girl, Margaret Ford, who also played with the Curlees, was allowed to participate.

As Asual.

THERE was a man in our town
And he was wondrous sore;
He turned the grand old pastime down
And said he'd go no more.
But when he heard the starting bell,
Forgetting all his knocks,
He gave the well-known rebel yell
And bought a season box.

The habit had him in its grip
And he was an addict;
The team had won the championship,
Which meant that he was licked.
He tried to give the game the can,
But found it was in vain;
Which goes to prove that once a fan,
A fan you will remain.

A PALPABLE HIT!

"George Sisler Shows Ability As Pinch Talker."

GEORGE SISLER, famous as a batter,
At banquets always crowds the plate;
They handed George a silver platter,
And George proceeded to orate.
In pulling his postprandial wit,
The scorer said he made a hit.

"Georgians Give Ty Cobb Floral Wreath."

Say it with tiger lilies.

The Cards having shown that it can be done, we look for the owns to take heart of grace and go and do likewise. Nothing like a good example.

Worse teams than the Browns have won pennants. The Boston Braves won one in 1914 with three pitchers. But the heluvit is to get the three pitchers.

Looks like the River des Peres was out to make a high-water mark before she was hog-tied and thrown.

See where the Giants trimmed West Point 19 to 6. They must have played the old Army game.

However, beating the United States Army is a man's job in any man's league.

THE PRISONER'S SONG.

"Gun Toter, Arrested 64 Times, Given Two Years in Prison."

IN a prison cell he'll sit,
With no pistol in his mitt—
For the nonce his trusty gat is laid away.
He will have to go to prison,
For the jury gave him his'n,
And perhaps a week or two he'll have to stay.

Never too old to learn, as the feller says.

"Dawes to Speak at Washington U."

We take it, if Helen Mariar gets too loquacious, the boys will tell him to pipe down.

How much excess baggage is he allowed?

"Admits Kissing Colonel's Brother."

Would you call that a major offense?

TILDEN CONTINUES TO WIN AT PINEHURST

By the Associated Press.

PINEHURST, N. C., April 13.—William Tilden II of Philadelphia was victorious in two matches of the North and South tennis tournament here yesterday, winning in singles and doubles.

In his singles match he defeated J. P. Stockton, Farmington, Conn., 6—0, 6—3, and in the doubles, paired with Emmett Pare, Georgetown University star, he conquered Sam Hady and P. S. Larkum, both of Mamaroneck, N. Y., 6—3, 6—2.

Acosta Forced to Retire.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., April 13.—Merito Acosta, Cuban outfielder with the Louisville American Association team, today went on the retirement list as a coach, according to an announcement by Capt. Billy Neal.

Acosta had been bothered for several seasons with a displaced vertebrae and an operation last fall apparently was not successful.

Baseball Commissioner Retires to Background as Mayor-Elect of Chicago Appears in Four-Gallon Hat—Frankie Frisch Gets One Hit.

By J. Roy Stockton.

CHICAGO, April 13.—The National League opening here was far from auspicious in some respects.

It was not a good day for baseball. It was dark and gloomy, and a biting wind was blowing off the lake. The temperature dropped steadily throughout the afternoon, and if the 42,000 spectators had been laid end to end some of them might have been in a warmer climate.

Opening day ceremonies were simple and brief. A band entertained the fans, the athletes marched to the flagpole and the national anthem was played, and then Umpire Klem called play ball and the season was on.

Kenesaw Mountain Landis, high commissioner of baseball, attended, but he timed his entrance poorly. Just before the Judge arrived the newly-elected Mayor, Big Bill Thompson strode into view and nobody saw the commissioner, as the crowd was still craning its necks at the hand-shaking city executive.

It was a bad day all around for Landis. He prides himself on his hat, which is very distinctive, but Big Bill's chapeau makes Ken's look like a very commonplace headpiece. Mayor Thompson wears a four-gallon hat, with the crown punched in like an army campaign lid. Landis appeared to feel very badly about it. Thompson outphotographed him 10 to 1.

Grover Alexander was received in a peculiar manner. There were cheers and jeers when he appeared, and as he stepped to the pitching slab in the first inning somebody threw two lemons at him. The thrower's aim was poor and the fruit rolled to the Cardinal dugout, where it was grabbed by George Toporcer.

Unclassified note: Peaches Browning, the diary and woof-woof girl from the East, who is having her face repaired preparatory to entrance into the moving-picture game, looked over the Cardinals on their ar-

Sportsman's Park Gets Soaked Again, but Browns Prepare to Play Tigers

Band Plays "Hail, Hail" With Only a Few Hundred Persons in Stands—Zachary and Whitehill Pitching Selections.

By Jack Alexander.

SPORTSMAN'S PARK, April 13.—In spite of a 20-minute rain hich left the sparse sections of the outfield slippery, Brownie officials at 2 o'clock this afternoon declared their intention of proceeding wtth the inaugural game with the Detroit Tigers, barring further ainfall.

The rain which started to fall about 15 minutes after the Browns had taken the field in their spotless uniforms, slowed up at about 1:45 o'clock to a slight drizzle. Prior to this it had resembled movie rain, coming straight down, though not in great quantities.

The rival managers stuck to their pitching selections of Tom Zachary for the Browns and Earl Whitehill for the Tigers, two left-handers.

Noel Poepping's band entertained the few hundred fans who arrived early, doing very well in spite of the fact that the snare drummer appeared late. His "Hail, Hail, the Gang's All Here," however, was mere whistling past a graveyard. The crowd at this time revived memories of the 1926 season.

Bunting Well Soaked.

Bill Friel's nifty outlay of bunting in the national colors got well soaked by the weather man's aqueous contribution to the occasion.

The delay of the opening here, if it favors anybody, is partial to the Browns, giving Frank O'Rourke, slated to start at second base, more time to recover from an injury suffered in last Saturday's spring series contest.

In general, though, it works a hardship on both clubs, who, having finished in second division last year, feel confident of breaking into better company this season under new management and are straining to go. More postponements more double-headers later.

The Brownie management yesterday announced that Walter Beck, right-handed hurler, had been recalled from Tulsa and Blaeholder sent to take his place on the Western League club.

Game time as usual at 3 o'clock. Detroit will conclude its series here Friday and the Chicago White Sox will be here for a four-day visit. Then the Browns make a tour of the Western cities of the circuit, returning May 2 to meet Cleveland.

Bad Breaks, Not Weak Pitching by Old Pete, Beat O'Farrell's Men

Alexander's Rout Due to a Succession of Mishaps All in Favor of Chicago—Root Pitches in Good Form for the Victors—42,000 See Opening Game.

By J. Roy Stockton,
Of the Post-Dispatch Sport Staff.

CHICAGO, April 13.—Usually a 10 to 1 defeat is a pretty fair pasting, but the Cardinals will tackle the Chicago Cubs this afternoon feeling that the men of Joe McCarthy scored a hair-line decision victory in the first game of the National League season.

Furthermore, the world champions expect Bill Sherdel to hurl them to a triumph over the Cubs and are confident that "Sheriff" Blake will be in many a pinch when he tries to throw the ball past O'Farrell's sluggers.

It is true that the Chicago rally that put Alexander to rout and caused O'Farrell to put in a pinch batter for the great right-hander was built on a fragile foundation. Of course, a defeat on April 12 counts as much as a defeat on Oct. 1, and the Cardinals were properly silent and subdued as they munched their evening groceries yesterday, and again as they squirted grapefruit this morning.

But between munches and squirts they comforted themselves and each other, it was pointed out that if Billy Southworth's hot grounder in the first inning had bounced through the infield as it appeared destined to bounce it would have been a single and Taylor Douthit would have scored.

Douthit Does His Varsity Stuff.

Douthit was glad to hear that, because he was made to look very collegiate when the ball was stopped and he was chased back toward second base and tagged. Had that hit gone through it is very likely that Charlie Root would have been knocked out of there instead of being allowed to squeeze out of the inning with only one run against him.

Then in the third inning there were two plays which, with a little more accuracy and a little more luck, would have checked the Cubs and permitted Alexander to carry on to victory, perhaps, in later innings.

Charlie Root started the inning with a line double into the crowd in left center, Sparky Adams laid down a bunt. It was a good sacrifice, but that is all it should have been. Alexander pounced on the ball, and O'Farrell, at his elbow when he fielded the bunt, yelled for a throw to first base. Alexander threw, but the ball was thrown low and to the side and Jim Bottomley was pulled off the bag. Adams, instead of being credited with a sacrifice, was given a hit, the scorer deciding that it was a difficult chance because Alex had to hustle.

Heathcote then grounded to Bottomley for what should have been the second out. Webb walked, filling the bases and then came another play, a bit of the fragile foundation on which the Cubs laid their five run rally. Hack Wilson hit a grounder to Frisch. Frankie fielded it quickly and tossed to Thevenow.

Mr. Wilson Surprises.

It looked like a sure double play and such a double killing would have ended the inning, but Wilson showed unusual speed for a wardrobe trunk and scurried to first a fraction of a step before Thevenow's relay reached Bottomley. It was a close play, but Umpire Wilson called it right when he ruled Wilson safe and Root crossed the plate with a run and Adams reached third.

Stephenson cracked a single to right, scoring Adams and Charlie Grimm, unkind native St. Louisan lifted a home run over the right field screen. Five runs thus were produced, whereas had Alexander made a good toss or had Thevenow and Frisch saved a fraction of a second in executing that play on Wilson's grounder, those five runs would have been a zero on the scoreboard.

Charley Root, Once Owned by Brownies, Struck Out Seven St. Louis Batters

The breaks always go with victory and it appeared that the Cubs in winning had an unusually large number. For instance in the seventh inning Thevenow led off with a base on balls and Toporcer was sent in to bat for Herman Bell. George connected solidly but his line drive went straight to Adams and Thevenow was doubled off first and the rally thus quickly nipped.

Of course Charlie Root made his own breaks, to a great extent. He will be remembered by St. Louisans as one of the half a dozen Brownies traded some years ago to a Coast League team for George Lyons, droll humorist, and Tony Rego, the ukulele player. Charlie was a great pitcher last season and he started the 1927 campaign as though headed for a still better year. He struck out seven Cardinals and always seemed to have something in reserve.

Root in Great Form.

In the sixth inning, for instance, Frisch beat out a bunt and Bottomley lined a single to right. Root then settled down and struck out Bell, Hafey and O'Farrell, three fair to middling swatters. Only seven safeties were manufactured of Root's slants and in only the first and sixth did the Cardinals bunch as many as two in an inning. He improved as he went along, giving four in the first three, two in the middle three and only one in the last three frames.

O'Farrell and his men expect Sherdel to stop this young Earl Webb, who hit Alexander for a home run in the first inning and Dyer for another in the eighth. Webb was with the Giants some years ago and is said to be weak against anything but a low ball. But when you give him a low ball he is likely to hit it into any strange county. He certainly socked Alex for a beauty. The ball sailed over the heads of the bleacher fans, cleared the outer brick wall and landed out on a public highway. This afternoon young Mr. Webb can count the low balls he will be pitched on the fingers of a grapefruit.

Dyer Rudely Treated.

In the eighth inning the Cubs plastered Eddie Dyer for four runs but the game was lost then and Root was unhittable, so it didn't

SLOW TACTICS AND FOUL BLOWS SPOIL GOOD FIGHT CARD

HORNER WINS DECISION IN KEEFE BOUT

Schremann Lands Low One on Jimmy Lucas in Feature of Coliseum Show; Smith Gains Knockout.

The most promising boxing program of the New Coliseum A. C., in its effort to revive the sport here was marred last night at the Coliseum by a lot of foul fighting and time-worn hocus-pocus.

The Hon. Sammy Schnemann, venerable South Broadway baron, was taking a terrific lacing from Jimmy Lucas, a young flyweight comer whom the fans love to watch, when Sammy suddenly threw in a hard, low punch that doubled up Lucas and ended the main feature early in the second round. Throughout the first round it was apparent that Schnemann had no more chance to ward off Lucas than a sick lion of staving off a troublesome wolf.

Not Such a Good Fight.

In the other feature, Jack Keefe of Toledo had to be warned against low blows against Jack Horner, and in addition was guilty of too much holding. Horner had the best of the infighting and was the more aggressive, and hence deserved the decision.

Frankie Murphy of Denver won an undeserved victory over Mike Dale of Decatur, Ill., when Dale fouled him in the third round and was disqualified. In Dale's case, at least, the foul was unintentional. He had the best of the going all the way, as Murphy didn't have enough steam to his punches to knock over a piano lamp.

Wop Stonum of Kennett, Mo., in his bout with Lew Terry had likewise to be cautioned about blows below the waist and in addition delayed the fight unnecessarily. Terry was the aggressor most of the time and won two out of six rounds, the others being even.

Roy Eckert tried to use his knee on Jack Jentzen in the opener and drew a warning. Later, in the third, he curled up and fell, claiming a foul but Referee Heisner refused to notice the claim and counted him out. Up to that time the bout was a good standup slugging match.

Smith Kayoes Windle.

Tom Smith knocked out Vic Windle in the fourth round. He should have scored it in the first round when he had Windle in a stuporous condition but delayed and Windle showed a nice recovery only to get caught by a hard hook in the last round. Billy Cain scored a decision over Digger Nelson, his rally in the last period gaining the verdict for him.

By far the best scrap of the evening was furnished by two Negro fighters, Kid Dusty of St. Louis and Kid Shimmy of Detroit. Shimmy took three of the most terrific blows direct to the teeth that ever shook a man's skull and the third laid him out. It all happened in the first round.

Results

Jack Horner, St. Louis, defeated Jack Keefe of Toledo, six rounds, 148 pounds.

Jimmy Lucas, St. Louis, won on a foul from Sammy Schnemann, St. Louis, in the second round, 115 pounds.

Frankie Murphy, Denver, won on a foul from Mike Dale, Decatur, third round, 158 pounds.

Lew Terry, St. Louis, defeated Wop Stonum, Kennett, Mo., six rounds, 135 pounds.

Billy Cain, St. Louis, defeated Digger Nelson, East St. Louis, four rounds, 112 pounds.

Tom Smith, St. Louis, knocked out Vic Windle, St. Louis, in the fourth round, 150 pounds.

Jack Jentzen, Scott Field, knocked out Roy Eckert, St. Louis, third round, 135 pounds.

Kid Dusty, St. Louis, knocked out Kid Shimmy, Detroit, in the first round.

BAD BREAKS HELPED BEAT ALEXANDER IN CARDS OPENING GAME

matter, except that it was painful to see the relief hurler treated so rudely. There were three singles, a double and a home run in the inning and two bases on balls helped swell the run total.

Alexander was used in the opengame only after long and careful deliberation by Manager O'Farrell. Sherdel and the veteran warmed up before the game and about two minutes before time to start. O'Farrell and Bill McKechnie, Bob's first assistant, walked out to interview "Old Pete." He had been warming up with his sweater coat on, but after a parley of a minute he peeled it off and went to his task in earnest and Sherdel retired to the dugout to save his arm for the second game of the series. Alex appeared to have his usual control and there was no concern expressed among the Cardinals over the drubbing that the Cubs gave him in that unfortunate third inning.

As previously pointed out had he escaped that inning he might have carried Root into extra innings. In the fourth, his last inning on the hill, he retired three Cubs in a row without the ball being hit out of the infield.

Commission Reinstates Kaiser, Who Has Scored 10 K. O's in 11 Bouts

"Peewee," Who Was Suspended "for Life" for Refusal to Meet Steadman, Back on the Eligible List.

Advance From Bantam to Featherweight Class Brings New Strength and Confidence to Skillful Boxer.

PEEWEE KAISER.

Johnny (Peewee) Kaiser, after almost a year of barnstorming in Missouri and Illinois, may now fight in his own home town, thanks to an order passed yesterday by the city boxing fathers removing a suspension imposed last summer and reinstating the young featherweight.

While it was being announced at the Coliseum last night that he was once more in the good graces of the powers and would appear on the next bill, Peewee was celebrating at Jefferson City by knocking out Jimmy Dugan of Terre Haute, Ind., in the fourth round of a scheduled 10-round fight.

It was Peewee's tenth knockout victory in his last 11 starts, the odd bout being won on a decision over Battling Morris of Duluth, Minn. Morris will probably be selected for Kaiser's Enoch Arden bout two weeks hence.

Kaiser drew an indefinite suspension for refusing to go on with a scheduled fight with Paul Steadman on the grounds of sickness. He stoped payment on his $150 forfeit check and further aroused the wrath of the City Boxing Commission. Yesterday Jack Tippett, Coliseum promoter, made good the deficit and the reinstatement followed.

Kaiser appears at present to be in the best form of his career.

Johnny's remarkable improvement dates from the day he decided to advance from the bantam to the featherweight division. In trying to compete at 118 pounds, Kaiser was under a constant physical strain and forced dieting injured his digestion, bringing on a stomach ailment. At 124 and 126 pounds he is now strong and confident.

FORMER COLLEGE STAR CONTINUES TO SHINE

By the Associated Press.

MADISON, Wis.—A name once famous in the lists of college athletes is becoming as widely known in the livestock industry.

It is that of Arlie Mucks, onetime holder of the world shotput record and the new secretary of the Wisconsin Live Stock Breeders' Association.

Mucks, former University of Wisconsin student, continues his interest in athletics and is a well-known football and track official in Wisconsin and South Dakota, where he has farmed and served as county agent since he came home from the World war.

EXPERT COMPARES CHESS WITH FOOTBALL

ASHEVILLE, N. C., April 13.—Chess and football are fundamentally the same game, played on boards of different sizes, in the opinion of Henry M. Woods, who has good records in both.

The two games develop the same qualities of intuition, resourcefulness, stamina, concentration and leadership, he says, and "chess, like table manners, will bring out strikingly a man's good qualities in less than 30 minutes."

Woods is chess champion of North Carolina and Florida and played football at the University of Virginia.

Non-Stop Bowler.

By the Associated Press.

ROCKLAND, Me., April 13.—Lincoln Speed, 62, is in the market for honors as a marathon bowler. He rolled 79 strings in 10 hours.

Finishing at 11 o'clock at night, he made it a perfect day by walking several miles back to his home at Owl's Head. Speed said he would have stayed longer, but the alleys closed for the night. His high mark on one string was 127, and the lowest was 81.

MICHIGAN WILL BE WELL REPRESENTED IN PENN RELAY GAME

By the Associated Press.

PHILADELPHIA, April 13.—Stephen J. Farrell, track coach at the University of Michigan, has entered six of his strongest men in the special events of the University of Pennsylvania relay carnival on April 29 and 30.

For years Michigan has been represented at the carnival, but this year's entries are regarded as having a better chance of success than any of their predecessors. They are Benson, in the two-mile run; Hester, 100-yard dash; Northrop, pole vault and javelin; Shraves, discus; Ketz, hammer throw, and Cooper, in the 120-yard high hurdles.

Hester won the 100-yard dash last year.

SCHULTE POOR ON TRACK, STAR COACH

By the Associated Press.

LINCOLN, Neb.—Henry "Indian" Schulte, track coach at the University of Nebraska, was a great football star on Michigan's point-a-minute team, but no track performer. He made himself a track coach.

At Missouri Schulte made a world record holder of Bob Simpson, hurdler, with the arm-action-and-body-pitch form he is credited with originating. Then he developed Jackson Scholz, sprinter. At Nebraska he tutored Locke last year to a 100-yard record and this year he is grooming Wirsig, 13-foot vaulter. He devised the palm-back method of passing batons to speed up his relay teams.

During 1926 the Post-Dispatch printed 6654 Classified Instruction "Wants" — 2131 more than the nearest competitor and 3373 more than the TWO other St. Louis evening newspapers combined.

SIDELIGHTS ON OPENING GAME

rival yesterday morning and asked to be introduced to O'Farrell and Thevenow. O'Farrell was not present. Thevenow blushed.

Manager McCarthy has made an infielder out of Riggs Stephenson because of his hitting ability. The former Indian handled everything that came down third-base way and contributed two singles and a double by way of showing that McCarthy knew what he was doing.

Tommy Thevenow booted Stephenson's grounder in the second inning, the second chance that came to shortstop, but the error gave Tom nad Lester Bell a chance to turn a smart play. Grimm sacrificed Stephenson to second and Gonzales then beat out a slow roller to Bell. Lester bluffed a throw to first and then wheeled and whipped to Thevenow, who was covering third. Stephenson had over-run the base and was an easy out.

Frisch's only hit in four chances was a bunt that he laid down in the sixth inning. Stephenson was about to field the ball when he heard a warning call or had a hunch. At any rate, he stopped short, jumped out of the way of the ball and permitted it to roll.

It trickled straight as a ball on a billiard table and finally rolled against third base. Frisch probably would have beaten any throw, however.

In his other times at bat the Fordham flash filed to center field, fouled to Adams and flied to left. Bell was the only Cardinal who made more than one hit. Les contributed a double in the first and beat out a roller to Cooney in the eighth. The doubles by Duthit and Bell in the first frame were the only extra base hits off Root.

Dr. Meanwell Tells Why Basketball Dribble Is Barred

Suppresses Individual Performance in Favor of Team Play, Eliminates 70 Per Cent of Whistle Blowing, Famous Coach Believes.

By the Associated Press.

MADISON, Wis., April 13.—The new basketball rule limiting the dribble to one bounce will cure eight major ailments of the game, in the opinion of Dr. Walter E. Meanwell, a member of the rules committee which promulgated the new order, and coach of the University of Wisconsin cage team.

Dr. Meanwell, originator of the short bounce pass, exponent of the dribble and regarded as one of the outstanding basketball coaches in America, said he was firmly convinced that elimination of the dribble would prove a boon to the game, which now is reaching international importance.

He said the new rule would do these things for the game:

Place basketball on a team basis in contrast to one man performances.

Save the game to the small clever man now relegated to the showers.

Virtually eliminate "stalling" by the team in the lead.

Tend to eliminate the accidents resulting from efforts to stop a dribble.

Eliminate 70 per cent of the whistle blowing which now is caused by double dribbling.

Force coaches to perfect real plays instead of being merely bench warmers.

Take a great burden off officials who have had to decide when a dribble was "double" and illegal.

Moderate the speed of the game and give the lighter clever men a chance to break through the defense of big men.

"The action of the rules committee was not a snap judgment," Dr. Meanwell said, "but resulted from long consideration of some measure to bring about cessation of criticism. In basketball today it is quite possible for one great dribbler to win a game and carry his team through many games. If we do eliminate this type of play, we cut down the spectacular, overwhelming brilliant man, but we are tickled to death to do this and substitute team play.

"We have gone on record as favoring the development of basketball along team lines.

"The one bounce rule will also save the game for the type of man now being lost—the small man. The Western Conference is now a six foot group and the little man is noticeable for his absence. The 190-pound man with the dribble couldn't be stopped.

"Small men, no matter how clever, could not bore through defenses and as a result in the last four years the small player lost out. We hope to bring him back to the plane where he can be used."

Sid Terris Puts Babe Herman Out In Third Round

Outstanding Lightweight Title Contender Brushes Aside a Strong Rival.

By the Associated Press.

CLEVELAND, O., April 12.—Sid Terris of New York, outstanding contender for the world's lightweight title, knocked out Babe Herman, also of New York, in the third round of a scheduled 12-round bout at Public Hall here last night. Herman, making his first appearance as a lightweight, was floored late in the third frame with two right crosses to the jaw. He bounded to his feet only to face a left and right to the jaw that left him groggy. Another hard right to the same place put the Babe down for the count.

Terris weighed 132½ and Herman 133¼.

MUCKERMAN-CUSHMAN BOWLERS WIN TITLE

By winning 41 out of 63 matches the team representing the Muckerman and Cushman Agency captured the championship in the St. Louis Insurance Bowling League, which just completed its season. Six home runs marked the opening day and those were divided between two teams. The Giants gathered three of them in pounding out a 15 to 7 victory over the Phillies at Philadelphia. Rogers Hornsby, late of the Cardinals, came through with one of them while George Harper and Bill Terry contributed the others.

The world champion Cardinals lost to the Chicago Cubs when the home team unlimbered a few oversize howitzers in the hitting of Webb and Grimm. Webb came through with two home runs and Grimm crashed out another. The score was 10 to 1.

Ruth Out for Pinch Hitter.

Babe Ruth was left behind in the heavy hitting parade when he could not get his eye on the ball as the Yankees met and defeated the Athletics at Yankee Stadium. He struck out twice and was benched in the sixth for a pinch-hitter.

In the same game, Ty Cobb appeared and showed some of the base running that has made him one of the outstanding figures in the national game for years. He beat out a bunt, got to third by a hair with a hook slide, and later scored. The Yanks beat the McGillicuddy team of old-time talent by 8 to 3 before a record opening crowd of 65,000.

Ruth's Removal for Pinch Hitter Features Yanks' 8 to 3 Victory

And Rogers Hornsby Opens Up With a Home Run—Bad Day for Pitchers Except in Case of Old Jess Petty and Waite Hoyt—President Coolidge Attends Washington Opening.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 13.—The heavy artillery of baseball is in action.

Salvos of basehits resounded yesterday in the ball parks of seven cities where the opening games of the big league season were played before some 230,000 fans.

Six home runs marked the opening day and those were divided between two teams. The Giants gathered three of them in pounding out a 15 to 7 victory over the Phillies at Philadelphia. Rogers Hornsby, late of the Cardinals, came through with one of them while George Harper and Bill Terry contributed the others.

It was a bad day for pitchers, but a few names stood out, most of them names of veterans. Old Jess Petty pitched sterling ball for Uncle Robbie's clan at Boston where the Broklynites beat the Braves, 6 to 2. He held them hitless through the sixth inning and allowed only seven safeties in the entire game.

Another good pitching performance was turned in by Waite Hoyt of the Yankees who turned down the Athletics with eight hits.

President Sees Opening Game.

The familiar figure of Walter Johnson was not in the box at Washington as the Senators downed the Red Sox 6 to 2, before President and Mrs. Coolidge. But Coveleski, another veteran, pitched good ball. Grover Cleveland Alexander, the Cardinal's iron man, fared not so well at Chicago and was forced out of the game in the third by the Cubs' heavy hitting.

A total attendance of approximately 230,000 for 7 games compared well with last year's mark of 214,000 in eight games.

The teams that won their openings were the Yanks, Giants, Robins, Cubs, Pirates, Senators and Indians. The Pittsburg sluggers nosed out the Reds, 2 to 1, and the Indians beat the White Sox 3 to 2. Rain prevented the Tiger-Browns game.

In his last recorded fight he lost to Dick Hyland in 1909 after breaking a bone in his hand.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 13.—Aurelio Herrera's death in San Francisco follows by just two days the passing of William H. Rothwell, known to the ring as "Young Corbett," another sterling gladiator of 20 years ago. Corbett died Sunday night in Denver at the age of 48.

On Jan. 12, 1906, Herrera and Corbett met in the ring at Los Angeles and the Mexican won by a knockout in the fifth. Corbett, conqueror of "Terrible Terry" McGovern, had lost the featherweight title two years before to Tommy Sullivan.

You May Be Right, Ralph.

WHEN Hornsby's tangles were cleared away, and Rogers' right to play his season through with the Giants was established, the writer suggested that Hornsby likely might become the National League rival of Babe Ruth. The short fence at the Polo Grounds it was suggested, might bring their home run hitting to equality while Hornsby ought to outbat Ruth to a certainty, in the averages.

The suggestion was made that Hornsby thus might rival Ruth as a drawing card and in salary.

Our idea is a dud apparently, as the following might indicate:

"Dear Mr. Wray:

"I think your statement that if Hornsby knocks 50 home runs this year and bats over .400, Ruth's star will become secondary, is insupportable. I do not believe you can reduce the respective drawing power of these two men to mathematics. It is only partly in that field. If you had Ruth fall to the .250 class of batters, your assumption would have a better basis. But even as a .250 batter, I believe Ruth is by far the more colorful player, by far the better showman.

"Hornsby is workmanlike. Ruth dramatizes himself most successfully. Physically, he is impressive. Huge torso, tapering legs. He's not as graceful as Douthit or Sisler; few are. But he does not fall far short.

"At the plate he makes a dashing picture. He is more noticeable than other ballplayers in ease of attitude and the axis he makes of himself for his powerful cut. On the base lines he is fast for a big man. In the field he is spectacular, both as to retrieving balls and in whistling strikes over the home plate to catch runners. He is to all other ball players, including Hornsby, what Tilden is to all other tennis players. Each stands out by reason of stature, ability and personal mannerisms.

Journeyman Hornsby.

"Hornsby, on the other hand, is a workmanlike player. He has a shambling, loose-jointed gait, and, although of good stature, he makes the pictorial mistake of letting his shoulders droop—which seemingly is a mark of the trade in the case of boxers and other professional athletes. At the plate, Hornsby stands so far from the rubber that it would appear impossible for him to reach a ball on the outside corner. I do not mean to say that the greatest batter in the world does not know how to bat, but I do mean to say that his stance is most disturbing to the fans. I have often heard them say: "Stand up to the plate'

"Thus there is a certain awkwardness about Hornsby and a certain thoroughly businesslike manner and a certain seeming lack of enthusiasm which makes him less pleasing to watch. When Ruth appears on the field he carries with him a flavor of romance. Hornsby seems an excellent ball player, going about his job as prosaically as a bricklayer goes about laying bricks. If you get what I mean. Therefore, I question that Hornsby will ever submerge Ruth's star.

* * *

It is true, Ralph, Hornsby may appear rather drab, at this writing. But when that great battery of New York word painters gets through gilding our hero, Hornsby, he may resemble more the showman you idolize than the mere ball player he is.

Give 'em time.

* * *

Other Famous Journeymen.

HORNSBY is not the only star to do his stuff in conventional style. We might mention Napoleon Lajoie of other days, who held down the same post as Hornsby.

In his time Lajoie was another Hornsby. His hitting was tremendous, but unostentatious. His fielding was unhurried and without "grand stand" effects. Larry was always in front of the drive before the ball reached him. He made all plays seem easy. He did his stuff without thrills.

* * *

And yet, until Ty Cobb became famous, Larry stood out head and shoulders above every other player in his league. Contemporaneous with Lajoie was an equally successful and far more colorful star in the field—Hans Wagner.

Wagner was the Babe Ruth of his day—only more so. Honus had a tremendous long "barrel" of a body with a great depth of chest. Pendant from his broad shoulders were two gorilla-like arms, which hung down until the enormous, ham-like hands reached almost to his knees. His legs were hopelessly bowed, but powerful. Topped by a granite-like head, Wagner presented a figure unique in baseball.

* * *

Lajoie Equally Popular.

HE was a tremendous hitter, like Lajoie; he could field like a demon at shortstop, first base or the outfield. He had a record of having played every position on the club in championship games.

Probably no short fielder ever pulled the sensational stuff that Wagner displayed at short.

Despite all this color, Lajoie divided popularity of his day with Wagner—and some will say he had the edge on his rival.

Hornsby may, after all, play the role of Lajoie and Ruth of Wagner.

Impressive Record of Justice F. Puts Him in Favored Class for Derby

NO. 4 — JUSTICE F.

By CLEMENT GLAUB.

Justice F was bred in England by Ben Irish, whose Papyrus figured in the international match race several seasons back, and was sold as a yearling as Saratoga in 1925 for $6700 to William Daniel. He began his racing career at New Orleans, Jan. 1, 1926 and finished second in his first effort under colors. His next race was in the Louisiana Juvenile Stakes and in this he was caught in a jam with several other baby racers and was so cut and knocked about that it was decided to give him a long rest.

When he came back to the races in 1927 he was in top form and after running third on opening day at Fairgrounds, won five races, at distances from six furlongs to one mile and 70 yards, in quick succession. Justice F was one of the choices for the New Orleans Handicap but, after getting away rather poorly in the field of 25 runners and closing a big gap, finished fourth to Cotlogomor, Shark and Banton, Justice F conceded both weight and age to the first three horses to finish.

The long hard trip to Tijuana did not dull his speed, for he came out in the Derby there and made every post a winning one, though he was all out to beat the fast closing Sir Harry, by a head. On the form of this race he is one of the choices for the Kentucky Derby.

Justice F is a more stoutly bred horse than Calaris, last year's wonder horse, which won both the Tijuana Derby and Coffroth Handicap as a 3-year-old. Abbott's Trace, his sire, is a son of Tracery and had a fair racing record in the colors of Lord Dewar. He fell in the English Derby but later defeated the Derby winner, Spion followed this victory with triumphs in the Newmarket, St. Leger and the Liverpool Cup.

(Tomorrow—Fair Star.)

DOWN THE STRETCH

Avoids Accident.

CANDY QUEEN, H. Teller Archbald's nominee for the Kentucky and Fairmount Derbies, narrowly avoided a collision, while working out at Churchill Downs Sunday morning. The filly was galloped an easy mile over a sloppy track and when she reached the half-mile a 2-year-old got in her way and her rider, Leo McDermott, was forced to pull her up sharply to avoid a collision and possibly injury to Archibald's crack filly. Had Candy Queen been going at a rapid pace, an accident would have been unavoidable. Candy Queen's fractional time for the mile was: :27 1-5, :40 3-5, :54, 1:21 3-5, 1:50.

Interest in Candidates.

THERE is a great deal of talk around Bowie between races on the candidates for the Kentucky Derby and Preakness Stakes. Scapa Flow is working well at Pimlico, as is his stable mate, Point Breeze, another Man o' War colt. Scott Harlan, trainer for the W. M. Jeffords stables, will take the two racers to Kentucky for the Derby. While these have not been so much in the limelight as others of the candidates which are training for the event in the West, there is no doubt but that Scapa Flow especially will be heard from in Louisville. Like others of his breed, Scapa Flow will go most any route, and the mile and one-quarter of the Derby will not prove too far. Scapa Flow is well advanced in his training.

* * *

Jockey Louis Schaefer, who rode during the winter at Tijuana, will ride for William Garth this spring. Schaefer has earned some reputation as a rider of 2-year-olds and that makes him of especial value to the Virginia turfman. Schaefer was brought to Maryland along with Jockey R. Peternell by Preston Burch, who turned Schaefer over to Garth.

* * *

Peternell Ahead.

JOCKEY R. PETERNELL, with eight winners, enjoys the lead in the race for the gold medal offered by the Bowie Racing Association to the jockey riding the greatest number of winners at its meeting.

* * *

Jockeys Maiben and Coltiletti will ride during the meeting at Havre de Grace, which opens April 16. Maiben, who is recovering from an injury to his hand, will be astride the horses of W. J. Salmon, while Coltiletti, under contract to W. R. Coe, will ride for the W. M. Jeffords' string. Coltiletti has been granted permission to ride for Jeffords as Coe does not intend to race his horses until the opening of the Metropolitan racing season.

Quickstep Draws Well.

ENTRIES for the Quickstep Handicap, $5000 added, at three-quarters, to be run at Churchill Downs during the spring meeting, has drawn 93 nominations, which include the best all-age horses that are quartered in the Middle West. Three-year-olds dominate the entries for the sixteenth running of the Quickstep. Hal Price Headley's Helen's Babe, winner of the event in 1926 and Mose Goldblatt's Arcady, winner in 1925, are again entered. Goldblatt has also named Good Shepherd and Teak. E. R. Bradley heads the list of nominators with six while Edward B. McLean and Harry Payne Whitney are represented by five each.

OTTAWA AND BOSTON MEET TONIGHT IN ICE HOCKEY SERIES

By the Associated Press.

OTTAWA, April 13. — When the Ottawa Senators and the Boston Bruins skate into action here tonight in the fourth game of their series for the world hockey title, there will be no favorite.

The two sextets have battled twice to a tie thus far. Ottawa holds the only decision and if the Senators win tonight the series will be theirs. Boston can be counted upon for a valiant attempt to win, or at least to tie, to force the playing of a fifth game.

Despite the furious pace of the preceding games, all members of both teams are in fine shape and will line up with the same arrays as Monday, when they fought to a 1-1 tie.

Wrigley Suggests $50,000 Purse for Marathon Swim

By the Associated Press

TORONTO, Ontario, April 13.

A MARATHON swim, carrying to the winner a $50,000 purse, will be a feature of the Canadian National Exhibition, under plans announced today.

William Wrigley Jr., sponsor of George Young, who won the $25,000 Catalina Channel swim, is urging the directors to hold the contest, and extend invitations to European swimmers.

Risko and Rojas Matched.

By the Associated Press.

WILKES-BARRE, Pa., April 13.—Johnny Risko, Cleveland, and Romero Rojas, Argentine heavyweight, today were matched for a 10-round decision bout here Tuesday night, the Armory A. C. announced.

JIMMY SLATTERY MAY BOX K. O. PHIL KAPLAN ON RICKARD'S CARD

NEW YORK, April 13. — Jimmy Slattery, shifty Buffalo light heavyweight, signed today with Tex Rickard's matchmaker for a series of three bouts at the Yankee Stadium this spring and summer. The first will be one of the preliminaries to the Sharkey-Maloney heavyweight setto, May 19, probably with Leo Lomski of Aberdeen, Wash., or K. O. Phil Kaplan of New York as an opponent.

Solly Seeman Draws Suspension

New York Lightweight Handed Five-Months Set Down in Wisconsin.

By the Associated Press.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., April 13.—Solly Seeman, New York lightweight boxer, was suspended for five months by the Wisconsin boxing commission today, it was announced by Walter H. Liginger, secretary. Billy McCarney, manager for Seeman, was suspended for three months.

Three months of the Eastern boxer's suspension is for failure to post a certified check as his forfeit for his scheduled bout with Spug Meyers here April 8, while the other two months resulted when Seeman misinformed the commission as to his condition.

SLATTERY MUST WIN TWO BOUTS TO GET TITLE CHANCE

RISKO AND M'TIGUE TO MEET HIM

Tex Rickard Planning Campaign to Develop a Challenger for Light Heavyweight Crown.

Special to the Post-Dispatch

NEW YORK, April 13.—Jimmy Slattery, the Buffalo boy with the weeping willow defense, is coming back to the local rings and he's going to bring brave old Mike McTigue with him. Tex Rickard, through Jess McMahon, has signed Slattery for three fights, his first appearance to be in the semifinal to the Maloney and Sharkey bout at the Yankee Stadium.

Mike may not be his opponent on that occasion. More likely it will be Johnny Risko, the Cleveland baker. Jimmy had John on the floor and well on the way to a bad whipping when Johnny accidentally fouled Slattery and was disqualified. Then Mike will step in and fight the winner. Tex believing that Jimmy will repeat the Buffalo performance with another victory over Risko.

Jack de Mave, Billy Stribling or Tommy Loughran may get the third bout with Slattery, providing the dancing one from Buffalo gets by the first two opponents.

That Mike McTigue is coming back will be good news for the fans. Instead of having Mike for his old-time dilly-dally methods they've come to worship the old codger because of his gameness and willingness. They can't forget his remarkable battle against Jack Sharkey and the unfortunate accident which made it necessary to stop the bout when Mike was booming along with honors at least even.

Slattery Regains Form.

Slattery's return to his old time form is another item for the tired boxing fan. Always a pleasing performer, they say in Buffalo that his long rest and his strict attention to training when he began to condition himself has brought a remarkable transformation in the boy.

But the best is yet to come with regards to Slattery. If young James is brilliantly successful against at least three and perhaps only two of the men mentioned as possible opponents he will be asked to box Jack Delaney. That invitation will make Jimmy break right out in a snicker, for he vows that men may come and men may go, but he will always go on whipping handsome Jack.

That boils Jack and Peter Reilly right out at the edges of their collars, but James is certain that he can repeat and repeat. More power to a young man who has decided opinions in these matters.

Chapman-Finnegan Bout Ordered.

The Boxing Commission suggested yesterday that Honeyboy Finnegan and Red Chapman get together and settle for all time their long delayed argument about featherweight title pretensions.

The outdoor dates were handed out yesterday. Jack Fugazy will be permitted to conduct his open-air shows at Ebbets Field on Wednesday nights, with the exception of the opening night when Tommy Loughran and Billy Stribling meet. Tuesday, May 3, was allotted to Fugazy for that show.

Thursday nights were reserved for Tex Rickard and his Yankee Stadium displays of fisticuffs. The first is to be on May 19, when Sharkey and Maloney box.

Tony Canzoneri of Williamsburg, uncrowned bantamweight champion of the world, filed a contract with the commission to box Vic Barrone of the West Side in the main ten-round bouts at the St. Nicholas arena next Monday night.

In the two other tens Barney Shaw will meet Charlie Becker for the middleweight championship of the West Side, while Johnny Grosso, Mount Vernon heavyweight, battles Nick Sadil of Passaic.

International to Open Today With Bolstered Teams

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 13.—With every club reorganized and bolstered by up-and-coming youngsters or former stars of the major leagues, the International circuit opens its season today with games at Jersey City, Reading and Newark.

Heine Groh and Rabbit Maranville will be seen in the Rochester infield as the tribe meets the Newark Bears at Newark. The Sketers will entertain the Toronto Leafs, last year's champions, while Buffalo's Bisons play at Reading. Baltimore's Orioles open tomorrow at home against the Syracuse Stars. Playing shortstop for Baltimore in the place of Joe Boley, who moved up to the Atheletics this season, will be Everett Scott, holder of the famous record of more than 1000 consecutive games i nthe major leagues.

O'FARRELL'S ANSWERS

"If a thrown ball passes a baseman, may a runner advance only one base? Also what happens if a thrown ball passes a first baseman or a third baseman and hits a spectator?—C. A. A.

The runner may advance as far as he can go at his own risk when a thrown ball happens to get away from a baseman unless there is a ground rule. When the ball touches a spectator after coming out of the field of play it is said to be blocked. Read the rule regarding a block ball in the official guide.

Bases are full and there are two out. Catcher drops the ball on the third strike. Are all safe?—H. R.

Not unless the bases are regularly run and regularly made.

Runners are on third and second. Two are out. Batter hits a single and the man on third scores. Runner on second follows along and a fielder throws the ball home to catch the runner. He fails to get him. Pitcher throws the ball to second to get the runner who made the base hit and is trying for second. Runner is put out. Does the score count?—K. M., Alton, Ill.

Both of the runs count as the play is described. The runner on third scores with ease. The runner on second scores if the runner from first to second is put out after the run is made. As long as the batter had touched first base all runs were validated if they got home in time.

Thistle Gold And Nedda Show Liking for Mud

Collins' Derby Candidates Only Two Asked fo r Speed at Lexington.

Special to the Post-Dispatch

LEXINGTON, Ky., April 13.—A sloppy track and a steady rain prevented any serious attempts at speed at the Kentucky Association course this morning and the majority of horses were let down only for light gallops.

Only two Derby candidates braved the track and the weather. George Collins' Nedda, bay or brown filly by Negoafol and Lady Fair Play, showed a liking for the going and traveled three-quarters in 1:18 3-5 in the handiest kind of manner. Thistle Gold, by Polymelian and Jamma, went the same distance in 1:21.

Nedda went the first quarter in :24 4-5 and the half in :51 2-5. Thistle Gold breezed along passing the quarter pole in :26 and the half in :53.

Out of the approximately 900 horses in training here, only about 50 tried for speed this morning.

No exceptional exhibitions were turned in although several went their routes in handy fashion.

PRINCIPIA INTRODUCES SPRING GRID PRACTICE

Spring football practice will start this afternoon at Principia Academy, according to an announcement made by Athletic Director Lee McCandless. The squad will be coached by Al Marquard, who returns as football coach after a year's absence. This is the first time that the Academy has ever held spring football practice.

Coach Marquard will instruct all candidates for the squad except those who are at present on the track and field squad. The track men have such a heavy schedule that they will be unable to report for football practice this spring. Among the football candidates of last season on the track team are Joe Deal, end; Robert Richardson, halfback; Charles Coyle, quarterback; Kenneth Hellyer, halfback, and John Dingee, fullback.

Pentathlon for Swimmers at Washington U.

A SWIMMING pantathlon has been scheduled for Washington U. intramural competition, Willis H. Summers, intramural director, has announced. The special program outlined will begin April 11 and will continue five days with events to be run off in the following order:

50-yard free style.
100-yard free style.
220-yard free style.
200-yard breast stroke.
150-yard breast stroke.

The events are thrown open to all university students, Summers states, and a large entry list is expected.

TIGER FLOWERS LOGICAL OPPONENT FOR SHADE BEFORE TITLE BOUT

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, April 13.—Only Tiger Flowers stands today between Dave Shade of California and a championship fight with the middleweight title holder, Mickey Walker.

Shade last night outboxed Phil Krug of Paterson, N. J., in 10 rounds, getting the decision of two judges and the referee. Krug, who had held Shade to a draw in a previous fight when both were welters, was the last battler in the middleweight division, excepting Flowers, to challenge Shade's right to a chance at the title.

Billy Petrolle, the Fargo Express whose past performances have boosted him to a place among the lightweight challengers, was given pause in his pursuit of the title. Freddie Mueller of Buffalo, N. Y., accepting the assignment on three hours' notice after illness caused the scheduled opponent, King to withdraw, held Petrolle draw and outboxed him most of way.

Special Female Race Features Dog Program

Event Will Determine Best Female at Track; Dick Martley Pays $85.20.

A stake race for female racers and a style show for the women are on tonight's program at the Madison greyhound track.

The stake race, first of its kind staged on the International Circuit, engages the best of the sex and eventually will determine whether the female of the canine species is faster than the male. Lady Splinters, owned by Mrs. Cora Rhine, looks like the class and with a good break out of the one box will beat them around the turn.

After that come Knocklofty, one of Charley Sterling's best, and Moving Trigger of Show Me kennels. Models, garbed in what milady really should wear for Easter, will lead the dogs to the post and later parade in the grandstand.

In the five-sixteenths, Honeymoon Hawke of the Show Me kennels, should lead the parade. Laid up with a broken toe, this fast son of Golden Hawke is back in good form and gives promise of becoming a dependable racer. He has only the erratic Red Concern and Flossie Mac to beat. The latter is fast and may need this effort to improve her condition.

Special Female Race Features Dog Program

Event Will Determine Best Female at Track; Dick Martley Pays $85.20.

A stake race for female racers and a style show for the women are on tonight's program at the Madison greyhound track.

The stake race, first of its kind staged on the International Circuit, engages the best of the sex and eventually will determine whether the female of the canine species is faster than the male. Lady Splinters, owned by Mrs. Cora Rhine, looks like the class and with a good break out of the one box will beat them around the turn.

After that come Knocklofty, one of Charley Sterling's best, and Moving Trigger of Show Me kennels. Models, garbed in what milady really should wear for Easter, will lead the dogs to the post and later parade in the grandstand.

In the five-sixteenths, Honeymoon Hawke of the Show Me kennels, should lead the parade. Laid up with a broken toe, this fast son of Golden Hawke is back in good form and gives promise of becoming a dependable racer. He has only the erratic Red Concern and Flossie Mac to beat. The latter is fast and may need this effort to improve her condition.

Old Martlow Punch, a tough customer over the futurity route, ran such a good race in his first start that he is the logical choice in the sixth. Clarence Baum's Barford, a cripple, is fast at the distance and might get it all. On his last race, a close second, Tecumseh Blue should not finish out of the money.

What looks like a winner at a price is Tor Danger in the second. This recent arrival from England comes of excellent lineage and won his "hamburger," or debut race, in 19 1-5 seconds over a heavy track. Last time out, he slipped all over the track just after the start and then ran second most of the way. With an even break in luck, Tor Danger should roll in tonight and pay a fancy price. Old Matt Brady and Pantaloon loom up as the contenders.

Last night Dick Martley paid $85.20 for each $2 straight ticket, setting a high mark for the meeting.

Washington Cage Mentor Attacks Change in Rules

The dribbling restriction on basketball play, recently adopted by the National Rules Committee, has brought a vigorous protest from Washington U. athletic headquarters, Coach Donald S. White, former Purdue star, declaring the new ruling highly objectionable.

"The Missouri Valley Conference should not sanction the change," White declared, "and I should not be greatly surprised if it was rejected in both the Valley and the Big Ten Conferences." The particular restriction objected to limits a player from dribbling the ball on the floor more than once before passing.

Any benefit to the game through the ruling will be lost by the fact that play will be greatly slowed up, White declared. The passing of much clever work, such as side stepping and dribbling, reverse turns and dribble-ins, White declared would leave the game more drab for the spectator.

May Help Team Play.

Outstanding weaknesses in the ruling were easily discernible, the coach stated. A player intercepting a passed ball deep in his own territory must dribble once and shoot even if there are no opposing players between himself and the goal and no teammate to receive his pass. Similarly, where a clever forward can now draw the backguard out and, dribbling around, score his own goal, the security of the guard will be greatly strengthened under the new ruling.

White admitted that the new ruling would tend to decrease individualism among the players but held that at the same time it would hamper in too great measure the style of individuals around whom great teams are often fashioned. Teams which have found their scoring punch in offenses led by brilliant dribblers will lose much of the spectacular and fire of their play.

The new ruling will not affect the Bear style of play as much as other quintets in the valley, White thinks. The fact that Washington employs a long pass from position to position with but little dribbling gives White reason to believe that his veterans will have little trouble adjusting themselves to the new ruling if enforced.

Chance to Speed Pass Play.

Rule changes must not occur too frequently, Dr. Edmunds declared in a few terse comments on the restriction. The Bear athletic director canceded the new ruling a chance to speed up pass-play but withheld any favorable comment. The removal of dribble freedom, he declared, took the game back to the days when forwards, center and guards were forced to remain in their respective zones on the court.

Pershing and Foch Present at Paris Ring Show

Carpentier Boxes Bombardier Wells on War Veterans' Program.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, April 13.—The presence in the ring of Georges Carpentier and Bombardier Wells, and of Marshal Foch, Gen. Pershing and United States Ambassador Herrick in the audience, brought a rich harvest to the French Veterans' Association and the Paris post of the American Legion, joint organizers of a gala boxing festival at the Cirque de Paris last night.

In addition to a lively exhibition bout between the two ex-champions, the program included appearances of Al Brown, Panaman featherweight; Porches, the French welterweight; Romero-Rojas, of Chile; "Spider" Plander, French flyweight; the famous French fencer, Lucien Gaudin, and Reggie MacNamara, American six-day cyclist.

A program, autographed by all the notables present brought 4000 francs when it was sold at auction.

TOD MORGAN TO MEET FOLEY IN TITLE BOUT

By the Associated Press.

VANCOUVER, B. C., April 13.—Tod Morgan, world's junior lightweight champion, has announced he will meet Vic Foley of Vancouver in a title bout here the middle of May. A Foley-Morgan championship match had been scheduled here this month, but was called off last week when the title holder's father died.

HOMER HINE GIVES BOND IN ROBBERY CASE

Army Deserter Apparently Intends to Stick It Out in St. Louis.

The surrender yesterday afternoon of "High Hat Homer" Hine, 26 years old, a salesman, indicates that he will, as his attorney announced, stick it out in St. Louis and fight a first-degree robbery charge and a Government indictment charging forgery.

Hine gave himself up to detectives at the Municipal Courts building and was released shortly after 5 o'clock on a $10,000 robbery bond signed by a professional bondsman and returnable April 22. He is under a $2500 Federal bond, returnable tomorrow before United States Commissioner Atkins.

It is expected that the Government's case will be continued as authorities at New York have agreed to allow the State authorities to try Hine first. The debonair army deserter and hotel dancer seemed in good spirits yesterday. He declined to talk to reporters.

Today Hine voluntarily reported at Police Headquarters to give robbery victims a chance to identify him. No one appeared, however, and after a wait of more than an hour Hine left, telling Chief of Detectives Kaiser that he would appear whenever desired.

THE following article by Felix Frankfurter, professor of law at Hardvard University, is republished in the Post-Dispatch by arrangement with the Atlantic Monthly. Its author, who has served the Government as an attorney and as counsel and adviser on many important legal and economic boards, particularly during the World War, has woven from the matter-of-fact record of the Sacco-Vanzetti case a story more absorbing than a detective novel. His article is reproduced verbatim, typographically and textually.

FOR more than six years the Sacco-Vanzetti case has been before the courts of Massachusetts. In a state were ordinary murder trials are promptly dispatched such extraordinary delay in itself challenges attention. The fact is that a long succession of disclosures has aroused interest far beyond the boundaries of Massachusetts and even of the United States, until the case has become one of those rare causes celebres which are of international concern. The aim of this paper is to give in the briefest compass an accurate resume of the facts of the case from its earliest stages to its present posture.

I.

At about 3 o'clock in the afternoon of April 15, 1920, Parmenter, a paymaster, and Berardelli, his guard, were fired upon and killed by two men armed with pistols, as they were carrying two boxes containing the payroll of the shoe factory of Slater & Morrill, amounting to $15,776.51, from the company's office building to the factory through the main street of South Braintree, Mass. As the murder was being committed, a car containing several other men drew up to the spot. The murderers threw the two boxes into the car, jumped in themselves, and were driven away at high speed across some nearby railroad tracks. Two days later this car was found abandoned in woods at a distance from the scene of the crime.

At the time of the Braintree holdup the police were investigating a similar crime in the neighboring town of Bridgewater. In both cases a gang was involved. In both they made off in a car. In both eyewitnesses believed the criminals to be Italians. In the Bridgewater holdup the car had left the scene in the direction of Cochesett. Chief Stewart of Bridgewater was therefore, at the time of the Braintree murder, on the trail of an Italian owning or driving a car in Cochesett. He found his man in one Boda, whose car was in a garage awaiting repairs. Stewart instructed the garage proprietor to telephone to the police when anyone came to fetch it. Pursuing his theory, Stewart found that Boda had been living in Cochesett with a radical named Coacci. Now on April 16, 1920, which was the day after the Braintree murders, Stewart, at the instance of the Department of Justice, then engaged in the wholesale rounding-up of Reds, had been to the house of Coacci to see why he had failed to appear at a hearing regarding his deportation. He found Coacci packing a trunk and apparently very anxious to leave. At the time, Coacci's trunk and his haste to depart for Italy were not connected in Chief Stewart's mind with the Braintree affair. But when, subsequently, the tracks of a smaller car were found near the murder car, he surmised that this car was Boda's; and in the light of his later discoveries he jumped to the conclusion that Coacci, Boda's pal, and "skipped with the swag." As a matter of fact, the contents of the trunk were found eventually to be wholly innocent. In the meantime, however, Chief Stewart continued to work on his theory that whosoever called for Boda's car at Johnson's garage would be suspect of the Braintree crime. "The Portentous Case of Sacco and Vanzetti" — By Felix Frankfurter

A Complete Exposition of the Trial Which Has Aroused World-Wide Interest

Reproduced From the Atlantic Monthly

Testimony, Cross-Examination, Arguments and Judge's Charge Upon Which Convictions Rested

How "Positive" Identifications Were Made; the Madeiros Confession and Its Credibility; the Effect of War-Time Patriotism.

THE following article by Felix Frankfurter, professor of law at Hardvard University, is republished in the Post-Dispatch by arrangement with the Atlantic Monthly. Its author, who has served the Government as an attorney and as counsel and adviser on many important legal and economic boards, particularly during the World War, has woven from the matter-of-fact record of the Sacco-Vanzetti case a story more absorbing than a detective novel. His article is reproduced verbatim, typographically and textually.

FOR more than six years the Sacco-Vanzetti case has been before the courts of Massachusetts. In a state were ordinary murder trials are promptly dispatched such extraordinary delay in itself challenges attention. The fact is that a long succession of disclosures has aroused interest far beyond the boundaries of Massachusetts and even of the United States, until the case has become one of those rare causes celebres which are of international concern. The aim of this paper is to give in the briefest compass an accurate resume of the facts of the case from its earliest stages to its present posture.

I.

At about 3 o'clock in the afternoon of April 15, 1920, Parmenter, a paymaster, and Berardelli, his guard, were fired upon and killed by two men armed with pistols, as they were carrying two boxes containing the payroll of the shoe factory of Slater & Morrill, amounting to $15,776.51, from the company's office building to the factory through the main street of South Braintree, Mass. As the murder was being committed, a car containing several other men drew up to the spot. The murderers threw the two boxes into the car, jumped in themselves, and were driven away at high speed across some nearby railroad tracks. Two days later this car was found abandoned in woods at a distance from the scene of the crime.

At the time of the Braintree holdup the police were investigating a similar crime in the neighboring town of Bridgewater. In both cases a gang was involved. In both they made off in a car. In both eyewitnesses believed the criminals to be Italians. In the Bridgewater holdup the car had left the scene in the direction of Cochesett. Chief Stewart of Bridgewater was therefore, at the time of the Braintree murder, on the trail of an Italian owning or driving a car in Cochesett. He found his man in one Boda, whose car was in a garage awaiting repairs. Stewart instructed the garage proprietor to telephone to the police when anyone came to fetch it. Pursuing his theory, Stewart found that Boda had been living in Cochesett with a radical named Coacci. Now on April 16, 1920, which was the day after the Braintree murders, Stewart, at the instance of the Department of Justice, then engaged in the wholesale rounding up of Reds, had been to the house of Coacci to see why he had failed to appear at a hearing regarding his deportation. He found Coacci packing a trunk and apparently very anxious to leave. At the time, Coacci's trunk and his haste to depart for Italy were not connected in Chief Stewart's mind with the Braintree affair. But when, subsequently, the tracks of a smaller car were found near the murder car, he surmised that this car was Boda's; and in the light of his later discoveries he jumped to the conclusion that Coacci, Boda's pal, and 'skipped with the swag.' As a matter of fact, the contents of the trunk were found eventually to be wholly innocent. In the meantime, however, Chief Stewart continued to work on his theory that whosoever called for Boda's car at Johnson's garage would be suspect of the Braintree crime. On the night of May 5, Boda and three other Italians did in fact call. To explain how they came to do so we must go back a few days.

During the proceedings for the wholesale deportation of reds under Attorney-General Palmer in the spring of 1920, one Salsedo was held incommunicado in a room in the New York offices of the Department of Justice, on the fourteenth floor of a Park Row building. This Salsedo was a radical friend of Boda and his companions. On May 4 these friends learned that Salsedo had been found dead on the sidewalk outside the Park Row building. Already frightened by the red raids, they bestirred themselves to "hide the literature and notify the friends against the Federal ploice." For this purpose an automobile was needed, and they turned to Boda.

Such were the circumstances under which the four Italians appeared on the evening of May 5 at the Johnson garage. Two of them were Sacco and Vanzetti. The car was not available and the Italians left, but the police were notified. Sacco and Vanzetti were arrested on a street car, Boda escaped, and the fourth, Orciani, was arrested the next day.

Chief Stewart at once sought to apply his theory of the commission of the two "jobs" by one gang. The theory, however, broke down. Orciani had been at work on the days of both crimes, so he was let go. Sacco, a shoe operative, in steady employment at a shoe factory in Stoughton, had taken a day off, and this was April 15. Hence, while he could not be charged with the Bridgewater crime, he was charged with the Braintree murder. Vanzetti, as a fish peddler at Plymouth and his own employer, could not give the same kind of alibi for either day, and so he was held for both crimes. Stewart's theory that the crime was committed by these Italian radicals was not shared by the head of the State police, who always maintained that it was the work of professionals.

[In this account of the joint trial of Sacco and Vanzetti the details of Vanzetti's separate trial cannot find a place. But Vanzetti's prosecution for the Bridgewater job was merely a phase of the South Braintree affair.]

Charged with the crime of murder on May 5, Sacco and Vanzetti were indicted on Sept. 14, 1920, and put on trial May 21, 1921, at Dedham, Norfolk County. The setting of the trial, in the courthouse opposite the old home of Fisher Ames, furnished a striking contrast to the background and antecedents of the prisoners. Dedham is a quiet residential suburb, inhabited by well-to-do Bostonians, with a surviving element of New England small farmers. Part of the jury was specially selected by the Sheriff's deputies from Masonic gatherings and from persons whom the deputies deemed 'representative citizens,' 'substantial' and 'intelligent.' The presiding Judge was Webster Thayer of Worcester. The chief counsel for these Italians was a Westerner, a radical and a professional defender of radicals. In opinion, as well as in fact, he was an outsider. Unfamiliar with the traditions of the Massachusetts bench, not even a member of the Massachusetts bar, the characteristics of Judge Thayer unknown to him, Fred H. Moore found neither professional nor personal sympathies between himself and the Judge. So far as the relations between court and counsel seriously, even if unconsciously, affect the current of a trial, Moore was a factor of irritation. Sacco and Vanzetti spoke very broken English and their testimony shows how often they misunderstood the questions put to them. In fact, an interpreter had to be used, whose conduct raised such doubts that the defendants brought their own interpreter to check his questions and answers. The trial lasted nearly seven weeks, and on July 14, 1921, Sacco and Vanzetti were found guilty of murder in the first degree.

II

So far as the crime is concerned, we are dealing with a conventional case of pay-roll robbery. At the trial the killing of Parmenter and Berardelli was undisputed. The only issue was the identity of the murderers. Were Sacco and Vanzetti two of the assailants of Parmenter and Berardilli, or were they not?

On this issue there was at the trial a mass of conflicting evidence. Fifty-nine witnesses testified for the Commonwealth and 99 for the defendants. The evidence offered by the Commonwealth was not the same against both defendants. The theory of the prosecution was that Sacco did the actual shooting while Vanzetti sat in the car as one of the collaborators in a conspiracy to murder. Witnesses testified to having seen both defendants in South Braintree on the morning of April 15; they claimed to recognize Sacco as the man who shot the guard Barardelli and to have seen him subsequently escape in the car. Expert testimony (the character of which, in the light of subsequent events, constitutes one of the most important features of the case and will be dealt with later) was offered seeking to connect one of four bullets removed from Berardelli's body with the Colt pistol found on Sacco at the time of his arrest. As to Vanzetti the Commonwealth adduced evidence placing him in the murder car. Moreover, the Commonwealth introduced the conduct of the defendants, as evinced by pistols found on their persons and lies admittedly told by them when arrested, as further proof of identification, in that such conduct revealed "consciousness of guilt."

Weighing Sacco-Vanzetti Case

GOV. ALVAN T. FULLER.

The defense met the Commonwealth's eyewitnesses by other eyewitnesses, slightly more numerous and at least as well circumstanced to observe the assailants, who testified that the defendants were not the men they saw. Their testimony was confirmed by witnesses who proved the presence of Sacco and Vanzetti elsewhere at the time of the murder. Other witnesses supported Sacco's testimony that on April 15—the day that he was away from work—he was in Boston seeing about a passport to Italy, whither he was planning shortly to return to visit his recently bereaved father. The truth of that statement was supported by an official of the Italian consulate in Boston, who deposed that Sacco visited his consulate at an hour that made it impossible for him to have been one of the Braintree murder gang. The claim of Vanzetti that on April 15 he was pursuing his customary trade as fish peddler was sustained by a number of witnesses who had been his customers that day.

From this summary it must be evident that the trustworthiness of the testimony which placed Sacco and Vanzetti in South Braintree on April 15 is the foundation of the case.

1. As to Sacco:

The character of the testimony of the five witnesses who definitely identified Sacco as in the car or on the spot at the time of the murders demands critical attention. These witnesses were Mary Splaine, Frances Devlin, Lola Andrews, Louis Pelzer, Carlos E. Goodridge.

1. Splaine and Devlin were working together on the second floor of the Slater & Morrill factory, with windows giving on the railroad crossing about 60 feet away. Both heard the shot, ran to the window, and saw an automobile crossing the tracks. Splaine's identification of Sacco as one of the occupants of this escaping car was one of the chief reliances of the prosecution. Viewing the scene from a distance of from 60 to 80 feet, she saw a man previously unknown to her in a car traveling at the rate of from 15 to 18 miles per hour, and she saw him for only a distance of about 30 feet—that is to say, for from one and a half to three seconds. Yet after more than a year she testified:

> The man that appeared between the back of the front seat and the back seat was a man slightly taller than the witness. He weighed possibly from 140 to 145 pounds. He was muscular, an active-looking man. His left hand was a good-sized hand, a hand that denoted strength.

Q. So that the hand you said you saw where. A. The left hand that was placed on the back of the front seat. He had a gray, what I thought was a shirt—had a grayish, like navy color, and the face was what we would call clear-cut, clean-cut face. Through here (indicating) was a little narrow, just a little narrow. The forehead was high. The hair was brushed back and it was between, I should think, two inches and two and one-half inches in length and had dark eyebrows, but the complexion was a white, peculiar white that looked greenish.

Q. Is that the same man you saw at Brockton? A. It is.

Q. Are you sure? A. Positive.

The startling acuity of Splaine's vision was, as a matter of fact, the product of a year's reflection. Immediately after Sacco's arrest the police, in violation of approved police methods for the identification of suspects, brought Sacco alone into Splaine's presence. Then followed in about three weeks the preliminary hearing at which Sacco and Vanzetti were bound over for the grand jury. At this hearing—only 40 days after the crime—Splaine was unable to identify Sacco.

Q. 'You don't feel certain enough in your position to say he is the man? A. I don't think my opportunity afforded me the right to say he is the man.

When confronted with this contradiction between her uncertainty a month after her observation and her certainty more than a year after her observation, she first took refuge in a claim of inaccuracy in the transcript of the stenographer's minutes. This charge she later withdrew and finally maintained:

> From the observation I had of him in the Quincy court and the comparison of the man I saw in the machine, on reflection I was sure he was the same man.

Then followed this cross-examination:

Q. Your answer in the lower court was you didn't have opportunity to observe him. What did you mean when you said you didn't have opportunity sufficient, kindly tell us, you didn't have sufficient opportunity to observe him? A. Well, he was passing on the street.

Q. He was passing on the street and you didn't have sufficient opportunity to observe him to enable you to identify him? A. That is what I meant.

Q. That is the only opportunity you had? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You have had no other opportunity but that one fleeting glance? A. The remembrance of that.

Let Dr. Morton Prince, professor of dynamic psychology at Harvard University, comment on this testimony:

> I do not hesitate to say that the star witness for the Government testified, honestly enough, no doubt, to what was psychologically impossible. Miss Splaine testified, though she had only seen Sacco at the time of the shooting from a distance of about 60 feet for from one and one-half to three seconds in a motor car going at an increasing rate of speed at about 15 to 18 miles an hour; that she saw and at the end of a year she remembered and described 16 different details of his person, even to the size of his hand, the length of his hair as being between two and two and one-half inches long, and the shade of his eyebrows! Such perception and memory under such conditions can be easily proved to be psychologically impossible. Every psychologist knows that—so does Houdini. And what shall we think of the animus and honesty of the state that introduces such testimony to convict, knowing that the jury is too ignorant to disbelieve

2. Devlin, at Quincy a month after the murder, merely said, 'He (Sacco) looks very much like the man that stood up in the back seat shooting.'

Q. Do you say positively he is the man? A. I don't say positively.

At the trial, over a year later, she had no doubt and when asked, 'Have you at any time had any doubt of your identification of this man?' replied, 'No.' The obvious discrepancy of an identification reaching certainty by lapse of time, without any additional opportunity for verification, she explained thus: 'At the time there I had in my own mind that he was the man, but on account of the immensity of the crime and everything, I hated to say right out and out.'

The inherent improbability of making any such accurate identification on the basis of a fleeting glimpse of an unknown man in the confusion of a sudden alarm is affirmed by the testimony of two other eyewitnesses. Ferguson and Pierce, from a window above Splaine and Devlin, on the next floor of the factory, had substantially the same view. They found it impossible to make any identification.

3. Pelzer, a young shoe-cutter, swore that when he heard the shooting he pulled up his window, took a glance at the scene, and saw the man who murdered Berardelli.

Q. How long did you stay in the window? A. Oh, about—I would say about a minute. . .

Q. Then what did you do? A. I seen everything happen about that time, about in a minute.

This was the foundation for the following identification:

Q. Do you see in the courtroom the man you saw shooting Berardelli that day? A. Well, I wouldn't say it was him, but he is a dead image of him.

Witness points out Mr. Sacco

Q. Have you seen him since that time until you saw him in the courtroom? A. No, sir.

Witness was shown picture of him, by Mr. Williams today.

Q. You say you wouldn't say it is him, but he is the dead image of him? What do you mean by that? A. Well, he has got the same appearance.

On cross-examination Pelzer admitted that immediately after Sacco's arrest, on May 6 or 7, he was unable to make any identification. His inability in May 1920 to make the identification which he made in June 1921 was confirmed by three fellow workmen. Two of them testified that instead of pulling up the window he took shelter under a bench, and the third in addition said: "I heard him say that he did not see anybody."

Pelzer's tergiversations and falsifications extracted from the District Attorney, Mr. Katzmann, the following eulogy:—

> He was frank enough here, gentlemen, to own that he had twice falsified before to both sides, treating them equally and alike, and he gave you his reason. I think he added that he had never been in court before. If not, somebody has and I confused him. It is of little consequence. He is big enough and manly enough now to tell you of his prior falsehoods and his reasons for them. If you accept them, gentlemen, give such weight to his testimony as you say should be given.

4. Lola Andrews, a woman of doubtful reputation, testified that at about 11 a. m. on the day of the murders, while in company with a Mrs. Campbell, she saw an automobile standing outside the Slater & Morrill factory. She saw a "very light" man inside the car (concededly neither Sacco nor Vanzetti) and another man "bending over the hood of the car," whom she characterized as a "dark-complexioned man." She went into the factory in search of a job and at the time 'had no talk with either of the men." When she came out "15 minutes later" the dark man "was down under the car like he was fixing something" and she asked him the way to another factory. He told her. That was the whole conversation between them. After Sacco's arrest she was taken to the Dedham jail and and identified Sacco as the dark-complexioned man. She again identified him at the trial.

How came she to connect the dark man under the car with the murders which took place four hours later?

Q. Would you say that the man had a fuller or more slender face (than the man in a photograph shown to the witness)? A. I don't know. He had a funny face. . . .

Q. Meaning by that a face that was not a kindly face, a kind of brutal face? A. He did not have a real good looking face.

Q. (by the District Attorney) What came to your mind, if anything, when you learned of the shooting? . . . A. Why, the only way I can answer that is this: When I heard of the shooting I somehow associated the man I saw at the car.

Four reputable witnesses completely discredited the Andrews testimony. The following sample must suffice. It is the testimony of a Quincy shopkeeper.

> I said to her, 'Hello, Lola,' and she stopped and she answered me. While she answered me I said, 'You look kind of tired.' She says, 'Yes.' She says, 'They are bothering the life out of me.' I says, "What?" She says, 'I just come from jail.' I say, 'What have you done in jail?' She says, 'The Government took me down and want me to recognize those men,' she says, 'and I don't know a thing about them. I have never seen them and I can't recognize them.' She says, 'Unfortunately I have been down there to get a job and I have seen many men that I don't know and I have never paid any attention to anyone.'

Yet the District Attorney not only offered the Andrews testimony for the consideration of the jury, but gave it the weightiest possible personal sponsorship:

> And then there is Lola Andrews. I have been in this office, gentlemen, for now more than 11 years. I cannot recall in that too long service for the Commonwealth that ever before I have laid eye or given ear to so convincing a witness as Lola Andrews.

5. Carlos E. Goodridge (who after the trial was discovered to be a fugitive from justice in another state and to have given evidence under a false name) swore that at the time of the shooting he was in a poolroom in South Braintree, heard shots, stepped to the door, and saw an automobile coming toward him, and that when he got to the sidewalk a man in the automobile 'poked a gun over towards him,' whereupon he 'went back into the poolroom.' About seven months later he identified Sacco as the man for the first time and identified him again at the trial.

Four witnesses, including his employer, squarely contradicted Goodridge's belated identification. Even when completely disinterested, identification testimony runs all the grave hazards due to the frailties and fallibilities of human observation and memory. But Goodridge's testimony, in addition to everything else, was tainted with self-interest. At the time he was a witness for the Commonwealth, he was facing jail under an indictment for larceny to which he had pleaded guilty. The case 'had been filed,'—that is, no sentence had been imposed,—and Goodridge had been placed on probation. The Judge did not allow the defense to show that Goodridge's testimony on behalf of the Commonwealth was influenced by leniency previously shown to him by the District Attorney in connection with the confessed charge of larceny and by fear of losing his immunity. In the light of settled principles of the law of evidence, this ruling, though later sustained by the Supreme Court of Massachusetts, is indefensible.

II. As to Vanzetti:—

The Commonwealth offered two witnesses who claimed to identify Vanzetti as an occupant of the murder car. Of these one, Dolbeare, claimed to have seen him hours before the murder, leaving only a single individual, La Vangie, who claimed to have seen him on the spot. The Commonwealth sought to piece out the tenuous testimony by the evidence of two other witnesses who claimed to have seen Vanzetti during the day of the murder elsewhere than at Plymouth, but not at South Braintree. One witness, Faulkner, testified to recollecting a fellow passenger on a train going from Cochesett to Boston who got out at East Braintree at 9:54, and identified Vanzetti as that passenger. The basis of Faulkner's recollection was so frail, and was so fully destroyed by three railroad officials, that further recital of his testimony is superfluous. Finally Reed, a crossing tender, purported to recognize Vanzetti as the man sitting on the front seat of a car which he claimed to identify as the murder car. This was at some distanee from Braintree, more than an hour after the murders. Reed's testimony placing Vanzetti on the front seat of the car ran counter to the theory of the Commonwealth that Vanzetti was at the rear. Moreover, Reed testified that 'the quality of the English (of Vanzetti) was unmistakable and clear,' while at the trial Vanzetti's English was found to be so imperfect that an interpreter had to be employed.

1. Harry E. Dolbeare testified that somewhere between 10 and 12 a. m. he saw a car going past him in South Braintree with five people in it, one of whom he identified as Vanzetti:

> I felt it was a tough-looking bunch. That is the very feeling that came to my mind at the time . . . I guess that is all. That is all I recall now.

There is nothing other than what he has already given by which he characterizes these men as a tough-looking bunch. He does not know whether the other two men who sat on the back seat had mustaches or beards of any kind. He does not know what kind of a hat or cap the man in the middle, who leaned forward to speak, wore. He does not know whether this man had a cap with a visor projecting out or whether he had on a slouch hat.

2. LeVangie, the gate tender of the New Haven railroad, was on duty at the South Braintree grade crossing on the day of the murder. According to his testimony, the murder car drove up to the crossing just as he was lowering the gate, and a man inside forced him at the point of a revolver to let the car through before the advancing train. LeVangie identified Vanzetti as the man who was driving the car. LeVangie's testimony was discredited by the testimony of McCarthy, a locomotive fireman of the New Haven, who testified that three-quarters of an hour after the murders he had the following conversation with LeVangie:

> Le Vangie said: 'There was a shooting affair going on.' I says, 'Someone shot?' I says, 'Who?' 'Someone, a fellow got murdered.' I said, 'Who did it?' He said he did not know. He said there was some fellows went by in an automobile and he heard the shots, and he started to put down the gates, and as he started to put them down one of them pointed a gun at him and he let the gates alone and ducked in the shanty. I asked him if he knew them. He said no, he did not. I asked him if he would know them again if he saw them. He said, 'No.' He said all he could see was the gun and he ducked.

Moreover, LeVangie was discredited by all the other identification witnesses on both sides, who insisted that the driver of the car was a young, small, light-haired man, whereas Vanzetti was middle-aged, dark, with a black moustache. But, though the District Attorney had to repudiate LeVangie, he characteristically held on to LeVangie's identification. The following quotation from the District Attorney's summing up reveals the worthlessness of LeVangie's testimony; it throws no less light on the guiding attitude of the prosecution:

> They find fault, gentlemen, with LeVangie. They say that LeVangie is wrong in saying that Vanzetti was driving that car. I agree with them, gentlemen. I would not be trying to do justice to these defendants if I pretended that personally so far as you are concerned about my personal belief on that, that Vanzetti drove that car over the crossing. I do not believe any such thing. You must be overwhelmed with the testimony that when the car started it was driven by a light-haired man who showed every indication of being sickly.
> We cannot mould the testimony of witnesses, gentlemen. We have got to take them as they testify on their oath, and we put LeVangie on, because necessarily he must have been there. He saw something. He described a light-haired man to some of the witnesses. They produced Carter, the first witness they put on, to say that he said the light-haired man—the driver was a light-haired man. That is true. I believe my brothers will agree with me on that proposition, but he saw the face of Vanzetti in that car, and is his testimony to be rejected if it disagrees with everybody else if you are satisfied he honestly meant to tell the truth?
>
> And can't you reconcile it with the possibility, no, the likelihood, or, more than that, the probability that that time Vanzetti was directly behind the driver in the quick glance this man LeVangie had of the car going over when they were going up over the crossing? . . .
> Right or wrong, we have to take it as it is. And I agree if it depends on the accuracy of the statement that Vanzetti was driving, then it isn't right, because I would have to reject personally the testimony of witnesses for the defense as well as for the Commonwealth who testified to the contrary. I ask you to find as a matter of common sense he was, in the light of other witnesses, in the car, and if on the left side that he may well have been immediately behind the driver.

In other words, obliged to repudiate the testimony of Le Vangie that Vanzetti was on the front seat, the Commonwealth urged the jury to find that, although Le Vangie said Vanzetti was on the front seat, he meant he was on the back seat.

At the time that he urged on the jury this testimony of Le Vangie, the District Attorney had held interviews with, and had in his possession written statements of, the only two persons, Kelly and Kennedy, who had an extended opportunity to observe the driver of the car. The detailed description given by them absolutely excluded Vanzetti. The reliability of these o-

Supreme Court Didn't Pass On Sacco-Vanzetti Evidence

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

BOSTON, April 13.

INQUIRIES received here as to the legal developments in the Sacco-Vanzetti case indicate confusion in the public mind as to the part taken by the Massachusetts Supreme Court. The Supreme Court's decision, upholding Trial Judge Thayer in his refusal to grant a new trial to the two men, was handed down on April 5.

There is lack of understanding of the Supreme Court's action, particularly in states where the appellate courts pass upon the facts adduced in evidence at the original trial. In Massachusetts, as shown strikingly by the present case, the Supreme Court does not so interpret its duty. It concerns itself only with the question whether the trial followed the regular legal forms, and whether the Judge conducted the case without legal error. In the present instance, the Supreme Court found that the trial had proceeded in a regular and legal manner, and that Judge Thayer had not committed reversible error in his refusal of a new hearing.

As to Judge Thayer's decision that the Madeiros confession could not be relied upon, and the charges of conspiracy between the prosecution and the Federal Department of Justice, brought by the defense, the Supreme Court said: "These decisions are matters of fact; upon them the Judge's findings are final.

Only Question Raised.

"It is not for us to determine what is to be believed," the decision says elsewhere. "The question for us is: Could the Judge conscientiously, intelligently and honestly have reached the result he has reached? As stated in (a previous Massachusetts case is here referred to) to sustain these exceptions it is necessary to decide that no conscientious Judge, acting intelligently, could honestly have taken the view expressed by him.' "

The Supreme Court's opinion stated that the motion for a new trial was based on newly discovered evidence. The Court said:

"The Judge (Thayer) who presided at the trial and who heard the motion has decided that no reliance can be placed upon the alleged (Madeiros) confession; that its truth is not substantiated by other affidavits; that the allegations of conspiracy to convict, of improper suppression of evidence and of improper use of unreliable witnesses are not made out. These decisions are matters of fact. Upon them the Judge's findings are final.

"Granting or denial of a motion for a new trial rests in the judicial discretion of the trial judge; and his decision will not be disturbed unless it is vitiated by errors of law or abuse of discretion."

However, the opinion said, the defendants have charged errors of law and abuse of judicial discretion. The opinion discussed at length, and overruled, these contentions.

Abuse of Discretion Denied.

"The contention," it said, "that there was error or abuse of discretion in the use by the Judge of his own knowledge of the case, in addition to the evidence and agreement placed before him by counsel, cannot be sustained."

The statement, previously quoted, the Supreme Court does not have to determin what is to be believed, but only whether the Judge could conscientiously and intelligently have reached his decision, is then made.

As to the Madeiros confession, the Supreme Court says that it, by itself, "would not be admissible upon a trial of the defendants." Precedents are cited, that in a criminal trial, a confession made out of court by a third party is not admissible.

"An impartial, intelligent and honest judge," the decision said, "would be justified in finding that the confession gains no persuasive force from the credibility of Madeiros; that the facts relied on by the defendants in confirmation, if true, go no further than to furnish basis for a contention that he and some of the Morelli gang of criminals took part in the murders, but fall far short of furnishing adequate proofs of their guilt or of establishing reasonable doubt of the guilt of the defendants."

The opinion concluded with the statement:

"There is no error of law or abuse of discretion in the denial of the motion, which, in substance, is a finding that the evidence submitted was not 'weighty and of such nature as to its credibility, potency and pertinency to the fundamental issues in the case as to be worthy of careful consideration,' or 'so grave, material and relevant as to afford a probability that it would be a real factor with the jury in reaching a decision,' and that a new trial is not necessary to prevent a failure of justice."

The phrases quoted by the court are from a previous Massachusetts decision.

Where the Law Errs.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

WE WOULD infer from A. A. Tilden's attitude, in defense of the integrity and business qualifications of two of the Sacco-Vanzetti jurymen, that he hails from Massachusetts, a State known for its traditional idolatry and respect for obsolete moral codes and laws and Judges that hark back to the days of witchcraft, when to be accused was equivalent to conviction, as the accused had no way of disproving the accusation. Talk about intolerance, of the Southern people! But the history of no Southern State is as black and cruel in judgment of its suspected criminals as Massachusetts has been. It is to their credit that witchcraft was abolished if my memory serves me right in 1716.

The Post-Dispatch of April 10 carried a story of an apparent murder in Kentucky. The evidence, based on the unscrupulous tale of a girl of loose morals, appeared to be conclusive proof that a poor miner had killed a girl and thrown her body into an abandoned mine to cover the crime. The accused got a life sentence and just missed the hangman's noose by a thread.

Two years later the girl, who mysteriously disappeared, showed up, and the Governor pardoned the wretched man, who had never committed a crime in his life.

So much for the infallible judgment of Judges!

I know nothing of the guilt or innocence of Sacco and Vanzetti. If they have been proven guilty by an unbiased court they should suffer the penalty; but if condemned because of their radical views, the Judge and jury are guilty of legal murder. E. B. LEWIS.

Clean Up the Slums.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

IN view of the fact we have heard so many splendid talks from Mr. Sherwood Eddy, I think we should show our appreciation by appointing, say 100 good men, and true, to look after the conditions of the slums in St. Louis, which he reports to be in a very bad condition. When the red-light district was looked after, 100 citizens took the matter in hand and changed things very much. Form a clean-up club and call it the Sherwood Eddy Club, in the name of humanity.

"Lakme" and Its Singers.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

WHILE listening to the admirable rendition of the music of "Lakme" in New York, which you generously broadcasted through KSD, the writer wondered if the great prima donna, Pauline L'Allemand, also heard it tonight in the humble home in which she is reported to be living, in reduced circumstances, near Edwardsville, Ill., a few miles from St. Louis. If this be true, music lovers of St. Louis and vicinity ought to arrange a benefit concert for her as a token of appreciation of one of the few world-famous singers native to our country.

If Pauline L'Allemand heard your broadcasting of "Lakme," it recalled the night, about 40 years ago, when she sang the title role in that opera in New York at its first American performance. Since then most of the great prima donnas have sung it, including Patti, Gerster, Sembrich, Tetrazzini and more recently, Galli-Curci. The famous "Bell Song" is considered a supreme test of a coloratura soprano. The writer heard L'Allemand sing "Lakme" with the Thurber Opera Company, soon after the New York performance, at our old Exposition Music Hall on the site of the present Central Library. The music suited her beautiful, clear, sweet and flexible voice as if it had been specially written for her. Your broadcasting of "Lakme" has recalled both sad and pleasant memories of many years gone by.

Fashion's Slaves.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

I HEARTILY agree with the lady who signs herself "M. B." The chief fault with women's clothes today is they have not enough of them. Haven't enough of each individual garment. If they would take the material they use for two dresses and put it in one, they would have a dress that looked decent.

The gentleman who referred to women's dress as "nasty" used the right word in the right place.

It amuses me when any one defends the present style of women's dress, on the grounds that it is more comfortable, convenient and healthful. It may be all of those things, no doubt it is. The present styles are a great improvement, for health and comfort over the styles of 25 years ago. But comfort, convenience and health do not enter into the question at all. The style of women's dress is dictated by fashion and by nothing else. They would fall over each other to adopt the style of 25 years ago, if fashion should so decree, and health and comfort would be forgotten.

GOOD USES FOR THE INITIATIVE.

The Automobile Club of Missouri, it is understood, has decided to redeem one of the failures of the State General Assembly by submitting a good road bond issue to the people of the State through the initiative.

We believe this is a wise decision. The bond issue plan has been thoroughly worked out and can be presented to the voters in a plain and convincing manner.

The plan provides for $60,000,000 for completing the State highway system, and $60,000,000 to be applied to country roads which will be feeders to the main highway system. The bond issue will enable the Highway Commission to expedite the work of completing the highway system and will give to the counties access to the highways. In a few years it will provide a network of good roads, which will be invaluable to the people of the State.

We believe another measure which failed to get through the General Assembly should be revived and submitted to the people by initiative. That is the new criminal code, which was thoroughly worked out by the Committee on Criminal Procedure. The Legislature passed a few odds and ends to improve criminal procedure, but it left the substantial parts of the program untouched.

There is no more important issue before the people than that of reforming criminal procedure, to expedite legal processes in dealing with crime and amending certain laws which make for obstruction, delay and the defeat of justice.

Through lawyers, bankers and business men who are in sympathy with the movement to improve criminal procedure, the committee could easily obtain signatures to initiative petitions. We feel sure that the people, who suffer and are terrorized by criminals escaping justice, will support the measure.

The initiative has been abused, but it serves an excellent purpose when it enables the people to repair the omissions and mistakes of the Legislature in regard to such sound measures as these two.

THE WOMEN OF THE SOUTH.

Senator Caraway of Arkansas says the South is against Al Smith's nomination by 50 to 1, the women of the South being unanimously against him on account of prohibition.

If Senator Caraway is right the women of the South may be interested in an incident that occurred at the Democratic national convention in 1924. A charming woman who watched that battle was told that Smith could not possibly be nominated. "But if the delegates should meet Gov. Smith," she replied, "how could his nomination be prevented?"

Her name? Mrs. Calvin Coolidge.

JEFFERSON ON OUR CURRENT PROBLEMS.

If Thomas Jefferson, by a process believed in by some Oriental peoples, should return for an inspection of the nation whose Declaration of Independence he drafted, whose Bill of Rights he largely drafted, one of whose chief political parties he founded, and whose presidency he occupied for eight years, what problems of that nation would he be apt to consider momentous and what would be his counsel regarding them? Let us see.

Probably the first phenomenon to attract him would be the present tendency to reduce all opinion to a dead level of uniformity, a tendency which naturally involves attacks upon his cardinal principles of freedom of speech and of the press. What would be his comment upon this phenomenon? We know what his words would be, for he said them in his Notes on Virginia:

> Subject opinion to coercion: whom will you make your inquisitors? Fallible men; governed by bad passions, by private as well as public reasons. And why subject it to coercion? To produce uniformity? But is uniformity of opinion desirable? No more than of face and stature.

Secondly, he would observe a rising tide of oppressive and unreasonable legislation, a tide which has brought in its train the evil of judicial tyranny and injustice. We know what he would say of these phenomena, because we remember what he said of them in his own day:

> Sound reason should constitute the law of every country.
> Equal and exact justice to all men, of whatever state or persuasion, religious or political, I deem one of the essential principles of our Government.

Finally, he would be attracted to the transformation which our governmental system is undergoing from a union of practically sovereign states to a Federal empire, governed by an immense and growing bureaucracy, which is inevitably oppressive and often corrupt. He could tell us exactly how to put an end to this:

> I believe the states can best govern our home concerns.
> I think, myself, that we have more machinery of government than is necessary, too many parasites living on the labor of the industrious. I believe it might be much simplified to the relief of those who maintain it.

These words comprise the counsel which Jefferson, were he now present, would offer the American people. They are specifics for all the greatest problems of that people. They are antidotes for the vile infections which are gradually creeping into the veins of government and bringing about a slow paralysis of the initiative and freedom of that people.

We commend these words to the American people, for whom Jefferson dreamed and slaved, and to the Democratic party, which he founded for the purpose of perpetuating the liberal philosophy of government of which these words are merely the crystallized embodiment. We propose that both people and party take occasion, on this 184th anniversary of Jefferson's birth, to consider whether it would not be advisable to return to that philosophy and cease to obey the false tenets by which we are now drifting toward catastrophe.

A MODERN CARACALLA.

Since bathing is one of the great human delights, we can all think enviously of what the baths are to be like in the Federal prison at Atlanta, now that Earl Carroll is down there. Perhaps a segment of the scene is all we can stand without being driven to some Federal offense that will get us into that happy band. Let us therefore think only of Sartain, the former Warden, now an inmate for grafting, playing porpoiselike in the perfumed suds.

THE MAYOR AND THE PRESS.

"One doesn't read in the newspapers the constructive things going on in St. Louis," Mayor Miller told the Kiwanis Club at Alton Tuesday. "You can't blame the newspapers entirely. They print the things you want to read. But St. Louis is doing things you don't read about. We are erecting the largest courthouse in the United States; we are erecting one of the largest municipal auditoriums; we have many suits on to acquire property so we can push improvements; we recently installed 9775 units in a new lighting system; we are widening Olive street; we are to have the most beautiful plaza in the country."

Does Mayor Miller ever read the newspapers? Every one of the projects he mentioned—and many others—have been described at great length and their progress chronicled in the Post-Dispatch and every other St. Louis newspaper, and to some extent in papers throughout the land. Every one of them has been discussed in the Post-Dispatch in the last week, and repeatedly before then. Not only that—the press has dwelt extensively on other problems of municipal government and civic betterment.

Mayor Miller ought to deal with the corner newsboy or ride a street car now and then and peek at a newspaper over some straphanger's shoulder.

OUR WORST OMISSION.

The great republic is now face to face with its worst omission. There is no jail in keeping with his station to which Harry Sinclair can be sent to expiate his sin of being in contempt of the United States Senate. There is no barred equivalent of the Ritz or the Drake hotels, no mahogany-paneled and richly-lounged jug approximating the ease and elegance of the oil magnate's private car, into which the law can thrust him.

This omission leaves Justice Hitz flabbergasted. The man who could not be bamboozled by lawyers, and who could protect the jury from their high-priced make-believe, finds himself undone when he considers where he would put Harry if he did sentence him. When the reporters congregated in his court Monday morning to hear how long it would be and where, the obfuscated jurist announced without an attempt to explain that sentence had been postponed 30 days. The truth is that in addition to being a good lawyer the Justice has a keen social sense.

Then there is worse coming. The Insull case is somewhere ahead. He also has defied the Senate. Imagine Insull, the exquisite of more perfumed directors' rooms than any other man in the country, a veritable Lorenzo the Magnificent of the arts in Chicago, locked up in a vulgar little hoosegow. The whole dreadful prospect betrays in us a want of vision and confused sense of values. The country should long ago have built in some enchanted spot a fashionable jail, a very Taj Mahal of coolers, to take care of these fine gentlemen. A bird of plumage requires a gilded cage.

Perhaps we can suggest to Justice Hitz a way out of the immediate dilemma. The President is not in the White House, which is under repair. Couldn't Harry be locked up somewhere in that historic and distinctive domicile for a couple of weeks? It would befit the occasion in more ways than one.

THE HIGH COURT'S LIMITATIONS.

The fact that the Supreme Court of Massachusetts twice has passed on the Sacco-Vanzetti case and each time has upheld the trial Judge causes many persons to conclude that these men have received every consideration due them, and that they should be hanged in accordance with the jury's verdict.

But, in Massachusetts, as in many other states, the Supreme Court is closely restricted. In a case of this kind, it does not pass on evidence, but only on points of law. Twice it was asked to review Judge Thayer's rulings refusing new trials to the two defendants. But in doing so it was only qualified to decide whether the Judge had exercised "proper judicial discretion."

Perhaps only those saturated in legal lore can understand the fine distinctions which governed the Supreme Court. It is certainly difficult for the lay mind to figure out how the high court could express any opinion about Judge Thayer's discretion unless it examined all the facts and all the evidence and had an opinion about them.

Anyway, we are assured that the high court cannot do this, and did not do it. And yesterday in a dispatch from Boston we found the very Supreme Court Justice who wrote the decision ending Sacco and Vanzetti's judicial hope telling about an experience he had on a street car the morning the decision was published. He was sitting next to an Italian, who put the paper down with a sigh after reading the newspaper report of it. The Justice, announcing he was its author, asked the Italian what he thought about it. "I think, sir," said the man, "there has been a great miscarriage of justice." "I liked that," said the Justice. "I liked the way he said it."

Of course, as the law stands, if there was a miscarriage of justice, the Justice of the Supreme Court couldn't help it. But all this gives greater force to the pleas from all over the world which are pouring into Gov. Fuller's office right now to give this case another examination before the sentence is carried out.

"BAH, THERE'S NO HONESTY ANYWHERE!"

The MIRROR of PUBLIC OPINION

PUBLIC OPINION AND THE STATE DEPARTMENT.

BRUCE BLIVEN in The New Republic.

WHAT is the attitude of men of the type we find in our State Department toward public opinion? To what degree will they respond to a strong belief on the part of the country in general, expressed through newspaper editorials, speeches, resolutions of organizations and letters of individuals, that any policy they are pursuing is unwise and unjust? The recorded facts show, I think, that these gentlemen, collectively at least, give little heed to the admonitions of their fellow citizens. They take it for granted that the public is badly informed: Indeed, they make it their business, a good share of the time, to see that this is the case. It is obvious, from repeated instances, that they resent strongly any effort on the part of the House or Senate committees to find out what is going on. Whenever there is the least excuse—and sometimes when there is none—they hide behind the plea that to reveal their secrets is "incompatible with the public interest." When they do not take refuge in this, they sometimes return answers so equivocal in character that they are tantamount to a misstatement. Their unexpected but dominant desire is, so far as they are able, to carry on international relations without the voters' knowledge or consent.

SACCO AND VANZETTI—NEXT STEPS.

From the New York World.

AFTER tense moments in the court house in Dedham, Mass., where Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti struggled with an unfamiliar language to put their plea for justice before the court and before the world, the two men were sentenced to death by Judge Thayer, who had conducted their trial. Unless means are found to arrest the judgment of the court they are to die in the week beginning July 10. Five minutes after the pronouncement of sentence the news of it was being flashed to every capital, to every important city, in the world. It little exaggerates the fact to say that the whole world looks to the nation, as the nation looks to Massachusetts, to ask, what next? For it is scarcely conceivable, even now, that these two unfortunate men shall die as sentenced for a crime which there is some reason to doubt that they committed. In the means that may be used to save them, if possible to judge anew the testimony that may weaken or sustain their conviction, there is necessarily the widest interest.

William G. Thompson, who has acted as counsel for the two men in the more recent proceedings has properly announced that counsel for the condemned will undertake in the State courts no further attempts, which would be doomed in advance to fail, simply for the sake of postponing execution of the sentence. Delay will not answer the needs of justice nor meet the wishes of the defendants. There are, however, steps that may be taken to review the case in the Federal courts, which would not be open to the charge of time-waiting and it may be assumed that not one of the legitimate resources of the law will be overlooked. In the end, if that end of all endeavor is to reveal the powerlessness of the law to mend a rent in the robe of justice, if court appeals fail to halt the ultimate and uttermost penalty possible to men accused in a case where many men fear that the courts have limped, there will remain the executive power. The Governor can commute the sentence for re-examination of the facts; he can pardon men who already have lain six years in prison while suspicion grew that they have been immured unjustly.

Vanzetti's long speech in the Dedham court before sentence was pronounced was a remarkable effort for a man to make who had learned the language in which it was uttered only in prison. As an appeal to public opinion beyond the four walls that inclosed him it assumed, perhaps, too great familiarity on the part of the public with the details of the trial. Emotionally, it was most effective. Few could have listened to it in court without being convinced at least of the sincerity with which it was made. Gov. Fuller will meet the expectations of humane people in his State and far beyond, if he commutes the sentence until a committee of citizens in whose fairness and capacity the people will have full confidence can be named to delve deeply into the facts and pronounce judgment upon them. Massachusetts cannot afford to execute these two men without further inquiry.

NEW ERA IN HIGH POWER.

From the Miami News.

A RECENT announcement of the Westinghouse Electric Co. has to do with the transportation of high-voltage power over long distances. The company has acquired from a San Francisco engineer an invention which is said to make it practicable to transmit "super-power" as far as across the continent. There are bodies of water which can generate millions of volts of electricity, but which are so far from points where power can be used that transportation of current causes great loss of voltage. The highest-powered line now in existence, it is said, could be increased 75 per cent in capacity and the current carried for long distances, at an added cost of but 20 per cent. Special condensers would be employed at 100-mile intervals to provide an even flow of current.

Not one of them is drunk; they are happy, and the democratic atmosphere of the place is achieved nowhere else on earth. Even a teetotaler would find the happiness contagious! "Of Making Many Books"

JOHN G NEIHARDT

She Had Grown Up

THE CONSTANT WIFE. By W. Somerset Maugham. (Doran.)

WHEN one hears that a given book is "very modern," it may be taken for granted that a certain commandment is going to be out of luck in that book. Why essentially "modern," it would be hard to say. Oldish people, who have not spent their lives in their trunks, testify that the matter in question is rather old-fashioned. The modernity seems to be no more than a lack of self-control characteristic of unstable types at any time and of all societies in transitional periods. We are prone to pat ourselves on the back because of the sex freedom we are said to be achieving. But that sort of freedom has been achieved more than once by other peoples caught in some violent eddy of time. Read "Quo Vadis" again, or, better still, browse awhile in Petronius.

As for the commandment in question, it is very probable that more people bend it in public, by way of seeming "modern," than actually break it in private for more convincing reasons. There must be an enormous amount of fashionable bluff in our vaunted "freedom."

"The Constant Wife" is a very modern play. It was first produced in Cleveland during November last, with Ethel Barrymore in the title role, and it has become one of the outstanding successes of this year's New York season.

Though a brilliant comedy, with plenty of the expected sort of wit to commend it to the cheaply cynical, it has depths of meaning that may trouble the wisest.

Constance, the "wife" of the title, has long been aware that her husband, John, a distinguished surgeon, is cutting up scandalously with her dearest friend, Marie-Louise, the feather-brained and kittenish wife of a doting millionaire, Mortimer Durham. Loving friends strive to illuminate Constance "for her own good," thinking she "ought to know." But Constance, already brilliantly illuminated on that subject, simulates a lofty incredulity avowedly based upon John's absolute perfection as a husband and upon Marie's unimpeachable character and devoted friendship.

But when stolid Mortimer Durham ("the fellow that makes the dough and that is all that he needs to know") discovers John's cigarette case under the wife's pillow, there is a scene in which everyone concerned is present. Constance saves the situation by explaining that the case, though bearing John's initials, had been appropriated by her and carelessly left where it had been found. Mortimer is thus reduced to a whining humility and it costs him a small fortune to buy pearls with which to mollify poor outraged Marie-Louise. Perhaps it would have been better to give her four sets of twins and a washtub.

As for John, he, too, had simply neglected to grow up, and Constance, knowing this, proceeds from the height of her strategic advantage to read him and us a startling lecture on marriage as too commonly understood among the leisure class and too commonly imitated by middle-class bounders. But it should be noted by the reader that whatever justice there may be in the scathing criticism, it in no way applies to millions of well balanced people in all classes. The cleavage is not on horizontal class lines; it is vertical, and it is concerned with development.

A further significant twist is given to the drama by the opportune appearance of Bernard, an old sweetheart of Constance. Quite brazenly Constance announces that she will spend her vacation with Bernard in Italy. Bernard seems to know nothing of the plan; but, of course, John believes him to be lying.

The play ends with the Constant Wife bidding her legal husband good-by. Was she really going with Bernard, or wasn't she?

The reader will decide as it may please him. Nevertheless, she wasn't. Constance had become an adult.

MOTHER KNOWS BEST. By Edna Ferber. (Doubleday Page & Co.)

The eight tales which make up the volume are eight novels in miniature. Some of them cover a long stretch of years; some of them embrace the lifetime of the characters concerned. None depends on a single episode, but all are full-bodied presentations of character, incident and background. Her people are in humble circumstances. They live just outside the yards in Chicago, in the narrow walk-up apartments of the west side in New York, alongside the tracks in an unpainted cottage in Kansas. And the chief actors are women, women ranging from a musical comedy star to the wife of a stockyards hunky. Decorations by Ilonka Karasz add to the attractiveness of the volume.

BUCHAREST, April 13.—King Ferdinand's death—when it comes—will not mean satisfaction of Queen Marie's passionate ambition to become the real ruler of Rumania, but probably will mean the beginning of her decline.

As the King was sinking recently, the Queen, being certain her eldest son, Carol, would refuse to claim succession to the throne, appealed to Premier Averescu to dismiss her second son, Nicholas, from the regency, which will govern after the King's death, and appoint her in his place.

Marie believed she could always persuade one or two other members of the regency to side with her, assuring her supreme dominion until little Prince Michael, the heir-apparent, comes to his majority 13 years hence. Premier Averescu favored the plan, hoping thereby to obtain a hold over his rival, former Premier Bratiano.

But Bratiano conveyed a message substantially as follows: "I control the finances, and the army which I created is loyal to me. You can do nothing except by my sufferance. If you accept the regency you may remain in office a few months. Otherwise"——

Averescue was obliged to acquiesce.

WILL OF MRS. D. G. TAYLOR

Husband Chief Heir, $300 Monthly, Each, for Two Daughters.

The will of Mrs. Emma Whitelaw Taylor, filed in Probate Court yesterday, leaves two-thirds of her estate to her husband, former Circuit Judge Daniel G. Taylor, and the remainder in trust to him, with a provision that from the income $600 a month shall be divided equally between their daughters—Mrs. E. G. Hotchkiss and Mrs. A. R. A. Garesche. The remaining income from the trust fund is to go to the husband, who was appointed executor of the will.

Mrs. Taylor made specific bequests providing that her husband shall have her real estate located at 4907 Pershing avenue, which was the family home, and her two daughters are to inherit her summer residence at Pointe Aux Barques, Mich. Emma Cavanagh, for many years Mrs. Taylor's cook, is to receive $500 and there are bequests of $1000 each to the Helpers of the Holy Souls of St. Louis and the New St. Louis Cathedral, the latter for masses. Mrs. Taylor died Friday. No estimate of the value of her estate was made.

THREE-HOUR SERVICES IN MANY CHURCHES ON GOOD FRIDAY

Protestant and Catholic Congregations to Attend Sessions From 3 to 6 P. M.

Three-hour services are announced by many Protestant and Catholic churches of the city for Good Friday, mostly from noon to 3 p. m., with additional observances of Good Friday by some of the congregations.

Among the churches to observe the "Tre Ore" will be St. John's, Sixteenth and Chestnut streets; St. Michael's, Eleventh and Clinton streets; St. Malachy's Ewing and Clark avenues; the old Cathedral, Third and Walnut streets; St. Joseph's, Eleventh and Biddle streets; Christ Church Cathedral, Thirteenth and Locust streets; Holy Communion Church, 2801 Washington boulevard, and Maple Avenue Methodist Episcopal, Maple and Belt avenues.

Union Methodist Episcopal Church will hold a special Good Friday service at 8 p. m. and a sunrise service at 6 a. m. Easter Sunday.

OPEN AIR SCHOOL SURVEY

A survey of former open air school pupils and Night and Day Camp girls is being conducted by the medical social service department of the Tuberculosis and Health Society of St. Louis to learn whether they are continuing in the good health gained at the schools and camp. This survey will not only act as a check-up on the effectiveness of open air treatment, but it is expected to open new fields in follow-up work.

More than 1000 individuals will be visited, and their physical condition noted. If any are found to be underweight again, physical examinations will be arranged for them, and plans made to help them regain permanent health. The daily follow-up work of the Tuberculosis and Health Society has already shown that the majority of children who attend open air schools for a sufficient period are permanently benefited, but this survey is expected to give more conclusive evidence.

A LETTER has just come to us from a woman in Iowa who launders the finest linens and curtains in town. A Procter & Gamble man gave her a sample of Chipso—the 10-cent size.

"I was just starting some work," she writes. "I thought I would see how much I could do with this sample. I did over eleven dollars' worth with that one box!"

Probably you don't count on Chipso to earn money for you.

But what if it gives you leisure?

What if Chipso saves your strength?

What if it frees you from washboard drudgery by soaking your clothes clean?

If it protects your clothes?

Here is the easy Chipso method

Millions of fine housewives have discovered that Chipso does these things! They leave the washboard in its corner and do their washing this way:

First they pour hot water on Chipso's white flakes to get instant suds. Then they cool the water and put their clothes to soak immediately, leaving them for twenty minutes or longer if they prefer. After squeezing the suds through the clothes, they find that only bad spots need light hand-rubbing. Finally they rinse and wring. And that is all there is to a Chipso washing.

There's enough Chipso for about six washings in the big 25-cent blue-and-orange box at your grocer's.

"THE PORTENTOUS CASE OF SACCO AND VANZETTI"—By Felix Frankfurter

servers and of their statements has not been challenged. Yet they were not called by the District Attorney; instead he called Le Vangie. Unfortunately the existence of Kelly and Kennedy was until very recently unknown to the defense, and of course, therefore, their testimony was unavailable for Sacco and Vanzetti at the trial.

The alibi for Vanzetti was overwhelming. Thirty-one eyewitnesses testified positively that no one of the men that they saw in the murder car was Vanzetti. Thirteen witnesses either testified directly that Vanzetti was in Plymouth selling fish on the day of the murder or furnished corroboration of such testimony.

What is the worth of identification testimony even when uncontradicted? The identification of strangers is proverbially untrustworthy. The hazards of this type of testimony are established by a formidable number of instances in the records of English and American trials. These instances are recent—not due to the brutalities of ancient criminal procedure.

In the Sacco-Vanzetti case the elements of uncertainty were intensified. All the identifying witnesses were speaking from casual observation of men they had never seen before, men of foreign race, under circumstances of unusual confusion. Thus, one witness, Cole, "thought at the first glance that the man was a Portuguese fellow named Tony that he knew." Afterward he was sure it was Vanzetti. Nor can we abstain from comment on the methods pursued by the police in eliciting subsequent identification. The recognized procedure is to line up the suspect with others, and so far as possible with individuals of the same race and class, so as not to provoke identification through accentuation. In defiance of these necessary safeguards, Sacco and Vanzetti after their arrest were shown singly to persons brought there for the purpose of identification, not as part of a "parade." Moreover, Sacco and Vanzetti were not even allowed to be their natural selves; they were compelled to simulate the behavior of the Braintree bandits. Under such conditions identification of foreigners is a farce.

After the conviction Judge Thayer himself abandoned the identification of Sacco and Vanzetti as the ground on which the jury's verdict rested. In denying a motion for a new trial, based on the discovery of a new eyewitness with better opportunities for observation than any of the other witnesses of either side, who, in his affidavit, swore that Sacco was not the man in the car, Judge Thayer ruled that this evidence > would simply mean one more piece of evidence of the same kind and directed to the same end, and in my judgment would have no effect whatever upon the verdicts. These verdicts did not rest, in my judgment, upon the testimony of the eyewitnesses, for the defendants, as it was, called more witnesses than the Commonwealth to testify that neither of the defendants were in the bandit car.

The evidence that convicted these defendants was circumstantial and was evidence that is known in law as 'consciousness of guilt.'

"Consciousness of guilt" meant that the conduct of Sacco and Vanzetti after April 15 was the conduct of murderers. This inference of guilt was drawn from their behavior on the night of May 5, before and after arrest, and also from their possession of firearms. It is vital to keep in mind the evidence on which, according to Judge Thayer, these two men are to be sentenced to death. There was no claim whatever at the trial, and none has ever been suggested since, that Sacco and Vanzetti had any prior experience in holdups or any previous association with bandits; no claim that the $16,000 taken from the victims ever found its way into their pockets; no claim that their financial condition or that of Sacco's family (he had a wife and child, and another child was soon to be born) was in any way changed after April 15; no claim that after the murder either Sacco or Vanzetti changed his manner of living or employment. Neither of these men had ever been accused of crime before their arrest. Nor did they during the three weeks between the murder and their arrest behave like men who were concealing the crime of murder. They did not go into hiding; they did not abscond with the spoils; they did not live under assumed names. They maintained their old lodgings; they pursued openly their callings within a few miles of the town where they were supposed to have committed murder in broad daylight; and when arrested Sacco was found to have in his pocket an announcement of a forthcoming meeting at which Vanzetti was to speak. Was this the behavior of men eluding identification?

What, then, was the evidence of guilty conduct against them?

1. Sacco and Vanzetti, as we have already explained, were two of four Italians who called for Boda's car at Johnson's garage on the evening of May 5. Mrs. Johnson gave the pretext of having to fetch some milk and went to a neighbor's house to telephone the police. She testified that the two defendants followed her to the house on the opposite side of the street, and when, after telephoning, she reappeared they followed her back. The men then left without taking the car; having been advised by Mr. Johnson not to run it without the current year's number plate.

Q. Now, Boda came there to get his car, didn't he? A. Yes.

Q. There were no 1920 number plates on it? A. No.

Q. You advised him not to take the car and run it without the 1920 number plates, didn't you? A. Yes.

Q. And he accepted your view? A. He seemed to.

Q. He seemed to. And after some conversation went away? A. Yes.

This was the whole of the testimony on the strength of which Judge Thayer put the following question to the jury:—

> Did the defendants, in company with Orciani and Boda, leave the Johnson house because the automobile had no 1920 number plate on it, or because they were conscious of or became suspicious of what Mrs. Johnson did in the Bartlett house? If they left because they had no 1920 number plates on the automobile, then you may say there was no consciousness of guilt in consequence of their sudden departure, but if they left because they were consciously guilty of what was being done by Mrs. Johnson in the Bartlett house, then you may say that is evidence tending to prove consciousness of guilt.

2. Following their departure from the Johnson house, Sacco and Vanzetti were arrested by a policeman who boarded their street car as it was coming into Brockton. Three policemen testified as to their behavior after being taken into custody. The following will serve as a sample:

> I told them when we started that the first false move I would put a bullet in them. On the way up to the station Sacco reached his hand to put under his overcoat and I told him to keep his hands outside of his clothes and on his lap.
>
> Q. Will you illustrate to the jury how he placed his hands? A. He was sitting down with his hands that way (indicating), and he moved his hand up to put it in under his overcoat.
> Q. At what point? A. Just about the stomach there, across his waistband, and I says to him, "Have you got a gun there?" He says, "No." He says, "I ain't got no gun." "Well," I says, "keep your hands outside of your clothes." We went along a little further and he done the same thing. I gets up on my knees on the front seat and I reaches over and I puts my hand under his coat, but I did not see any gun. "Now," I says, 'Mister, if you put your hands in there again, you are going to get into trouble." He says, "I don't want no trouble."

3. In statements made to the District Attorney and to the Chief of Police at the police station after their arrest, both Sacco and Vanzetti lied. By misstatements they tried to conceal their movements on the day of their arrest, the friends they had been to see, the places they had visited. For instance, Vanzetti denied that he knew Boda.

What of this evidence of "consciousness of guilt"? The testimony of the police that Sacco and Vanzetti were about to draw pistols was emphatically denied by them. These denials, it was urged, were confirmed by the inherent probabilities of the situation. Did Sacco and Vanzetti upon arrest reveal the qualities of the perpetrators of the Braintree murders? Would the ready and ruthless gunmen at Braintree have surrendered themselves so quietly into custody on a capital charge of which they knew themselves to be guilty? If Sacco and Vanzetti were the holdup men of Braintree, why did they not draw upon their expert skill and attempt to make their escape by scattering shots? But, not being gunmen, why should Sacco and Vanzetti have carried guns? The possession of firearms in this country has not at all the significance that it would have, say, in England. The extensive carrying of guns by people who are not "gunmen" is a matter of common knowledge. Sacco acquired the habit of carrying a pistol while a night watchman in the shoe factory, because, as his employer testified, "night watchmen protecting property do have guns." Vanzetti carried a revolver "because it was a very bad time, and I like to have a revolver for self-defense."

Q. How much money did you use to carry around with you? A. When I went to Boston for fish, I can carry eighty, one hundred dollars, one hundred and twenty dollars.

There were many crimes, many holdups, many robberies at that time.

The other evidence from which "consciousness of giult" was drawn the two Italians admitted. They acknowledged that they behaved in the way described by Mrs. Johnson; and freely conceded that when questioned at the police station they told lies. What was their explanation of this conduct? To exculpate themselves of the crime of murder they had to disclose elaborately their guilt of radicalism. In order to meet the significance which the prosecution attached to the incidents at the Johnson house and those following, it became necessary for the defendants to advertise to the jury their offensive radicalism, and thereby to excite the deepest prejudices of a Norfolk County jury picked for its respectability and sitting in judgment upon two men of alien blood and abhorrent philosophy.

Innocent men, it is suggested, do not lie when picked up by the police. But Sacco and Vanzetti knew they were not innocent of the charge on which they supposed themselves arrested, and about which the police interrogated them. For, when apprehended, Sacco and Venzetti were not confronted with the charge of murder; they were not accused of banditry; they were not given the remotest intimation that the murders of Parmenter and Berardelli were laid at their door. They were told they were arrested as "suspicious characters," and the meaning which that carried to their minds was rendered concrete by the questions that were put to them.

Q. Tell us all you recall that Stewart, the chief, asked of you? A. He asked me why we were in Bridgewater, how long I knew Sacco, if I am a radical, if I am an anarchist or Communist, and he asked me if I believe in the Government of the United States.

Q. Did either Chief Stewart at the Brockton police station or Mr. Katzmann tell you that you were suspected of robberies and murder? A. No.

Q. Was there any question asked of you or any statement made to you to indicate to you that you were charged with that crime on April 15? A. No.

Q. What did you understand, in view of the questions asked of you, what did you understand you were being detained for at the Brockton police station? A. I understand they arrest me for a political matter. . . .

Q. . . . Why did you feel you were being detained for political opinions? A. Because I was asked if I was a Socialist. I said, 'Well—'

Q. You mean by reason of the questions asked of you? A. Because I was asked if I am a Socialist, if I am I. W. W., if I am a Communist, if I am a radical, if I am a black hand.

Plainly their arrest meant to Sacco and Vanzetti arrest for radicalism.

Boston was one of the worst centers of the lawlessness and hysteria that characterized the campaign of the Department of Justice for the wholesale arrest and deportation of Reds. Its proximity to industrial communities having a large proportion of foreign labor and a history of past industrial conflicts lent to the lawless activities of the Government officials the widespread support of influential public opinion. Mr. John F. Moors, himself a banker, has called attention to the fact that 'the hysteria against "the reds" was so great, at the time when these men were convicted, that even the most substantial bankers in this city (Boston) were carried away to the extent of paying for full-page advertisements about the red peril.' Sacco and Vanzetti were notorious Reds. They were associates of leading radicals; they had for some time been on the list of suspects of the Department of Justice and they were especially obnoxious because they were draft-dodgers.

The terrorizing methods of the Government had very specific meaning for the two Italians. Two of their friends had already been deported. The arrest of the New York radical Salsedo, and his detention incommunicado by the Department of Justice, had been for some weeks a source of great concern to them. Vanzetti was sent to New York to confer with a committee having charge of the case of Salsedo and other Italian political prisoners. On his return, May 2, he reported to his Boston friends the advice which had been given him: namely, to dispose of their radical literature and thus eliminate the most damaging evidence in the deportation proceedings they feared. The urgency of acting on this advice was intensified by the tragic news of Salsedo's death after Vanzetti's return from New York. Though Salsedo's death was unexplained, to Sacco and Vanzetti it conveyed only one explanation. It was a symbol of their fears and an omen of their own fate.

On the witness stand Sacco and Vanzetti accounted for their movements on April 15. They also accounted for their ambiguous behavior on May 5. Up to the time that Sacco and Vanzetti testified to their radical activities, their pacifism, their flight to Mexico to avoid the draft. The trial was a trial for murder and banditry; with the cross-examination of Sacco and Vanzetti patriotism and radicalism became the dominant emotional issues. Outside the courtroom the Red hysteria was rampant; it was allowed to dominate within. The prosecutor systematically played on the feelings of the jury by exploiting the unpatriotic and despised beliefs of Sacco and Vanzetti, and the Judge allowed him thus to divert and pervert the jury's mind.

The opening question in the cross-examination of Vanzetti by the District Attorney discloses a motif that he persistently played upon:

Q. (by Mr. Katzmann) So you left Plymouth, Mr. Vanzetti, in May, 1917, to dodge the draft, did you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. When this country was at war, you ran away, so you would not have to fight as a soldier? A. Yes.

This method was elaborated when Sacco took the stand:

Q. (by Mr. Katzmann) Did you say yesterday you love a free country? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you love this country in the month of May, 1917? A. I did not say—I don't want to say I did not love this country.

Q. Did you go to Mexico to avoid being a soldier for this country that you loved? A. Yes.

Q. And would it be your idea of showing your love for your wife that, when she needed you, you ran away from her? A. I did not run away from her.

Q. Don't you think going away from your country is a vulgar thing to do when she needs you? A. I don't believe in war.

Q. You don't believe in war? A. No, sir.

Q. Do you think it is a cowardly thing to do what you did? A. No, sir.

Q. Do you think it is a brave thing to do what you did? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you think it would be a brave thing to go away from your own wife? A. No.

Q. When she needed you? A. No.

THE COURT. All I ask is this one question, and it will simplify matters very much. Is it your claim that in the collection of the literature and the books and papers that that was done in the interest of the United States?

MR. JEREMIAH McANARNEY. I make no such broad claim as that.

MR KATZMANN. Well, he (Sacco) stated in his direct examination yesterday that he loved a free country, and I offer it to attack that statement made in his examination by his own counsel.

THE COURT. That is what I supposed, and that is what I supposed that remark meant when it was introduced in this cross-examination, but counsel now say they don't make that claim.

MR. KATZMANN. They say they don't make the claim that gathering up the literature on May 3 at West Bridgewater was for the purpose of helping the country, but that is a different matter, not related (sic) to May 5.

THE COURT. I will let you inquire further first as to what he meant by the expression.

Q. What did you mean when you said yesterday you loved a free country? A. Give me a chance to explain.

Q. I am asking you to explain now. A. When I was in Italy, a boy, I was a Republican, so I always thinking Republican has more chance to manage education, develop, to build some day his family, to raise the child and education, if you could. But that was my opinion; so when I came to this country I saw there was not what I was thinking before but there was all the difference, because I been working in Italy not so hard as I been work in this country. I could live free there just as well. Work in the same condition but not so hard, about seven or eight hours a day, better food. I mean genuine. Of course, over here he is good food, because it is bigger country, to any those who got money to spend, not for the working and laboring class and in Italy is more opportunity to laborer to eat vegetable, more fresh, and I came in this country. When I been started work here very hard and been work 13 years, hard worker, I could not been afford much a family the way I did have the idea before. I could not put any money in the bank; I could no push my boy some to go to school and other things. I teach over here men who is with me. The free idea gives any man a chance to profess his own idea, not the supreme idea, not to give any person, not to be like Spain in position, yes, about 20 centuries ago, but to give a chance to print and education literature, free speech, that I see it was all wrong. I could see the best men, intelligent, education, they been arrested and sent to prison and died in prison for years and years without getting them out and Debs, one of the great men in his country, he is in prison still away in prison, because he is a Socialist. He wanted the laboring class to have better conditions and better living, more education, give a push his son if he could have a chance some day, but they put him in prison. Why? Because the capitalist class they know, they are against that, because the capital class, they don't want our child to go to high school or college or Harvard College. There would be no chance, there would not be no—they don't want the working class educationed; they want the working class to be a low all the times, b eunderfoot, and not to be up with the head. So sometimes, you see, the Rockefellers, Morgans, they give fifty—I mean they give five hundred thousand dollars to Harvard College, they give a million dollars for another school. Every day say, 'Well, D. Rockefeller is a great man, the best man in the country.' I wan tto ask him who is going to Harvard College? What benefit the workin class they will get by those million dollars they give by Rockefeller, D. Rockefellers. They won't get, the poor class, they won't have no chance to go to Harvard College because men who is getting $21 a week or $30 a week, I don't care if he gets $80 a week, if he gets a famliy of five children he can't live and send his child and go to Harvard College if he wants to eat everything nature will give him. If he wants to eat like a cow, and that is the best thing, but I want men to live like men. I like men to get everything that nature will give best, because they belong—we are not the friend of any other place, but we are belong to nations. So that is why my idea has been changed. So that is why I love people who labor and work and see better conditions every day develop, makes no more war. We no want fight by the gun, and we don't want to destroy young men. The mother has been suffering for building the young man. Some day need a little more bread, so when the time the mother get some bread on profit out of that boy, the Rockefellers, Morgans, and some of the peoples, high class, they send to war. Why? What is war? The war is not shoots like Abraham Lincoln's and Abe Jefferson, to fight for the free country, for the better education to give chance to any other peoples, not the white people but the black and the others, because they believe and know they are mens like the rest, but they are war for the great millionaire. No war for the civilization of men. They are war for business; million dollars come on the side. What right we have to kill each other? I been work for the Irish. I have been working with the German fellow, with the French, many other peoples. I love them people just as I could love my wife, and my people for that did receive me. Why should I go kill them men? What he done to me? He never done anything, so I don't believe in no war. I want to destroy those guns. All I can say, the Government put the literature, give us educations. I remember in Italy, a long time ago, about 60 years ago, I should say, yes, about 60 years ago, the Government they could not control very much those two — devilment went on, and robbery, so one of the Government in the cabinet he says, 'If you want to destroy those devilments, if you want to take off all those criminals, you ought to give a chance to Socialist literature, education of people, emancipation. That is why I destroy governments, boys.' That is why my idea I love Socialists. That is why I like people who want education and living, building, who is good, just as much as they could. That is all.

Q. And that is why you love the United States of America? A. Yes.

Q. She is back more than 20 centuries like Spain, is she? A. At the time of the war they do it.

Q. So without the light of knowledge on that subject, you are condemning even Harvard University, are you, as being a place for rich men?

Q. Did you intend to condemn Harvard College? (Objection overruled.) A. No, sir.

Q. Were you ready to say none but the rich could go there without knowing about offering scholarships? (Objection overruled.)

Q. The question is this: As far as you understood Fruzetti's views, were yours the same? (Objection overruled.)

Q. Answer, please. A. (through the interpreter) I cannot say yes or no.

Q. Is it because you can't or because you don't want to? A. (through the interpreter) Because it is a very delicate question.

Q. It is very delicate, isn't it, because he was deported for his views?

Q. Do you know why Fruzetti was deported? A. (through the interpreter) Yes.

Q. Was it because he was of anarchistic opinions?

The Interpreter. He says he understands it now.

Q. Was it because Fruzetti entertained anarchistic opinions? A. One reason, he was an anarchist. Another reason, Fruzetti been writting all the time on the newspapers, and I am not sure why the reason he been deported.

Q. And the books which you intended to collect were books relating to anarchy, weren't they? A. Not all of them.

Q. How many of them? A. Well, all together. We are Socialists, democratic, any other socialistic information, Socialists, Syndicalists, Anarchists, any paper.

Q. Bolshevist? A. I do not know what Bolshevism means.

Q. Soviet? A. I do not know what Soviet means.

Q. Communism? A. Yes. I got some on astronomy, too.

Q. You weren't going to destroy them? A. I was going to keep them.

Q. You were going to keep them and when the time was over, you were going to bring them out again, weren't you? A. Yes.

In the Anglo-American system of criminal procedure the role of a public prosecutor is very different from that of an advocate in a private cause. In the words of a leading New York case:

> Language which might be permitted to counsel in summing up a civil action cannot with propriety be used by a public prosecutor, who is a quasi-judicial officer, representing the people of the State, and presumed to act impartially in the interest only of justice. If he lays aside the impartiality that should characerize his official action to become a heated partisn, nd by vituperation of the prisoner and appeals to prejudice seeks to procure a conviction at all hazards, he ceases to properly represent the public interest, which demands no victim, and asks no conviction through the aid of passion, sympathy, or resentment.

In 1921 the temper of the times made it the special duty of a prosecutor and a court engaged in trying two Italian radicals before a jury of native New Englanders to keep the instruments of justice free from the infection of passion or prejudice. In the case of Sacco and Vanzetti no such restraints were respected. By systematic exploitation of the defendants' alien blood, their imperfect knowledge of English, their unpopular social views, and their opposition to the war, the District Attorney invoked against them a riot of political passion and patriotic sentiment; and the trial judge connived at—one had almost written, co-operated in—the process. To quote the argument of Mr. William G. Thompson:

> The persistent attempt of the Court in the presence of the jury to suggest that the defendants were claiming that the suppression of the Socialist literature was 'in the interest of the United States,' to which exception was taken, was even more objectionable and prejudicial. It seems incredible that the Court could have believed from any testimony that had been given by Vanzetti or Sacco that their purpose in collecting and suppressing the Socialist literature had anything to do with the interest of the United States.
> If anything had been made plain, it was that they were actuated by personal fear of sharing the fate of Salsedo, not merely deportation, but death by violence while awaiting deportation.
> Yet the Court eight times, in the face of as many explicit disclaimers from Mr. McAnarney, suggested that that was the defendant's claim. Had that claim been made it would, of course, have been the grossest hypocrisy, and might well have sealed the fate of both defendant's with the jury. The repeated suggestion of the Court in the presence of the jury that that was the claim amounted to a violation by the Court of the defendants' elementary constitutional right to a fair and impartial trial. It was not cured by the Court's disclaimer made immediately after the exception was taken to the effect that he did not intend to prejudice the rights of either of these defendants.' Whatever the Court intended, he had fatally prejudiced their right to a fair trial, and no general disclaimer could undo the harm.

That the real purpose of this line of the prosecutor's cross-examination was to inflame the jury's passions is suggested by the professed ground on which, with the Court's sanction, it was conducted. The Commonwealth claimed that the alleged anxiety of Sacco and Vanzetti on the evening of their arrest and the lies they told could be explained only by the fact that they were the murderers of Parmenter and Berardelli. The defense replied that their conduct was clearly accounted for by the fact that the men were Reds, in terror of the Department of Justice. To test the credibility of this answer the District Attorney proposed to examine Sacco and Vanzetti to find out whether they were really radicals or only pretending to be. In effect, the Commonwealth undertook to show that the defendants were imposters, that they were spurious Reds. This it made not the least attempt to do. It never disputed their radicalism. Instead of undermining the claim of the defendants by which their conduct was explained, the District Attorney adopted their confession of radicalism, exaggerated and exploited it. He thereby wholly destroyed the basis of his original claim, for what reason was there any longer to suppose that the "consciousness of guilt" was consciousness of murder rather than of radicalism?

IV.

The deliberate effort to excite the emotions of jurors still in the grip of war fever is not unparalleled in the legal history of the times. During the year 1918-19 in the United states, 4 convictions were reversed by appellate courts for misconduct of the trial judge or the public prosecutor; 33 of them for inflammatory appeals made by the district attorney on matters not properly before the jury. Appellant courts interfere reluctantly in such cases and only where there has been a flagrant abuse, so that we may safely assume the above figures indicate an even more widespread evil. What is unparalleled is that such an abuse should have succeeded in a Massachusetts court.

As things were, what wonder the jury convicted? The last words left with them by Mr. Katzmann were an appeal to their solidarity against the alien: 'Gentlemen of the jury, do your duty. Do it like men. Stand together, you men of Norfolk.' The first words of Judge Thayer's charge revived their memories of the war and sharpened their indignation against the two draft-dodgers whose fate lay in their hands: 'The Commonwealth of Massachusetts called upon you to render a most important service. Although you knew that such service would be arduous, painful, and tiresome, yet you, like the true soldier, responded to that call in the spirit of supreme American loyalty. There is no better word in the English language than "loyalty."' It has been, in the accompaniment of this same war motif that the jurors were first initiated into the case; by the license allowed to the prosecution it had remained continuously in their ears throughout the trial; and now by the final and authoritative voice of the Court it was a soldier's loyalty which was made the measure of their duty.

The function of a judge's charge is to enable the jury to find its way through the maze of conflicting testimony, to sift the relevant from the irrelevant, to weigh wisely, and to judge dispassionately. A trial judge is not expected to rehearse all the testimony; in Massachusetts he is not allowed to express his own opinion on it. But in drawing the disconnected threads of evidence and marshaling the claims on both sides he must exercise a scrupulous regard for relevance and proportion. Misplaced emphasis here, and omission there may work more damage than any outspoken comment. By his summing up a Judge reveals his estimate of relative importance. Judge Thayer's charge directs the emotions only too clearly. What guidance does he give to the mind? The charge occupies 24 pages; of these, 14 are consumed in abstract legal generalities and moral exhortations. Having allowed the minds of the jurors to be impregnated with war feeling, Judge Thayer now invited them to breathe 'a purer atmosphere of unyielding impartiality and absolute fairness.' Unfortunately the passion and prejudice instilled during the course of a long trial cannot be exorcised by the general, placid language of a charge after the mischief is done. Every experienced lawyer knows that it is idle to ask jurors to dismiss from their memory what has been deposited in their feelings.

In this case the vital issue was identification. That the whole mass of conflicting identification testimony is dismissed in two pages out of twenty-four is a fair measure of the distorted perspective in which the Judge placed the case. He dealt with identification in abstract terms and without mentioning the name of any witness on either side. The alibi testimony he likewise dismissed in two paragraphs, again without reference to specific witnesses. In striking contrast to this sterile treatment of the issue whether or not Sacco and Vanzetti were in South Braintree on April 15 was his concrete and elaborate treatment of the inferences which might be drawn from the character of their conduct on the night of their arrest. Five pages of the charge are given over to "consciousness of guilt," set forth in great detail and with specific mention of the testimony given by the various police officials and by Mr. and Mrs. Johnson. The disproportionate consideration which Judge Thayer gave to this issue, in the light of his comments during the trial, must have left the impression that the case turned on "consciousness of guilt." As we have seen, Judge Thayer himself did in fact so interpret the jury's verdict afterward.

As to motive, the Court expatiated for more than a page on his legal conception and the undisputed claim of the Commonwealth that the motive of the murder of Parmenter and Berardelli was robbery, but made no comment whatever on the complete failure of the Commonwealth to trace any of the stolen money to either defendant or to connect them with the art of robbery. Undoubtedly, great weight must have been attached by the jury, as it was by the Court, to the identification of the fatal bullet taken from Berardelli's body as having passed through Sacco's pistol. The Court instructed the jury that Captain Proctor and another expert had testified that "it was his (Sacco's) pistol that fired the bullet that caused the death of Berardelli," when in fact that was not Captain Proctor's testimony. Of course, if the jury believed Proctor's testimony as interpreted by Judge Thayer, Sacco certainly was doomed. In view of the temper of the times, the nature of the accusation, the opinions of the accused, the tactics of the prosecution, and the conduct of the Judge, no wonder the "men of Norfolk" convicted Sacco and Vanzetti!

Hitherto the methods pursued by the prosecution, which explain the convictions, rested on inferences, however compelling. But recently facts have been disclosed, and not denied by the prosecution, to indicate that the case against these Italians for murder was part of a collusive effort between the District Attorney and agents of the Department of Justcie to rid the country of Sacco and Vanzetti because of their red activities. In proof of this we have the affidavits of two former officers of the Government, one of whom served as Postoffice Inspector for 25 years, and both of whom are now in honorable civil employment. Sacco's and Vanzetti's names were on the files of the Department of Justice "as radicals to be watched"; the department was eager for their deportation, but had not evidence enough to secure it; and inasmuch as the United States District Court for Massachusetts had checked abuses in deportation proceedings, the department had become chary of resorting to deportation without adequate legal basis. The arrest of Sacco and Vanzetti, on the mistaken theory of Chief Stewart, furnished the agents of the department their opportunity. Although the opinion of the agents working on the case was that "the South Braintree crime was the work of professionals," and that Sacco and Vanztti, "although anarchists and agitators, were not highway robbers, and had nothing to do with the South Braintree crime," yet they collaborated with the District Attorney in the prosecution of Sacco and Vanzetti for murder. For "it was the opinion of the department agents here that a conviction of Sacco and Vanzetti for murder would be one way of disposing of these two men." Here, to be sure, is a startling allegation. But it is made by a man of long years of important service in the Government's employ. It is supported by the now admitted installation of a Government spy in a cell adjoining Sacco's with a view to "obtaining whatever incriminating evidence he could . . . after winning his confidence"; by the insinuation of an "under-cover man" into the councils of the Sacco-Vanzetti Defense Committee; by the proposed placement of another spy as a lodger in Mrs. Sacco's house; and by the supplying of information about the radical activities of Sacco and Vanzetti to the District Attorney by the agents of the Department of Justice.

These joint labors between Boston agents of the Department of Justice and the District Attorney led to a great deal of correspondence between the agent in charge and the District Attorney and to reports between the agents of the Department and Washington. These records have not been made available, nor has their absence been accounted for. An appeal to Attorney-General Sargent proved fruitless, although supported by Senator Butler of Massachusetts, requesting that Mr. West, the then agent in charge, 'be authorized to talk with counsel for Sacco and Vanzetti and to disclose whatever documents and correspondence are on file in his office dealing with the investigation made by the Boston agents before, during, and after the trial of Sacco Vanzetti." The facts upon which this appeal was made stand uncontradicted. West made no denial whatever and the District Attorney only emphasized his failure to deny the facts charged by the two former agents of the Department of Justice by an affidavit confined to a denial of some of the statements of a former Government spy. The charge that the principal agent of the Department of Justice in Boston and the District Attorney collaborated to secure the conviction of Sacco and Vanzetti is denied neither by the agent nor by the District Attorney. Chief Stewart of Bridgewater takes it upon himself to say that the officials of the Department "had nothing whatsoever to do with the preparation of this case for trial." Instead of making a full disclosure of the facts the representative of the Commonwealth indulged in vituperation against the former officers of the Department of Justice as men who were guilty of "a breach of loyalty" because they violated the watchword of the Department of Justice, "Do not betray the secrets of your departments." To which Mr. Thompson rightly replies, "What are the secrets which they admit? . . . A Government which has come to value its own secrets more than it does the lives of its citizens has become a tyranny. . . . Secrets, secrets! And he says you should abstain from touching this verdict of your jury because it is so sacred. Would they not have liked to know something about the secrets? The case is admitted by that inadvertent concession. There are, then, secrets to be admitted." Yet Judge Thayer found in these circumstances only opportunity to make innuendo against a former official of the Government well known for his long and honorable service, and an elaborate denial of a claim that was never made. Not less than 12 times Judge Thayer ridicules the charge of a conspiracy between "these two great Governments—that of the United States and the Commonwealth of Massachusetts"! He indulges in much partriotic protestation, but is wholly silent about the specific acts of wrongdoing and lawlessness connected with the Red raids of 1920. The historian who relied on this opinion would have to assume that the charge of lawlessness and misconduct in the deportations of outlawed radicals was the traitorous invention of a diseased mind.

The verdict of guilty was brought in on July 14, 1921. The exceptions which had been taken to rulings at the trial were made the b of an application for a new which Judge Thayer refused. sequently a great mass of new dence was unearthed by the fense, and made the subject of er motions for a new trial, all before Judge Thayer and all nied by him. The hearing on later motions took place on 1, 1923, and was the occasion the entry into the case of Mr. W liam G. Thompson, a powerful vocate bred in the traditions of Massachusetts courts. The of the Sacco-Vanzetti case man of Mr. Thompson's profession al prestige at once gave it a complexion and has been its stay ever since. For he has to the case, not only his great ity as a lawyer, but the strength of his conviction that these men are innocent and that trial was not characterized by the high standards which are the of Massachusetts justice.

We have now reached a stage the case the details of which one's confidence in the course of the proceedings and veal a situation which under the respect usually to be accorded to a jury's verdict. By prearrange ment the prosecution brought fore the jury a piece of evidence apparently most damaging to defendants, when in fact the truth concerning this evidence very favorable to them. Vital to identification of Sacco and Vanzetti as the murderers was the identi cation of one of the fatal bullets as a bullet coming from Sacco's pistol. The evidence excluded possibility that five other bullets found in the dead bodies were by either Sacco or Vanzetti. W Judge Thayer placed the case the jury's hands for judgment charged them that the Common wealth had introduced the testi mony of two experts, Proctor and Van Amburgh, to the effect that the fatal bullet went through Sac co's pistol.

Such was not the belief of Proc tor; he refused to accede to this view in the course of the prepara tion of the case, and the District Attorney knew that such was intended to be his testimony. This startling statement calls for de tailed proof.

Proctor at the time of his testi mony was head of the state police and had been in the Department of Public Safety for 23 years. the witness stand he was qualified at length as an expert who had for 20 years been making examinations of, and experiments with, bullets and revolvers and had testified in over a hundred capital cases. His testimony was thus offered by the State as entitled to the greatest weight. If the jury could be con vinced that the bullet found in Berardelli's body came out of Sac co's pistol, the State's case was invincible. On this crucial issue Captain Proctor testified as follows at the trial:—

Q. Have you an opinion as to whether bullet Number 3 (Exhibit 18) was fired from the Colt auto matic, which is in evidence? A. have.

Q. And what is your opinion? A. My opinion is that it is consistent with being fired from that pistol.

The Government placed chief re liance on his expert testimony. In his closing argument the District Attorney told the jury, 'You might disregard all the identification tes timony, and base your verdict on the testimony of these experts.' It weighed heavily in the Court's charge. In simple English he in terpreted the evidence to mean that > it was his (Sacco's) pistol that fired the bullet that caused the death of Berardelli. To this effect the Com monwealth introduced the testimony of two witnesses, Messrs. Proctor and Van Amburgh.

Naturally, the Court's interpreta tion became the jury's. By their si lence the District Attorney and the counsel for the defense acquiesced in the Court's interpretation, sh ing that counsel for both sides ap parently attached the same mean ing to this testimony. After conviction Proctor in an affidavit swore to the following as to his true views and the manner which they were phrased for pur poses of the trial. After giving experience and the fact that he had the custody of the bullets, tridges, shells and pistols in the case, he swore that one of the lets was, as I then testified and believe, fired from a Colt automatic pistol of 32 caliber. During preparation for the trial, my was repeatedly called by the District Attorney and his assistant to the question: Whether I could any evidence which would justify the opinion that the particular let taken from the body of Berar delli, which came from a Colt au tomatic pistol, came from the ticular Colt automatic pistol taken from Sacco. I used every available to me for forming opinion on this subject. I conduct ed, with Captain Van Amburgh, tain tests at Lowell, about which I testified, consisting in firing tain cartridges through Sacco's tol. At no time was I able to any evidence whatever which ed to convince me that the lar model bullet found in Berar delli's body, which came from a automatic pistol, which I think numbered 3 and had some hibit number, came from Sacco's pistol, and I so informed the Dis trict Attorney and his assistant fore the trial. This bullet was is commonly called a full patch bullet and although I edly talked over with Captain Van Amburgh the scratch or marks which he claimed tended to this bullet as one that must gone through Sacco's pistol, statements concerning the ing marks seemed to me unconvincing.

At the trial, the District Att did not ask me whether I had any evidence that the so-called tal bullet which I have referred as Number 3 passed through

Old Folks Need a Mild Laxative —Not a "Physic"

Most men and women past fifty must give to the bowels some occasional help, else they suffer from constipation. One might as well refuse to aid weak eyes with glasses as to neglect a gentle aid to weak bowels.

Is your present laxative, in whatever form, promoting natural bowel "regularity"—or must you purge and "physic" every day or two to avoid sick headache, dizziness, biliousness, colds, or sour, gassy stomach?

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin helps to establish natural, regular bowel movement even for those chronically constipated. It never gripes, sickens or upsets the system. Besides, it is absolutely harmless and pleasant to take.

Buy a large 60-cent bottle at any store that sells medicine, or write "Syrup Pepsin," Monticello, Illinois, for a FREE SAMPLE BOTTLE and just see for yourself.

COAL PRODUCTION FOR WEEK, 8,250,000 TONS

Report to Bureau of Mines Shows Drop of 4,000,000 Tons in Strike.

By the Associated Press

WASHINGTON, April 13.—Coal production in the United States for the week ending April 9, the first full week since a partial suspension of union mine operation, amounted to 8,250,000 tons, on the face of preliminary figures furnished to Secretary Hoover yesterday by the Bureau of Mines and the American Railway Association. This compares with the approximately 13,000,000 tons' output for the week prior to the suspension.

The figures are subject to correction when full reports are received from all of the mining districts, the Secretary said. The total shown for the week ending April 9 was somewhat below the estimated capacity of nonunion mines plus union mines which are still in operation, he added.

DETROIT DOCTOR ARRESTED AGAIN FOR MURDER OF WIFE

Dr. Frank R. Loomis, Held for Questioning in February, Was Released on Writ.

By the Associated Press.

DETROIT, Mich., April 13.—The mysterious clubbing to death in their home the night of Feb. 22 of Mrs. Grace Loomis has resulted in the arrest of her husband, Dr. Frank R. Loomis, physician and surgeon, on a charge of first-degree murder and detention as police witnesses of three other persons, one of them a woman with whom the physician is said to have asociated before his wife's death.

Loomis, who was questioned for several days and later released through habeas corpus proceedings instituted by professional friends, was arrested in his office yesterday about an hour after a Recorder's Court Judge had signed a warrant. The three held as police witnesses are Roy Newell, 38 years old; his divorced wife, Gertrude, 39, and the latter's friend, Mrs. Bessie Fraser, 31.

Detectives of the homicide squad said Mrs. Newell had admitted that she accompanied Dr. Loomis on automobile rides previous to the time Mrs. Loomis was slain.

MAYOR OF GRANITE CITY SEEKING HIS FOURTH TERM

R. E. Robertson Opposed by Three Other Candidates in Spirited Campaign.

Mayor R. E. Robertson of Granite City, elected three times as an independent, is seeking re-election as the regular Farmer-Labor Party candidate in the Granite City election next Tuesday. Robertson will be opposed by three other candidates.

M. E. Kirkpatrick, former Socialist Mayor of Granite City, is again a candidate, and has the support of the Citizens' Party. John W. Costley, former president of the Board of Education, and now member of the Levee and Sanitary District Commission, is a candidate on an "economy ticket," the fourth candidate being R. E. Hands, named by the Independent Party.

In addition to Mayor, the officers to be voted for are City Treasurer, City Clerk, Superintendent of Streets, and Aldermen for seven wards. It is believed the election will bring out a record vote.

TORN DOLLAR BILL CONVICTS ROBBER OF SALOON HOLDUP

Michael Lahart Given Five Years by Jury for Page Boulevard Robbery.

A torn $1 bill, mended with trading stamps, was an important piece of evidence in the case of Michael Lahart, 26 years old, of 715A South Boyle avenue, who was today convicted by a jury in Circuit Judge Ossing's court for robbery. His punishment was fixed at five years.

Lahart was arrested on suspicion on Nov. 22 last, a short distance from the saloon of Louis Grimme at 4800 Page boulevard, which had just been held up. About $40, the amount taken, was found in Lahart's pockets. It included the torn bill, which Grimme testified he had mended with trading stamps a short time before the holdup.

Lahart did not take the stand. The conviction was his second. He got five years for another holdup in 1923 and served a term.

ARMY BALLOON TEAMS CHOSEN

Three Scott Field Officers Among Those Picked for Race.

By the Associated Press

WASHINGTON, April 13.—Selection of four teams to represent the army in the national elimination balloon race to be held at Akron, O., May 29, was announced today by the War Department.

First Lieutenant Paul Evert, as pilot, and First Lieutenant R. R. Gillespie, as aid, both of Langley Field, Va., comprise team No. 1; First Lieutenant James F. Powell of Scott Field and Maj. Maurice R. Smith, Air Corps Reserve, of Kansas City, Mo., team No. 2; Capt. William E. Kepner of Scott Field and Second Lieutenant William O. Eareckson of Scott Field, team No. 3, and First Lieutenant Frank M. McKee of Norton Field, Columbus, O., and Capt. Samuel T. Moore, Air Corps Reserve, of Springfield, Mass., team No. 4. It is expected that 14 balloons will enter the contest, the three entries traveling the greatest distance to be selected to represent this country in the Gordon Bennett international balloon race, which will be held from Detroit.

The Modern Method Of Roasting Meat To Perfection

To the modern woman, there probably is no other food as useful in the kitchen as Mazola. Nearly every day she finds new uses for it in all cooking, frying, baking and for fine salad dressings.

This recipe from Ida Bailey Allen's New Book (see coupon below) demonstrates a new use for Mazola that is being welcomed everywhere.

Once you try Mazola for cooking you will never go back to the old fashioned way of using animal fats.

To Roast Meat

Wipe the meat with a damp cloth, place in a dripping pan or double roaster, dust with salt, pepper and flour, allowing from one to two tablespoons of flour to sift on the bottom of the pan, and put in a hot oven, 375 to 400 degrees F. to brown. This takes from fifteen to twenty minutes. Pour a little hot water into the pan containing two or three tablespoons Mazola and one-half tablespoon of Karo, Blue Label. Baste the meat with this every fifteen minutes, until done. Make a gravy from the drippings in the pan, adding a cup of boiling water to each half cup of drippings. If necessary, thicken the gravy with a little Argo or Kingsford's Cornstarch blended with cold water.

SPY BETRAYED PLOT TO KILL MUSSOLINI

Secretary of Confessed Ring-Leader Zaniboni Was a Police Agent, Witness Says.

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch.

ROME, April 13.—The president of the court trying Tito Zaniboni, former Socialist deputy, and others for a plot to kill Premier Mussolini in November, 1925, indignantly demanded an explanation yesterday of the prisoner's testimony that the gun he intended to use against Mussolini had been bought under the pretext that he was going on a chamois hunt. Zaniboni hastened to deny that he intended to class the Premier with the mountain animals, although he was proud of his plot.

The trial was devoted to examination of a former journalist, Ulysses Ducci, and others who denied any part in the plot. Ducci denied that the Masonic Grand Lodge participated in the association of the Liberta E Patria or gave funds for agitation to separate Sicily from the rest of Italy. Ducci was confused under cross-examination regarding his lending money to Zaniboni, although their acquaintance was slight.

Testimony today developed that information of the plot was given to the authorities by Zaniboni's secretary, Quaglia, who was in the pay of the police. This disclosure was made by Crispi Moncada, Director-General of Police, who was removed from office after Zaniboni's arrest.

Describing the secret activities of the anti-Fascist organizations during 1925, Moncada told the Court that the evidence gathered by the police showed beyond doubt the complicity of Gen. Luigi Cappello and others accused of participating in Zaniboni's plot.

A large measure of the financing of anti-governmental plots, Moncada said, was carried out largely through Gen. Cappello, but 145,000 lire was furnished by the Freemasons. Since this amount, in addition to other sums gathered from abroad and from plotters in Italy did not suffice for a revolt on a grand scale, Moncada declared, Zaniboni decided to try to kill Mussolini.

ST. CHARLES COUNCIL TO SEAT HENRY BROEKER AS MAYOR

Election Certificate Voted Despite Fact He Is Alleged to Owe $34 in Taxes.

The St. Charles City Council voted last night to issue certificates of election to Henry Broeker, who was elected Mayor, April 5, by 31 votes, defeating Mayor J. H. Lackland, and Charles A. Douglas, who was elected to the Council, defeating Councilman George Deters by 90 votes, although Broeker is alleged to owe $34 merchant's and occupational tax and Douglas $5 property tax.

City Attorney W. F. Achelpohl told the Council that, under the law, Broeker and Douglas were not qualified for office because of these debts, Osmund Haenssler, attorney for Broeker, said the Council had no alternative but to issue the certificates. To take office, Broeker and Douglas would have to make oath that they were qualified, and when the time for this comes, St. Charles expects to see the dispute settled. Broeker asserts he paid his taxes. If he and Douglas cannot qualify, Lackland and Deters would continue in office. The latter two might decide to contest the election.

The motion to issue the certificates was seconded by Councilman Deters and the vote was 5 to 3, Mayor Lackland presiding. Three other new Councilmen will take office without question.

'ELMER GANTRY' EXCLUDED FROM BOSTON BOOKSTORES

District Attorney Forbids Sale Under Massachusetts Law Against Improper Literature.

By the Associated Press.

BOSTON, April 13.—Further sale in Suffolk County, Massachusetts, of "Elmer Gantry," Sinclair Lewis' latest novel, will be followed by immediate prosecution, District Attorney William T. Foley has notified the Boston Booksellers' Committee.

Assistant District Attorney William J. Sullivan read the book and reported that it violated Massachusetts law. The statute under which the action was taken provides that whoever "publishes, sells or distributes a book, pamphlet, ballad, printed paper or other thing containing obscene, indecent or impure language, or manifestly tending to corrupt the morals of youth," shall be punished by imprisonment for not more than two years, and by a fine of not less than $100 or more than $2000.

So easy to prevent body odor now

[Just wash and bathe with this toilet soap that purifies pores]

HOW strange it is that we can instantly detect the faintest hint of body odor in others, yet never realize that we ourselves are often just as guilty!

There is never a time when we all do not need to be on guard against the danger of offending. For science proves that even in cool weather the pores continually give off quantities of odor-causing moisture.

But why risk body odor when it's so easy to be safe? No extra trouble—just use Lifebuoy. Lifebuoy is so refreshing that millions bathe with it every day. It purifies pores — gives lasting freedom from body odor.

Those suffering from odor due to underarm perspiration or perspiring feet will especially welcome the purifying action of Lifebuoy's antiseptic lather.

Wonderful for complexion

Countless men and women declare they will use nothing but Lifebuoy—just because it is so delightfully mild and soothing to the skin, yet so invigorating. Its pure bland oils are marvelous for keeping the complexion smooth and clear.

And more important still, Lifebuoy's penetrating, antiseptic lather removes germs from hands as well as dirt—helps protect you and your family against the 27 germ diseases which, according to the Life Extension Institute, may be carried into your home by hands.

A hygienic scent that millions love

Lifebuoy is so different from other toilet and bath soaps that even its scent is different. Not a perfume, but a clean, pleasantly hygienic scent which tells you Lifebuoy gives greater protection.

Change toilet soaps —and see!

Even before you've finished your first cake, you'll learn to love this cleanest of all soap scents, which quickly evaporates after rinsing.

Without its antiseptic, Lifebuoy would still be a wonderful toilet soap—but you wouldn't get the added protection.

Added safety—no extra cost

Lifebuoy assures greater health protection, and freedom from body odor — yet costs no more, probably less, than the toilet soap you now use. Lifebuoy is orange-red, the color of its pure palm-fruit oils. You can get it wherever soap is sold.

istol, nor was I asked that quesion on cross-examination. The District Attorney desired to ask me hat question, but I had repeatedly old him that if he did I should be bliged to answer in the negative; onsequently, he put to me this uestion: Q. Have you an opinion s to whether bullet Number 3 was ired from the Colt automatic which s in evidence? To which I anwered, 'I have.' He then proceeded.
. And what is your opinion? A. y opinion is that it is consistent ith being fired by that pistol.
He proceeded to state that he is ill of the same opinion:—
But I do not intend by that an-wer to imply that I had found any vidence that the so-called mortal ullet had passed through this par-icular Colt automatic pistol and he District Attorney well knew hat I did not so intend and framed is question accordingly. Had I een asked the direct question:
hether I had found any affirma-ive evidence whatever that this so-alled mortal bullet had passed hrough this particular Sacco's pisol, I should have answered then, as o now without hesitation, in the ative.
This affidavit of Proctor was ade the basis of Mr. Thompson's otion for a new trial before Judge hayer. Here was a charge going o the vitals of the case, made by high offical of the police agencies f the State. How did the District Attorney meet it? Mr. Katzmann nd his assistant, Mr. Williams, iled affidavits in reply. Did they ontradict Proctor? They could ot deny his testimony or the eight that the prosecution and he Court had attached to it. These ere matters of record. Did they eny the prearrangement which he harged? Did they deny that he old them he was unable to identi-y the mortal bullet as Sacco's bulet?
Katzmann's affidavit stated that rior to his testifying, Capt. Procor told me that he was prepared to stify that the mortal bullet was onsistent with having been fired om the Sacco pistol; that I did ot repeatedly ask him whether he ad found any evidence that the ortal bullet had passed through e Sacco pistol, nor did he repeatdly tell me that if I did ask him at question he would be obliged reply in the negative.
Williams' affidavit, after setting rth that Capt. Proctor told him efore the trial that comparisons the mortal bullet with bullets ushed by him through various ypes of pistols' showed that 'the ortal bullet had been fired in a olt automatic pistol,' proceeded:
He said that all he could do was determine the width of the landarks upon the bullet. His attenon was not repeatedly called to e question, whether he could find y evidence which would justify e opinion that this bullet came om the Sacco pistol. I conducted e direct examination of Capt.
roctor at the trial and asked him
e question quoted in his affidavit, Have you an opinion as to whether ullet No. 3 was fired from the Colt utomatic which is in evidence?'
This question was suggested by apt. Proctor himself as best calcuted to give him an opportunity tell what opinion he had respect-g the mortal bullet and its conection with the Sacco pistol. His nswer in court was the same an-er he had given me personally ore.
Proctor's disclosures remain unontradicted; he was unable to entify the murder bullet as Saco's bullet; he told Katzmann and Williams that he was unable to do
; he told them if he were asked he question on the witness stand e would hve to testify that he ould not make the identification; form of words was therefore und by which, without commit-g perjury, he could convey the mpression that he had testified to he identification. The only contraiction by Katzmann and Williams f Proctor's account affects the umber of times that he told them hat he was unable to make the entification, he having sworn that e told them "repeatedly" and they enying that he had told them "re-eatedly." Yet Judge Thayer found o warrant in the Proctor incident or directing a new trial. And hy?
The Judge quotes the Proctor uestions and answers and argues hat the questions were clear and ust have been perfectly underood by Captain Proctor. Of ourse, the questions were clear nd clearly understood by Proctor.
he whole meaning of Captain roctor's affidavit was that the uestions and answers were proanged and that by this preangement court and jury were isled with terrible harm to the efendants.
The Judge is extraordinarily veratile in misinterpreting the true urport of the Proctor affidavit.
hus he seriously asks why, if aptain Proctor at the trial was esirous of expressing his true inion,' he used the phrase 'content with,' language selected by nself. The crux of the matter that Captain Proctor at the trial as not 'desirous of expressing his ue opinion,' that the District Atrney was very desirous that he hould not do so, and that between em they agreed on a form of ords to avoid it.
The Judge next attempts to bettle the weight of Proctor's testiony two years after he was of-red by the Commonwealth with aborate reliance as a most im-ortant expert. We must dwell on e amazing statement of the ourt. 'With his limited knowldge,' says Judge Thayer, 'Captain roctor did not testify that the ortal bullet did pass through Sac-
's pistol, but that from his exmination of the facts it was simpy consistent with it.' Why did not udge Thayer say this to the jury en he charged them with dermining the guilt or innocence of acco? Why did the Judge charge e jury that Captain Proctor did

"THE PORTENTOUS CASE OF SACCO AND VANZETTI"

pistol, nor was I asked that question on cross-examination. The District Attorney desired to ask me that question, but I had repeatedly told him that if he did I should be obliged to answer in the negative; consequently, he put to me this question: Q. Have you an opinion as to whether bullet Number 3 was fired from the Colt automatic which is in evidence? To which I answered, 'I have.' He then proceeded. Q. And what is your opinion? A. My opinion is that it is consistent with being fired by that pistol.

He proceeded to state that he is still of the same opinion:—

But I do not intend by that answer to imply that I had found any evidence that the so-called mortal bullet had passed through this particular Colt automatic pistol and the District Attorney well knew that I did not so intend and framed his question accordingly. Had I been asked the direct question: whether I had found any affirmative evidence whatever that this so-called mortal bullet had passed through this particular Sacco's pistol, I should have answered then, as I do now without hesitation, in the negative.

This affidavit of Proctor was made the basis of Mr. Thompson's motion for a new trial before Judge Thayer. Here was a charge going to the vitals of the case, made by a high offiical of the police agencies of the State. How did the District Attorney meet it? Mr. Katzmann and his assistant, Mr. Williams, filed affidavits in reply. Did they contradict Proctor? They could not deny his testimony or the weight that the prosecution and the Court had attached to it. These were matters of record. Did they deny the prearrangement which he charged? Did they deny that he told them he was unable to identify the mortal bullet as Sacco's bullet?

Katzmann's affidavit stated that prior to his testifying, Capt. Proctor told me that he was prepared to testify that the mortal bullet was consistent with having been fired from the Sacco pistol; that I did not repeatedly ask him whether he had found any evidence that the mortal bullet had passed through the Sacco pistol, nor did he repeatedly tell me that if I did ask him that question he would be obliged to reply in the negative.

Williams' affidavit, after setting forth that Capt. Proctor told him before the trial that comparisons of the mortal bullet with bullets pushed by him through various types of pistols' showed that 'the mortal bullet had been fired in a Colt automatic pistol,' proceeded:

He said that all he could do was to determine the width of the landmarks upon the bullet. His attention was not repeatedly called to the question, whether he could find any evidence which would justify the opinion that this bullet came from the Sacco pistol. I conducted the direct examination of Capt. Proctor at the trial and asked him the question quoted in his affidavit, 'Have you an opinion as to whether bullet No. 3 was fired from the Colt automatic which is in evidence?' This question was suggested by Capt. Proctor himself as best calculated to give him an opportunity to tell what opinion he had respecting the mortal bullet and its connection with the Sacco pistol. His answer in court was the same answer he had given me personally before.

Proctor's disclosures remain uncontradicted; he was unable to identify the murder bullet as Sacco's bullet; he told Katzmann and Williams that he was unable to do so; he told them if he were asked the question on the witness stand he would hve to testify that he could not make the identification; a form of words was therefore found by which, without committing perjury, he could convey the impression that he had testified to the identification. The only contradiction by Katzmann and Williams of Proctor's account affects the number of times that he told them that he was unable to make the identification, he having sworn that he told them "repeatedly" and they denying that he had told them "repeatedly." Yet Judge Thayer found no warrant in the Proctor incident for directing a new trial. And why?

The Judge quotes the Proctor questions and answers and argues that the questions were clear and must have been perfectly understood by Captain Proctor. Of course, the questions were clear and clearly understood by Proctor. The whole meaning of Captain Proctor's affidavit was that the questions and answers were prearranged and that by this prearrangement court and jury were misled with terrible harm to the defendants.

The Judge is extraordinarily versatile in misinterpreting the true purport of the Proctor affidavit. Thus he seriously asks why, if Captain Proctor at the trial was desirous of expressing his true opinion,' he used the phrase 'consistent with,' language selected by himself. The crux of the matter is that Captain Proctor at the trial was not 'desirous of expressing his true opinion,' that the District Attorney was very desirous that he should not do so, and that between them they agreed on a form of words to avoid it.

The Judge next attempts to belittle the weight of Proctor's testimony two years after he was offered by the Commonwealth with elaborate reliance as a most important expert. We must dwell on one amazing statement of the Court. 'With his limited knowledge,' says Judge Thayer, 'Captain Proctor did not testify that the mortal bullet did pass through Sacco's pistol, but that from his examination of the facts it was simply consistent with it.' Why did not Judge Thayer say this to the jury when he charged them with determining the guilt or innocence of Sacco? Why did the Judge charge the jury that Captain Proctor did testify that the mortal bullet passed through Sacco's pistol? And why, having in October, 1924, for the purpose of denying the Proctor motion, minimized the Proctor testimony by saying that Proctor testified that the passing of the mortal bullet through Sacco's pistol was 'simply consistent with' the facts, does he two years later, in order to show how strong the case was at the original trial, state that the 'experts testified in their judgment it (the mortal bullet) was perfectly consistent with' having been fired through the Sacco pistol? In charging the jury Judge Thayer misled them by maximizing the Proctor testimony as the prearrangement intended that it should be maximized. When the prearrangement was discovered and made the basis of a motion for a new trial, Judge Thayer depreciated Proctor's qualifications as an expert and minimized Proctor's actual testimony. Finally, when confronted with new evidence pointing seriously to guilt for the Berardelli murder, not only away from Sacco and Vanzetti, but positively in another direction, in order to give the appearance of impressiveness to the facts before the jury Judge Thayer again relies upon the weightiness of Proctor's expert testimony and maximizes Porctor's evidence at the trial, but not to the extent that he did in charging the jury because Proctor's affidavit now prevents him from doing so!

This is the attitude of mind which has guided the conduct of this case from the beginning; this is the Judge who has for all practical purposes sat in judgment upon his own conduct.

English criminal justice is constantly held up to us, and rightly so, as an example. One ventures confidently to say that conduct like that revealed by the Proctor incident is inconceivable in an English prosecution. But if it did take place, there is no possible doubt that the corrective resources of the English courts would not allow a verdict secured by such means to stand. Such behavior surely violates the standards which the Massachusetts Supreme Judicial Court has laid down for district attorneys:

> The power of a district attorney under our laws are very extensive. They affect to a high degree the liberty of the individual, the good order of society, and the safety of the community. His natural influence with the grand jury, and the confidence commonly reposed in his recommendations by judges, afford to the unscrupulous, the weak or the wicked incumbent of the office vast opportunity to oppress the innocent and to shield the guilty, to trouble his enemies and to protect his friends, and to make the interest of the public subservient to his personal desires, his individual ambitions, and his private advantage. * * * Powers so great impose responsibilities correspondingly grave. They demand character incorruptible, reputation unsullied, a high standard of professional ethics, and sound judgment of no mean order.

If the Proctor situation does not come within the condemnation of these requirements, language certainly has strange meaning. Yet the Massachusetts Supreme Court held that Judge Thayer's decision could not "as a matter of law" be reversed.

VI.

On May 12, 1926, the Supreme Court of Massachusetts found "no error" in any of the rulings of Judge Thayer. The guilt or innocence of the defendants was not retried in the Supreme Court. That Court did not inquire whether the facts as set forth in the printed record justified the verdict. Such would have been the scope of judicial review had the case come before the New York Court of Appeals or the English Court of Criminal Appeal. In those jurisdictions a judgment upon the facts as well as upon the law is open, and their courts decide whether convictions should stand in view of the whole record. A much more limited scope in reviewing convictions prevails in Massachusetts. What is reviewed in effect is the conduct of the trial Judge; only so-called questions of law are open.

The merits of the legal questions raised by the exceptions cannot be discussed here. Suffice it to say, with deference, that some of the Supreme Court rulings are puzzling in the extreme. One question of law, however, can be explained within small compass, and that is the question which is the crux of the case: Did Judge Thayer observe the standards of Anglo-American justice? In legal parlance, was there abuse of "judicial discretion" by Judge Thayer? What, then, is "judicial discretion?" Is it a legal abracadabra, or does it imply standards of conduct within the comprehension of the laity in whose interests they are enforced? The present Chief Justice of Massachusetts has given an authoritative definition:

> Discretion in this connection means a sound judicial discretion, enlighted by intelligence and learning, controlled by sound principles of law, of firm courage combined with the calmness of a cool mind, free from partiality, not swayed by sympathy, nor warped by prejudice nor moved by any kind of influence save alone the overwhelming passion to do that which is just. It may be assumed that conduct manifesting abuse of judicial discretion will be reviewed and some relief afforded.

This is the test by which Judge Thayer's conduct must be measured. The Supreme Court found no abuse of judicial discretion on the record presented at the first hearing before it. In other words, the Court was satisfied that throughout the conduct of the trial and the proceedings that followed it Judge Thayer was governed by "the calmness of a cool mind, free from partiality, not swayed by sympathy nor warped by prejudice nor moved by any kind of influence save alone the overwhelming passion to do that which is just."

The reader has now had placed before him fairly, it is hoped, however briefly, the means of forming a judgment. Let him judge for himself!

VII.

Hitherto the defense has maintained that the circumstances of the case all pointed away from Sacco and Vanzetti. But the deaths of Parmenter and Berardelli have remained unexplained. Now the defense has adduced new proof, not only that Sacco and Vanzetti did not commit the murders, but also, positively, that a well-known gang of professional criminals did commit them. Hitherto a new trial has been pressed because of the character of the original trial. Now a new trial has been demanded because an impressive body of evidence tends to establish the guilt of others.

Celestino F. Madeiros, a young Portuguese with a bad criminal record, was in 1925 confined in the same prison with Sacco. On Nov. 18, while his appeal from a conviction of murder committed in an attempt at bank robbery was pending in the Supreme Court, he sent to Sacco through a jail messenger the following note:

> I hear by confess to being in the South Braintree shoe company crime and Sacco and Vanzetti was not in said crime.
> CELESTINO F. MADEIROS.

The confession of a criminal assuming guilt for a crime laid at another's door is always suspect, and rightly so. But, as we cannot too strongly insist, the new evidence is not contained in the Madeiros confession. His note to Sacco was only the starting point which enabled the defense to weave the network of independent evidence implicating the Morelli gang of Providence.

As soon as Sacco's counsel was apprized of this note he began a searching investigation of Madeiros' claim. It then appeared that Madeiros had tried several times previously to tell Sacco that he knew the real perpetrators of the Braintree job, but Sacco, fearing he was a spy, had disregarded what he said. An interview with Madeiros revealed such circumstantiality of detail that an examination of Madeiros, both by the defense and by the Commonwealth, was plainly called for. The various affidavits given by Madeiros and the deposition of one hundred pages, in which he was cross-examined by the District Attorney, tell the following story:

'In 1920 Madeiros, then eighteen years old, was living in Providence. He already had a criminal record and was associated with a gang of Italians engaged in robbing freight cars. One evening, when they were talking together in a saloon in Providence, some members of the gang invited him to join them in a pay-roll robbery at South Braintree. A holdup was a new form of criminal enterprise for him, but they told him 'they had done lots of jobs of this kind' and persuaded him to come along. As an eighteen-year-old novice he was to be given only a subordinate part. He was to sit in the back of a car with a revolver and 'help hold back the crowd in case they made a rush.' Accordingly a few days later, on April 15, 1920, the plan was carried into execution. In the party, besides Madeiros, were three Italians and a 'kind of a slim fellow with light hair,' who drove the car. In order to prevent identification they adopted the familiar device of using two cars. They started out in a Hudson, driving to some woods near Randolph. They then exchanged the Hudson for a Buick brought them by another member of the gang. In the Buick they proceeded to South Braintree, arriving there about noon. When the time came the actual shooting was done by the oldest of the Italians, a man about forty, and one other. The rest of the party remained near by in the automobile. As the crime was being committed they drove up, took aboard the murderers and the money, and made off. They drove back to the Randolph woods, exchanged the Buick again for the Hudson, and returned to Providence. The arrangement was that Madeiros should meet the others in a saloon at Providence the following night to divide the spoils. Whether this arrangement was kept and whether he got any of the Braintree loot Madeiros persistently refused to say.

This refusal was in pursuance of Madiero's avowed policy. From the outset he anounced his determination not to reveal the identity of his associates in the Braintree job, while holding back nothing which seemed to implicate himself alone. To shield them he obstinately declined to answer questions and if necessary, frankly resorted to lies. Thus, examination could not extort from him the surnames of the gang, and he further sought to cover up their identity by giving some of them false Christian names. Madeiros showed considerable astuteness in evading what he wanted to conceal. But in undertaking to tell the story of the crime without revealing the criminals he set himself an impossible task. In spite of his efforts, a lawyer as resourceful as Mr. Thompson was able to elicit facts which, when followed up, established the identity of the gang and also strongly coroborated the story of Madeiros.

Madeiros said that the gang "had been engaged in robbing freight cars in Providence." Was there such a gang? There was the Morelli gang, well known to the police of Providence and New Bedford as professional criminals, several of whom at the time of the Braintree murders were actually under indictment in the United States District Court for Rhode Island for stealing from freight cars. Five out of nine indictments charging shoe thefts were for stealing consignments from Slater & Morrill at South Braintree and from Rice & Hutchins, the factory next door. In view of their method of operations, the gang must have had a confederate at South Braintree to spot shipments for them. The Slater & Morrill factory was about 100 yards from the South Braintree railroad station and an accomplice spotting shipments would be passed by the paymaster on his weekly trip. It will be recalled that the pay roll was that of the Slater & Morrill factory and that the murder and the robbery occurred in front of these two factories. The Morrillis under the indictment were out of jail awaiting trial. They needed money for their defense; their only source of income was crime. They were at large until May 25, when they were convicted and sent to Atlanta.

Madeiros did not name the gang, but described the men who were with him at South Braintree. How did his description fit the Morelli gang? The leader of the gang was Joe, aged 39. His brothers were Mike, Patsy, Butsy, and Fred. Other members were Bibba Barone, Gyp the Blood, Mancini, and Steve the Pole. Bibba Barone and Fred Morelli were in jail on April 15, 1920. According to Madeiros there were five, including himself, in the murder car, three of whom were Italians, and the driver "Polish or Finland or something northern Europe." The shooting was done by the oldest of the Italians, a man of about 40, and another called Bill. A fourth Italian brought up the Buick car for exchange at Randolph. As far as his descriptions carry, Madeiros's party fits the members of the Morelli gang. But the testimony of independent witnesses corroborates Madeiros and makes the identification decisive. One of the gravest difficulties of the prosecution's case against Sacco and Vanzetti was the collapse of the Government's attempt to identify the driver of the murder car as Vanzetti. The District Attorney told the jury that "they must be overwhelmed with the testimony that when the car started it was driven by a light-haired man, who gave every appearance of being sickly." Steve the Pole satisfies Madeiros's description of the driver as well as the testimony at the trial. To set the matter beyond a doubt, two women who were working in the Slater and Morrill factory identified Steve the Pole as the man they saw standing for half an hour by a car outside their window on that day. Two witnesses who testified at the trial identified Joe Morelli as one of the men who did the shooting and another identified Mancini. The Morellis were American-born, which will explain the testimony at the trial that one of the bandits spoke clear and unmistakable English, a thing impossible to Sacco and Vanzetti.

Plainly the personnel of the Morelli gang fits the Braintree crime. What of other details? The mortal bullet came out of a .32 Colt; Joe Morelli had a .32 Colt at this time. Mancini's pistol was of a type and caliber to account for the other five bullets found in the victims. The "murder car" at the trial was a Buick. Madeiros said a Buick was used; and Mike Morelli, according to the New Bedford police, at this time was driving a Buick, which disappeared immediately after April 15, 1920. In fact, the police of New Bedford, where the Morelli gang had been operating, suspected them of the Braintree crime, but dropped the matter after th arrst of Sacco and Vanztti. Shortly after the Braintree job, Madeiros was imprisoned for five months for larceny of an amount less than $100. But immediately after his release he had about $2800 in bank, which enabled him to go on a pleasure trip to the West and Mexico. The $2800 is unaccounted for otherwise than as his share of the Braintree booty. Joe Morelli, as we know, was sent to Atlanta for his share in the robbery of the Slater and Morill shoes. While confined he made an arrangement with a fellow prisoner whereby the latter was to furnish him with an alibi, in case of need, for April 15, 1920, placing Morelli in New York.

Even so compressed a precis of the evidence of many witnesses will have made it clear that the defense has built up a powerful case, without the resources at the command of the State in criminal investigations. The witnesses other than Madeiros of themselves afford strong probability of the guilt of the Morellis. What of the intrinsic credibility of Madeiros' confession, which, if believed, settles the matter? A criminal's confession, as we have noted, must be scrutinized with the utmost skepticism. A man who assumes guilt for one crime while about to undergo the penalty of death for another does not carry the least conviction. The circumstances of Madeiros' confession, however, free it from suspicion and furnish assurances of its trustworthiness. Far from having nothing to lose by making the confession, Madeiros stood to jeopardize his life. For while, to be sure, at the time of his confession he was under sentence for another murder, an appeal from this conviction was pending, which was in fact successful in getting him a new trial. Could anything be more prejudicial to an effort to reverse conviction for one crime than to admit guilt for another? So clearly prejudicial, in fact, was his confession that by arrangement with the District Attorney it was kept secret until after the outcome of his appeal and the new trial which followed it.

Moreover, the note of confession sent by Madeiros to Sacco on Nov. 18 was not, as we have seen, his first communication to Sacco. Nor was it his first explicit confession. The murder for which he had been convicted, together with a man named Weeks—the Wrentham bank crime—was a holdup like the Braintree job. Weeks, under life sentence in another jail, when questioned, revealed that in planning the Wrentham job Madeiros drew on his experience at South Braintree. During their partnership Madeiros had frequently referred to the Braintree job, saying it was arranged by the Morelli gang (whom Weeks knew), and at one time identifying a speak-easy in which they found themselves as the one the gang visited before the Braintree holdup. In planning the Wrentham job Madeiros further told Weeks that he "had had enough of the Buick in the South Braintree job." Before the Wrentham crime he had talked to the couple who kept the roadhouse where for a time he was a "bouncer" of his part in the Braintree crime and said "that he would like to save Sacco and Vanzetti because he knew they were perfectly innocent."

These earlier disclosures by Madeiros completely refute the theory that he was led to make his latest confession in 1925 by the hope of getting money. It is suggested that in November, 1925, he had seen the financial statement of the Sacco-Vanzetti Defense Committee. But, in the first place, there is no proof that Madeiros saw this statement before he made the confession. Secondly, he could not have had knowledge of this statement before he talked to Weeks and the others and when he attempted the prior communications to Sacco, because it was not then in existance. It is incredible that am n fighting for his life on a charge for one murder would, in the hope of getting money, falsely accuse himself of another murder. Madeiros knew the danger of a confession, for his conviction in the Wrentham case largely rested upon confessions made by him. Why should he be lieved and suffer death when he confesses one crime and not be believed when he confesses another of the same character? Is not his own statement in accordance with the motives even of a murderer?

I seen Sacco's wife come up here with the kids and I felt sorry for the kids.

Let us compare the two hypotheses. The Morelli theory accounts for all members of the Braintree murder gang; the Sacco-Vanzetti theory for only two, for it is conceded that, if Madeiros was there, Sacco and Vanzetti were not. The Morelli theory accounts for all the bullets found in the dead men; the Sacco-Vanzetti theory for only one out of six. The Morelli explanation settles the motive, for the Morelli gang were criminals desperately in need of money for legal expenses pending their trial for felonies, whereas the Sacco-Vanzetti theory is unsupported by any motive. Moreover, Madeiros' possession of $2800 accounts for his snare of the booty, whereas not a penny has ever been traced to anybody or accounted for on the Sacco-Vanzetti theory. The Morelli story is not subject to the absurd promise that professional holdup men who stole automobiles at will and who had recently made a haul of nearly $16,000 would devote an evening, as did Sacco and Vanzetti the night of their arrest, to riding around on suburban street cars to borrow a friend's six-year-old Overland. The character of the Morelli gang fits the opinion of police investigators and the inherent facts of the situation, which tended to prove that the crime was the work of professionals, whereas the past character and record of Sacco and Vanzetti have always made it inherently incredible that they should spontaneously become perpetrators of a bold murder, executed with the utmost expertness. A good mechanic, regularly employed at his trade, but away from work on a particular day which is clearly accounted for, and a dreamy fish peddler, openly engaged in political propaganda, neither do nor can suddenly commit an isolated job of highly professional banditry.

Can the situation be put more conservatively than this? Every reasonable probability points away from Sacco and Vanzetti; every reasonable probability points toward the Morelli gang.

How did these facts appear to Judge Thayer?

VIII.

At the outset the scope of Judge Thayer's duty toward the motion for a new trial based upon this new evidence must be kept in mind. It was not for him to determine the guilt of the Morellis or the innocence of Sacco and Vanzetti; it was not for him to weigh the new evidence as though he were a jury, determining what is true and what is false. Judge Thayer's duty was the very narrow one of ascertaining whether here was new material fit for a new jury's judgment. May honest minds, capable of dealing with evidence, reach a different conclusion, because of the new evidence, from that of the first jury? Do the new facts raise debatable issues? Could another jury, conscious of its oath and conscientiously obedient to it, be sufficiently impressed with the new evidence to reach a verdict contrary to the one that was reached on a record wholly different from the present, in view of evidence recently discovered and not adducible by the defense at the time of the original trial? To all these questions Judge Thayer says, 'No.' This amazing conclusion he reached after studying the motion 'for several weeks without interruption' and set forth in an opinion of 25,000 words! We wish for nothing more than that every reader who has proceeded thus far should study the full text of this latest Thayer opinion. Space precludes its detailed treatment here. To quote it, to analyze it, adequately to comment upon it would require a book. Having now put the materials for detailed judgment at the disposal of readers, we are compelled to confine ourselves to a few brief observations. By what is left out and by what is put in, the uninformed reader of Judge Thayer's opinion would be wholly misled as to the real facts of the case. Speaking from a considerable experience as a prosecuting officer, whose special task for a time it was to sustain on appeal convictions for the Government, and whose scientific duties since have led to the examination of a great number of records and the opinions based thereon, I assert with deep regret, but without the slightest fear of disproof, that certainly in modern times Judge Thayer's opinion stands unmatched for discrepancies between what the record discloses and what the opinion conveys. His 25,000-word document cannot accurately be described otherwise than as a farrago of misquotations, misrepresentations, suppressions, and mutilations. The disinterested inquirer could not possibly derive from it a true knowledge of the new evidence that was submited to him as the basis for a new trial. The opinion is literally honeycombed with demonstrable errors, and a spirit alien to judicial utterance permeates the whole. A study of the opinion in the light of the record led the conservatice Boston Herald, which long held the view that the sentence against these men should be carried out, to a frank reversal of its position.

Dr. Morton Prince writes that any expert psychologist reading the Thayer opinion 'could not fail to find evidences that portray strong personal feeling, poorly concealed, that should have no place in a judicial document.' One or two illustrations must suffice. William G. Thompson is one of the leaders of the Boston bar. Yet Judge Thayer thus characterized Mr. Thompson's activities in behalf of these two Italians:

> Since the trial before the jury of these cases a new type of disease would seem to have developed. It might be called 'lego-psychic neurosis' or hysteria, which means: 'A belief in the existence of something which in fact and truth has no such existence.'

And this from a Judge who gives meretricious authority to his self-justification by speaking of the verdict which convicted these men as 'approved by the Supreme Judicial Court of this Commonwealth.' The Supreme Court never approved the verdict; nor did it pretend to do so. The Supreme Court passed on technical claims of error, and, 'finding no error, the verdicts are to stand.' Judge Thayer knows this, but laymen may not. Yet Judge Thayer refers to the verdict as 'approved by the Supreme Judicial Court.'

No wonder that Judge Thayer's opinion has confirmed old doubts as to the guilt of these two Italians and aroused new anxieties concerning the resources of our law to avoid grave miscarriage of justice. The courageous stand taken by the Boston Herald has enlisted the support of some of the most distinguished citizens of Massachusetts. The Independent has thus epitomized this demand:

> Because of the increasing doubt that surrounds the question of the guilt of these men, springing from the intrinsic character of Judge Thayer's decision, and instanced by the judgment of the Herald editorial writer and other observers whose impartiality is unquestioned, we strongly hope that a new trial will be granted. It is important to note that the appeal is being made on the basis of new evidence never passed on before the Supreme Court.

No narrow, merely technical, question is thus presented. The Supreme Court of Massachusetts will be called upon to search the whole record in order to determine whether Judge Thayer duly observed the traditional standards of fairness and reason which govern the conduct of an Anglo-American Judge, particularly in a capital case. This court has given us the requirements by which Judge Thayer's decision is to be measured and the tests which it will use in determining whether a new trial shall be granted:

> The various statements of the extent of the power and of limitations upon the right to grant new trials . . . must yield to the fundamental test, in aid of which most rules have been formulated, that such motions ought not to be granted unless on a survey of the whole case it appears to the judicial conscience and judgment that otherwise a miscarriage of justice will result.

Nor must a new trial be withheld where in justice it is called for because thereby encouragement will be given to improper demands for a new trial. For, as the Chief Justice of Massachusetts has announced, courts cannot close 'their eyes to injustice on account of facility of abuse.'

With these legal canons as a guide, the outcome ought not to be in doubt Banker Ends Life in Prison.

By the Associated Press.

REGGIO NELL EMILIA, Italy, April 13.—Count Luigi Lusignani, who had been in prison several months in connection with alleged frauds in the Agricultural Bank of Parma, of which he was president, died today from a self-administered poison. It was his second attempt at suicide since his arrest last June.

"I was in such a miserable run-down condition that the doctors thought there was but little chance for my recovery. I finally learned of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and decided to try it. CLAIMS ESTATE AS H. H. STRATTON'S SON

Milwaukee Youth Sues for $25,000 of Property Left Chiefly to Freemasons

A romance of the early '90s, between Helen Lindert, a Salvation Army worker, then a checker in a laundry, and Henry Hiram Stratton, a stationary engineer, who died in St. Louis two years ago, was revived in Federal Court today.

Alexander Henry Hiram Stratton of Milwaukee, Wis., claiming to be the son of Helen Lindert and Stratton, sued for half of the $50,000 estate, the bulk of which Stratton bequeathed to Masonic organizations.

The suit alleged that Helen Lindert became Stratton's common-law wife in Milwaukee in 1892, and accompanied him to St. Louis, where twins were born dead. In 1894, learning that he had a legal wife, she returned to Milwaukee, where, it is alleged, the plaintiff was born. Later she married A. B. Glaser, with whom she now lives in Redlands, Cal., engaged in Salvation Army work.

In his will, Stratton made no mention of a son, cutting off a legitimate daughter, Mrs. Esther Johnson, of Washington, with $5, asserting that she had not been a dutiful child. Stratton's suit is directed against Robert A. O'Neil, trustee for the estate, and asks an accounting of income from an apartment house at 5802 Westminster place which was owned by Stratton, who lived alone at 5722 Bartmer avenue when he died.

INLAND CORPORATION BUYS WEST MISSOURI POWER CO.

Merger With Three Other Concerns Will Give Consolidated Earnings of $1,106,000 a Year.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 13.—A. E. Fitkin & Co. has bought for the account of the Inland Power and Light Corporation all the property and assets of the West Missouri Power Co., which, with Trenton Gas and Electric Co., People's Gas and Electric, and Missouri Electric, Gas and Water Co., will be merged into the Missouri Public Service Co.

The consolidated company will have gross earnings exceeding $1,106,000 and will serve 76 communities.

The West Missouri Power Co. serves 54 towns of Central Western Missouri with electricity, and Clinton, Mo., with gas and water. It has generating plants at Clinton and Pleasant Hill and reserve plants at Warrensburg and Eldorado Springs. It has about 14,000 customers and sells about 13,500,000 kilowatt hours of current annually. Its assets on its balance sheet as of Dec. 31, 1926, totaled $5,471,165.

20 Years a Dyspeptic Now a Model of Health

Widely known Springfield musician, her health shattered, unable to find relief, gave up all hope of recovery. Her husband tells how Tanlac put her on her feet. Gives full credit to this wonderful tonic and body builder

In her comfortable home at 638 College St., Springfield, Mo., Mrs. T. H. Bayes, an active lady of 60 years, smiled happily as her husband told of her experience. "We were very discouraged about her condition," said Mr. Bayes. "Nothing seemed to help.

"Nothing she ate agreed with her; even a little ice cream caused bloating and gas pains. She was a physical and nervous wreck and wasted to 108 lbs. A term in the hospital eased her gastritis a little, but she remained weak and helpless.

"We decided to try Tanlac. To my surprise I noticed a marked improvement in her. Soon she was walking around, eating normally, and had put on weight. Now she wakes refreshed each morning, weighs 129 lbs, and does her housework with ease. She eats sausage, cabbage, sauerkraut and other foods which she could not touch for 20 years."

Mrs. Bayes is but one of many thousands here in Missouri who have been helped by Tanlac. Profit by her experience. Get your first bottle of Tanlac today. It is natures own remedy, made from roots, barks and herbs. Your druggist has it. Over 52,000,000 bottles sold.

BAILEY OFFERS PLANK TO MODIFY DRY LAW

Former Texas Senator, in St. Louis, for Below-Intoxication Content.

Joseph Weldon Bailey of Dallas, Tex., who was United States Senator from Texas during the Roosevelt and Taft administrations, today proposed, in an interview at Hotel Jefferson, a plank for modification of the Volstead law, to be submitted to the National Democratic convention next year.

"If I had my way," said former Senator Bailey, "I would put into the next Democratic platform, a declaration something like this:

" 'We recognize that the eighteenth amendment is now a part of our Federal Constitution and as such, it ought to be enforced; but we also recognize that it cannot be enforced through the Volstead law as now written. We therefore favor such an amendment to that law as will allow the people of this country the largest liberty in respect to their beverages consistent with the Constitntoin of the United States; and to that end we would allow an alcoholic content in all beverages as high as possible below the point of intoxication.' "

Platform His Main Interest.

Bailey, who came here for a case in Probate Court, expects to attend the Jefferson day dinner at Hotel Jefferson this evening. He said he was interested chiefly in a platform, rather than in candidates, for next year, but he showed interest in the questiono f the relative strength of Gov. Smith, Senator Reed and other candidates in various sections.

"If our next national convention," he said, "is wise enough to adopt the right kind of a platform and nominate the right kind of candidates, every Democrat in the country will support our ticket; and that means, of course, that we will have an excellent chance for success.

"The most serious obstacle in our party's pathway today is the prohibition question; but if our leaders are as sensible as they ought to be, we will find a common ground on that question. If the delegates to our next national convention permit that question to divide and disrupt our party, they will be condemned by every thoughtful Democrat.

"Of course, there must be some concessions made by both sides. I was utterly oposed to the Federal prohibition amendment, and if I had my way even now, I would repeal that amendment and restore to each state of this Union the right to deal with the liquor question according to the judgment and the will of its own people.

Women Sustaining It.

"If the question could be left to the men of this country it would be repealed by a decided majoriy; but that cannot be done. The women are now voting and eight out of every 10 women would vote against repealing the eighteenth amendment. It is therefore futile to talk about repealing that amendment, and we must look to some other method of adjusting the differences in the Democratic party over that question. Democrats who are opposed to prohibition must recognize that it is the settled policy of this republic, and Democrats who are in favor of prohibition must be content with a san enforcement of it. In that way only can we unite.

"Antiprohibitionists would concede nothing except a fact by the acceptance of such a declaration; and certainly prohibitionists should not ask us to prohibit beverages which are not intoxicating. A law drawn according to that platform would be enforceable without a resort to the extraordinary measures now employed to enforce the Volstead act; and such a law, properly enforced, would ultimately chang ethe drink habits of the American people from whisky to wine and beer. That would be a consummation devoutly to be wished. It would reduce drunkenness to a negligible minimum, for a wine-drinking or a beer-drinking people are never drunkards; and it would eliminate the prohibition question from our politics, and leave our people to decide our elections upon issues of great moment.

"It will be the crime of all the ages if unreasonable and unreasoning fanatics are allowed to destroy the Democratic party over a mere question of police regulation—and that is all the prohibition question is."

TWO SHERMAN GRAVE GUARDS WILL RETURN AFTER 36 YEARS

John W. Snyder and Herman Schneidewind to Decorate Burial Place Memorial Day.

Two of the men who, as soldiers, stood guard over the grave of Gen. Sherman in Calvary Cemetery for about six weeks after his burial, Feb. 21, 1891, are planning to decorate the grave on Memorial day this year. This will be their first such visit to the place. They are John W. Snyder, a builder, of 4633 Newberry terrace, and Herman Schneidewind, a watchman, of 5505 Idaho avenue.

As privates they were among 17 soldiers assigned to the guard of honor, which camped in the cemetery. Snyder, honorably discharged as a Corporal in 1892, said today the only other member of the guard he knew to be surviving is Dr. Frank W. Hanford of Los Angeles, although a few years ago he heard from another, John Black, superintendent of the Leavenworth (Kan.) waterworks. He has not heard from others since the Spanish-American War.

$40,000 FOR LOSS OF HAND

Verdict Rendered by Jury in Suit Against the I. C. Railroad.

A $40,000 verdict for the amputation of a hand, Feb. 3, 1926, when Orlando B. Pack of Memphis, he testified, stumbled on a piece of iron pipe and fell under a train in the Memphis yards of the Illinois Central, was awarded today in Pack's $75,000 suit against the railroad.

The jury, in Circuit Judge Frey's Court, was dismissed after an hour's deliberation last night and resumed at 10 a. m., reporting the verdict before noon. Apparently the jury disregarded the defense theory that Pack had intentionally caused the injury to raise money, from accident insurance, for defense of an arson charge on which he was to be tried the week after the accident, and of which he was acquitted.

KEEP LOOKING YOUNG

The secret of keeping young is to feel young—to do this you must watch your liver and bowels—there's no need of having a sallow complexion—dark rings under your eyes—pimples—a bilious look in your face—dull eyes with no sparkle. Your doctor will tell you ninety per cent of all sickness comes from inactive bowels and liver.

Dr. Edwards, a well-known physician in Ohio, perfected a vegetable compound mixed with olive oil as a substitute for calomel to act on the liver and bowels, which he gave to his patients for years.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets are gentle in their action yet always effective. They bring about that natural buoyancy which all should enjoy by toning up the liver and clearing the system of impurities.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets are known by their olive color. 15c, 30c and 60c.

Make This Test

WHY does almost everyone nowadays have a continuously coated tongue—and a bad mouth taste? Doctors say that modern living conditions have so congested bowel action that almost nine out of ten people are CO-LONICS. Their colons are filled with millions of bacilli. Intestinal toxins are constantly absorbed. The result is lack of energy, headaches, biliousness, frequent colds, sallow skins and many other ailments. Make this five day test—take an NR tablet (Nature's Remedy) before retiring for five nights. See the poisons leave the body and your tongue become clear. Feel alive and full of pep. RHEUMATISM now treated a new way Stops pain by removing the cause. No opiates. No distasteful drugs. No dieting.

A new and more effective way to treat Rheumatism is now reported. An astonishingly simple method that is said to give almost immediate relief from this old ailment; and its near kin, Lumbago, Gout and Neuritis. The treatment originated in one of the exclusive health retreats of Europe, now celebrated for its success in Rheumatic cases. In accord with advanced medical thought, which opposes drugging the body, full use is made of Nature's constant effort to heal. And so simple and necessary a thing as one's drinking water forms a large part of the treatment. Certain substances the body lacks are supplied in a vegetable extract which is dropped into the water several times a day. As a result Uric Acid crystals and other poisons causing the pain, become liquid and flush from the body. Relief is almost immediate.. Usually the first day. Medical observers attribute this to the naturalness of the treatment; and its harmony with bodily processes.

Sales rights under the name of RUGENAL have been acquired for the United States and Canada. So that now, this celebrated treatment may be taken at home at a small part of the cost many have paid for it abroad. All druggists will soon have Rugenal. Wolff-Wilson has already received an advance supply. Out-of-town residents may write direct to Rugenal Corporation, St. Louis, Mo.

Auto-Toxaemia is the basis of these ailments. Auto-Toxaemia is an accumulation of the unoxidized waste products from cell growth. Constipation caused by this unoxidized waste almost invariably precedes and accompanies Rheumatism, Arthritis, Neuritis, Neuralgia and Sciatica. To correct this condition the toxic poisons must be oxidized and eliminated. That is what the I-ON-A-CO does for you. By removing the source of constipation and these ailments, it relieves both.

BOY FISHING IN POND SHOT BY DAIRYMAN

Victim and Two Companions Say Fred Schaub, 60, Fired Without Warning.

John Mertens, 14 years old, of 9747 South Broadway, was shot and seriously wounded at 12:30 p. m. when fishing with two other boys at a pond in Harnes' Grove, near 9100 South Broadway.

He and his companions say that they were fired upon with a shotgun by Fred Schaub, 60, a dairyman of 9100 South Broadway. Three heavy pellets struck young Mertens, one penetrating his chest and one lodging in each thigh. He was treated at a doctor's office and removed to his home.

The boys had gone to the pond, they said, not knowing that anyone might object to do their fishing in it. They said Schaub opened fire without any warning.

Schaub was arrested by a Deputy Sheriff and taken to jail at Clayton. He declined to make a statement. There he was charged with assault in attempt to kill and held pending filing a $3500 bond.

PRISON GUARDS DISMISSED FOR AIDING FORMER KLAN HEAD

Three Admit Carrying Letters for D. C. Stephenson, Serving Life for Murder.

By the Associated Press.

MICHIGAN CITY, Ind., April 13.—Connivance with D. C. Stephenson, former "Grand Dragon" of the Indiana Ku Klux Klan, who is serving a life sentence for the murder of Miss Madge Oberholtzer of Indianapolis, has led to the discharge of three State penitentiary guards. Each admitted, Warden Daly said, that he had carried letters Stephenson had entrusted to him for delivery to persons outside.

The letters, the Warden indicated, directed friends of the ex-klan chief in their efforts to bring about his release from imprisonment. Reports that the letters also had to do with a plot against persons outside the prison are unsubstantiated.

Two of the guards dismissed were Rudolph Ebert, who had been at the penitentiary 20 years, and Leonard Studer, a guard of only six months.

GIVEN 10 YEARS IN PRISON FOR KILLING HIS STEP-SON

Harry Parker of Trenton, Mo., Convicted Largely on Testimony of Victim's Widow.

By the Associated Press.

TRENTON, Mo., April 13.—Harry Parker, 55 years old, former Assistant Fire Chief of Trenton, was found guilty last night of murder in the second degree and sentenced to 10 years in the penitentiary for the killing Nov. 5 of his stepson, Jack Freeman. The jury had deliberated 18 hours.

Parker was convicted largely upon the testimony of his stepson's widow, Mrs. Louise Freeman. Revealing years of intimate relations with Parker, Mrs. Freeman told of repeated statements by her father-in-law that "some day he would settle it all" in referring to the love triangle.

On the night of the killing, she said, Parker came to the Freeman home, told her that he and Jack had quarreled and that he intended to "kill him with his own gun."

Shortly afterward Freeman's car was heard driving into the garage. Parker went out the kitchen door, gun in hand, saying: "Here's where it happens," the widow related.

SETTLING BASIN BID $200,000 BELOW ESTIMATE OF CITY

Water Commissioner Figured Cost at $850,000; Contractors Offer to Do Job for $664,000.

Although Water Commissioner Day had estimated the cost of a settling basin, chemical mixing basin and primary coagulation basin at the Missouri River waterworks now under construction at $850,000, the lowest of 10 bids received by the Board of Public Service yesterday was $664,044.

The low bidder is the Missouri Engineering & Construction Co., executives of which are Francis T. Cutts, former Assistant Water Commissioner, and Cornelius M. Daily, former division engineer of the department. Director of Public Utilities Pritchard said he would recommend award of the contract to the Missouri company when the Board of Public Service meets Friday. The next lowest bid was $738,702, by the McCormack-Coombs Construction Co.

Congress and Senate Apartments Builder Host to Chicago Backer.

A dinner in honor of M. E. Greenebaum Jr., of Chicago, member of the firm of Greenebaum & Son, financiers, was given last night by Sam Koplar at the Congress Hotel, Union boulevard and Pershing avenue. The Chicago firm financed the Congress and Senate apartments, erected by Koplar.

About 75 persons attended the dinner. Speakers included former Mayors Kiel and Kreisman, City Counselor Muench and W. Frank Carter.

Woman Driver Given 10 Days.

By the Associated Press.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., April 13.—Mrs. Fay Smith, whose automobile knocked a street car off its rails at 4 o'clock the morning of April 5, was sentenced to 10 days in the women's reformatory and fined $100 today. She was charged with drunkenness and careless driving. Mrs. Smith told her real name to Judge Carlin P. Smith by whom she was sentenced. She gave the name of "Mrs. Thelma Arnold" when arrested. Her attorneys gave notice of appeal.

FESS DECLINES PLACE ON REED COMMITTEE

Ohio Senator Says He Is Not in Accord With Views of Majority.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, April 13.—Senator Fess (Rep.), Ohio, today declined to accept apointment as a member of the Reed campaign funds investigating committee to succeed Senator Goff (Rep.), West Virginia, who resigned.

In declining, Senator Fess said he believed that investigations of elections should be conducted by the regularly constituted standing committee of the Senate and that he was not in accord with the views of a majority of the special committee.

Fess said he had notified Vice President Dawes, who made the appointment, of his refusal to serve, and that he took this action against the advice of Senator Curtis, the Republican leader. The Vice President has held the committee was functioning legally.

"My inclination from the first has been to decline the appointment, but being willing to submerge my desires if public service could be rendered, I have considered it from that angle," the Ohio Senator said. "My vote was not cast for the resolution creating this select committee, for the reason that all necessary investigations should be made by the standing committee created for the purpose. After the select committee was established and had started its investigations in the Pennsylvania and Illinois primaries, I stated in the Senate the evening before adjournment that I would vote for the resolution continuing the select committee if it were limited to complete the work already begun, but that I did not like to have a committee remain at the beck and call of someone who may wish to make a charge, whether it be a responsible or irresponsible charge, set up, as it were, a grand jury, and make public the information that every Tom, Dick and Harry may come in and state as his charge.

"As a member of the Committee on Audit and Control, I have taken the position that there is no authority for that committee to approve expenditures of the special investigating committee.

"Whether the committee now exists is a matter of difference of opinion to be settled finally by the Supreme Court. It would be inconsistent for me to accept service as a member of this committee, while I have withheld approval of vouchers to meet expenses of such committee at a time when I have felt the committee had no authority."

Reed Not Surprised That Fess Could Not Accept Place.

By the Associated Press.

DETROIT, Mich., April 13.—Senator James A. Reed, chairman of the Senate Election Fund Investigating Committee, said today when informed Senator Fess had declined appointment to that body:

"I have the greatest respect for Senator Fess, but I do not see how he could have taken any other step in view of his previously known position."

Reed said recently that any further investigation necessarily would have to be held in abeyance until "after I get through here."

DEVER DODGES INAUGURATION

Ignores Thompson, Officially Made Mayor While at Ball Game.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, April 13.—While he was watching the home town Cubs defeat the St. Louis Cardinals, William Hale Thompson yesterday officially became Chicago's Mayor, his third term in that office.

His predecessor, William E. Dever, will break a precedent and not attend the inaugural ceremonies for the new executive next Monday. He left last night for Excelsior Springs, Mo., for a rest.

Thompson's absence from yesterday's session of the Council, when the outgoing Mayor laid down the gavel of authority, also is unprecedented, City Hall attaches say.

HELD FOR THEFT OF $500,000

Six More Men Arrested in Bank Embezzlement Case.

By the Associated Press.

HARRISBURG, Pa., April 13.—Six men were arrested today in connection with the embezzlement of $500,000 from the Commonwealth Trust Co. of this city.

Those under arrest, in addition to A. S. Banmiller, assistant treasurer of the bank, who has been in jail since March 7, are Charles A. Delone, treasurer of the Square Cut Rate Drug Store of this city; E. J. Glancey, treasurer of the bank; James A. McLaughlin, assistant treasurer; Jacob Garman, teller; Frank S. Brinton, general bookkeeper, and Carl Cross, clerk.

PUBLIC HEARINGS ON RIVER

High water inspection by the Mississippi River Commission will begin at 10 a. m. next Tuesday, with a public hearing here on board the steamer Inspector.

Public hearings will be held at other points along the Mississippi to New Orleans. Persons who have river improvement or levee questions to take up with the commission are requested to communicate with its president, Room 434, Customhouse, St. Louis, before next Sunday.

Entertainment at Barracks.

An entertainment was held last night for the inmates of the United States Veterans' Bureau Hospital at Jefferson Barracks by the Jackson Johnson Jr. Post, American Legion. A motion picture was shown and music was furnished by Walter Seim's orchestra.

GIVES $200,000 IN HONOR OF RETIRED COUNTRY DOCTOR

William Bingham Makes Donation to Neurological Institute for Dr. John G. Gehring.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, April 13. — Dr. John George Gehring, a retired country doctor living in Bethel, Me., was honored yesterday by a gift of $200,000 in his name by William Bingham to the neurological institute.

The donation is to cover the cost of a complete ward floor in the projected institute building. It duplicates that of J. Pierpont Morgan, announced two weeks ago which was given in memory of his wife. The Bingham gift was announced yesterday by Robert Thorne, president of the institute.

In explanation of Dr. Gehring's reputation Dr. Frederick Peterson, one of the best known neuro-psychiatrists in this city, said:

"He has been for 35 years the father confessor for more leaders of thought in this country than any other neurologist or psychiatrist. Shunning publicity, preferring to remain in Bethel, in the foothills of the White Mountains, he, by the power of his own personality, made that town a psychological center in the same way that the Mayo brothers made Rochester, Minn., a center of surgery."

LEWIS DECLARES DEMOCRATS CAN'T WIN ON PROHIBITION

Former Illinois Senator Says Farm Relief and Lower Living Cost Are Main Issues.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, April 13.—Election to the presidency of a Democrat running with prohibition as his campaign cry is hopeless, J. Hamilton Lewis, former Senator from Illinois, declared today.

"Let it be heralded," he told the Iroquois Democratic Club, in a Jefferson day address, "that the candidacies of Gov. Smith of New York, Gov. Ritchie of Maryland, Senator Reed of Missouri or McAdoo of California can hope for no success, if at this critical time in world affairs the only issue is a little more or less to drink."

Demands of Jefferson Democracy, he said, are relief to the farmer "and equality of opportunity to enjoy markets of the world" and to the city toiler, "the reduction of the swollen cost of living," the "breaking up of monopoly," the conciliation of grievances between the United States and the world, "and the re-establishment of peace with all mankind."

Leaves Estate for Children's Home.

By the Associated Press.

ERIE, Pa., April 13.—Provision for a children's home is made in the will of Dr. Charles F. Hastings, eccentric scion of a wealthy New York family, who for years conducted a toy repair shop here. Dr. Hastings, holder of several degrees in medicine, died March 16. For four years he had been a toy mender under the name of John Hugh. Two years ago his identity was disclosed and two months ago New York courts adjudged him sane and awarded him a $250,000 share in his father's estate.

BULLS HOLD CONTROL ON EXCHANGE

Advances Take Place in Face of Ordinarily Bearish News Developments Including Relatively Stiff Call Money Rates.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 13.—Speculators for the advance continued in control of the price movement in today's stock market, despite frequent flurries of selling in various groups. The advance took place in the face of several unfavorable trade developments, such as a decline in freight car loadings, a reported slackening in the production of, and demand for steel, a further downward readjustment of crude oil prices and the retention of relatively stiff call money rates. Numerous gains of two to 10 points were partially offset by a few new weak spots.

* * *

Closing Is Strong.

The closing was strong. Pivotal industrials regained leadership of the market in the final hour when popular leaders such as Baldwin, General Motors, Allied Chemical and International Harvester moved up materially. Columbia Gas touched a new peak at 95 and Commercial Solvents "B" reached 355, a gain of 16 points. Total sales approximated 1,900,000.

United States Steel common held fairly steady despite the fact that the composite price for finished steel is now at the lowest level since 1922. Buying of the independent steels was stimulated by merger rumors, although Chairman Topping of the Republic Iron & Steel Co. insisted that the election of three new directors today was merely incidental to changes in stock ownership and involved no change in the management or policy of that company. Superior, Otis and Midland Steel Products preferred, recorded sharp gains.

Rails were relatively quiet, although moderate gains were recorded by Southern Railway, Louisville & Nashville and Denver & Rio Grande Western preferred.

Oils Rally After Sinking.

Oils experienced a sinking spell during the morning, but rallied again in the afternoon. Amusement shares were bid up briskly at the expense of an overcrowded short interest, with Warner Brothers and Pathe in the forefront of the advance. Baldwin and Timken were prominent in the rise of the equipments, while such specialties as National Biscuit, Air Reduction, Union Bag & Paper, Colorado Fuel, American Sumatra Tobacco and Gold Dust moved into new high ground.

Commercial Solvents B continued its sensational climb by jumping 13 points to 350, or more than 125 points above the year's low.

Selling orders were more numerous at the start of market today, but losses were limited to fractions aside from Nash Motors, which fell 1 point and DuPont 1½. Radio Corporation and Savage Arms touched new minimums for the year. Some substantial advances however were registered, including a point each in Southern Railway and Union Bag & Paper and 2 points in Air Reduction.

High Priced Shares Bought.

Subsequent buying of high priced shares did not exert its usual beneficial effect on sentiment, traders for the moment being more disposed to follow the trend revealed by certain popular shares. Prices of shares of the general class continued to move in opposite directions, Hudson Motors showing strength while General Motors lost ground. Sinclair preferred advanced 2 points in reflection of the favorable annual statement, but other oils eased off under the influence on the 25-cent cut in the price of Pennsylvania crude. Rumors of new steel combinations, involving Otis Steel, caused a jump of 3¾ points in the prior preferred shares, while the common touched a new 1927 high. Commercial Solvents B continued its exceptional rise, jumping 5 points to 344, a new record, compared with the low this year of 223, registered in January.

Linseed Preferred Higher.

American Linseed preferred moved up 3 points despite the deficit of over $1,000,000 shown in the annual report after payment of dividends. Warner Brothers Pictures was freely accumulated and jumped 2 points. Sharp declines were noted in Freeport Texas, which went down to 64, over 10 points under Monday's best figure, and in United Cigar Stores, Universal Pipe, White Motors, Texas & Pacific and Missouri Pacific.

* * *

Renewal Rate Raised.

Shares which command a big speculative following when a movement either way is started were unusually active in the early part of the session. Motors worked higher under the leadership of Mack Truck and Hudson, while the oils were liquidated on an increasing scale owing to the unsatisfactory trade situation. The raising of the renewal rate on call loans to 4½ per cent unquestionably caused some selling, but its effect was neutralized by the aggressive buying which went on in a number of industrials, several of which touched the highest levels for many years. Warner Bros. Pictures A rose nearly 6 points.

* * *

Advance in Lire.

"Another sharp advance in lire, sending rates close to the five-cent level and the highest in years, featured quiet trading in foreign exchanges. Sterling and French francs ruled firm, while Norwegian and Spanish rates continued to recover.

Hecla Mining Dividend.

SPOKANE, Wash., April 13.—A dividend of 25 cents a share amounting to $250,000, was declared at the annual meeting of the Hecla Mining Co. here yesterday, payable to stockholders of record May 13. Officers were re-elected.

London Easter Holidays.

LONDON, April 13.—The stock exchanges here will be closed April 15, 16 and 18, Easter holidays.

NEW YORK, April 13.—Following is a list of bonds traded in on the New York Stock Exchange today up to time designated below:

BROAD AND ACTIVE TRADING ON CURB

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 13.—Today's Curb market was one of the broadest and most active noted since the present organization of the Curb. Dealings were in large blocks in many issues and a long list of stocks was established at new high records. The demand in a number of issues was of an impressive character, indicating accumulation for special purposes but there also was a large amount of speculative buying which helped along many of the vigorous advances.

Lackawanna securities was a special feature in these displays of strength that issue moving up over 4 points to 97¾, a new high record. The advance was accompanied by reports that the company was arranging for absorption of Philadelphia & Reading Coal. Many railroad stocks were also in urgent demand. Wheeling & Lake Erie prior lien advanced 2½ points to 165½, and Pittsburg & Lake Erie moved up 2 points to 175.

Public Utilities as a group were by far the most prominent in the trading. Hartford Electric and Light, in which dealings started Tuesday gained 3 points today, to 379. Blackstone Valley rose 2 points to 122, a new high record, and Penn-Ohio Edison classes of American Super-Power also made new high records. Electric investors fell about a point. There was heavy trading in both United Gas Improvement and United Light and Power A, the latter moving up above a point.

Industrials moved in a similar manner. Auburn Auto established a new high record on an advance of 6 points to 110 and Dunhill International also touched a maximum level. Warner Bros. Pictures followed the advance of the A stock with a gain of 5 points to 24, and Estey Welte, which was a weak feature yesterday, advanced 2 points.

Oil stocks displayed a heavy tone but Vacuum Oil was exceptionally strong, moving up more than a point.

††Hard. *Red.

ST. LOUIS MERCHANTS' EXCHANGE, April 13.—Grain futures were lower on the local market today.

Report of export business estimated at 1,250,000 bushels brought some short covering and partial recovery, July wheat closing small fraction better. Unfavorable weather for seeding spring wheat also was factor. Previously rain in Northwest Kansas had bearish effect.

In the local cash grain market soft wheat was ½ to 1c lower. There were better selections of milling grades and demand was fair. Hard wheat was slow and lower to sell. Corn was ½c higher to 1c lower. Demand was fair. Oats were steady to ½c lower. Demand was slow.

After opening unchanged to higher on ⅝d higher Liverpool cable, wheat prices reacted to below previous close, influenced by better weather report. Winnipeg early was unchanged to ¼c lower. Corn was fractionally lower in the early trade. Hard May wheat opened at $1.33¼, hard July $1.28, red May $1.28. May corn 74⅜c, July corn 78¼c.

Liverpool closed ½d higher on March and May and ⅝d better on Juyl. Local wheat prices were down ⅝c to 1⅝c in forenoon, and corn ⅝c to 1c. A Chicago dispatch said that there was apprehension of corn deliveries as result of action of Exchange in regard to certain big house.

Local wheat receipts, which were 56,000 bushels, compared with 43,400 a week ago and 35,000 last year, included 24 cars local and 16 through. Corn receipts which were 32,200 bushels, compared with 25,200 a week ago and 51,800 last year, included 23 cars local and none through. Oats receipts, which were 48,000 bushels, compared with 68,000 a week ago and 98,000 last year, included 16 cars local and 8 through. Hay receipts were 13 cars local and 2 through.

Clearances were 191,000 bu of wheat, 49,000 bu of corn, 39,000 bu of rye, 12,000 bbls of flour and 245,000 bu of wheat and flour.

The three northwestern markets combined had 328 cars of wheat, compared with 226 a week ago and 360 a year ago, Minneapolis receiving 62 cars, Duluth 45 and Winnipeg 221.

Primary receipts of wheat were 590,000 bushels, compared with 391,000 a week ago and 389,000 last year; corn receipts were 332,000 bushels, compared with 454,000 a week ago and 421,000 last year; oats receipts were 291,000 bushels, compared with 331,000 a week ago and 489,000 last year; wheat shipments were 528,000 bushels, compared with [illegible] a week ago and 581,000 last year; corn shipments were 669,000 bushels, compared with 296,000 a week ago and 443,000 last year; oats shipments were 313,000 bushels, compared with 311,000 a week ago and 540,000 last year.

CHICAGO WHEAT RALLIES LATE AS SHORTS COVER

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, April 13.—The wheat market weakened after a firm start today, largely due to the desire of May longs to even up their commitments before delivery day, April 30. The nearby future sold to a new level for the season. Opening strength was due to a higher Liverpool market, influenced by the falling off in Argentine shipments. Long May wheat trickled into the pit on the bulge and this unnerved locals who had gone home long last night. The marketing of this wheat depressed prices.

Wheat prices rallied in late trade on short covering based on reported export sales of 1,250,000 bu. The close was ⅝c lower to ⅜c higher; May $1.32⅛ to $1.32¼, July $1.27⅞ to $1.28, Sept. $1.28. Corn closed ⅝c lower to ⅛c higher; May 70⅜c to 70½c, July 75⅜c to 75¾c, Sept. 79½c to 79⅝c. Oats closed unchanged to ⅛c higher; May 43⅛c, July 43⅝c to 43¾c, Sept. 43⅛c to 41⅞c. Lard closed 2½c to 7½c lower; ribs unchanged; bellies 10c to 12½c. Local cash sales were 11,000 bu wheat, 89,000 of corn, 63,000 oats.

Suspension of the Armour Grain Co., one of the largest grain trading corporations, failed to have any particular market influence. It is expected that business transacted through this company will affect the business handled through other houses so long as the suspension from Board of Trade privileges continues.

There was further precipitation over the grain belt from South Dakota downward, but clearing conditions were indicated, which should let the farmers back into the fields soon. The seaboard advised of a good export demand with some business in red winters to France. Minneapolis stocks decreased 175,000 bushels for four days.

Argentine exports this week are expected to total a little over 3,000,000 bushels, due to the Easter holidays and the port strike. The Government estimate of the crop is 222,000,000 bushels, or 1,000,000 less than the previous estimate, with 110,000,000 remaining for export.

Corn prices made new season's low records again, due to May liquidation and some stop-loss selling. There was an absence of any sustained buying power. Cash interests bought May on the break and July at 5¼c difference. Shorts took profit, checking the decline.

Oats were heavy and depressed owing to wet weather. Continued delay in seeding, due to wet weather, and some export business in domestic white oats left little demand for spot.

Provisions were lower with corn.

CHICAGO WHEAT RALLIES LATE AS SHORTS COVER

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, April 13.—The wheat market weakened after a firm start today, largely due to the desire of May longs to even up their commitments before delivery day, April 30. The nearby future sold to a new level for the season. Opening strength was due to a higher Liverpool market, influenced by the falling off in Argentine shipments. Long May wheat trickled into the pit on the bulge and this unnerved locals, who had gone home long last night. The marketing of this wheat depressed prices.

Wheat prices rallied in late trade on short covering based on reported export sales of 1,250,000 bu. The close was ¾c lower to ⅜c higher, May $1.32⅛ to ¼, July $1.27⅞ to $1.28, Sept. $1.26[illegible].

Corn closed ⅝c lower to ⅛c higher, May 70⅜c to 70½c, July 75⅝c to ¾c, Sept. 79½c to ⅝c. Oats closed unchanged to ⅛c higher: May 43⅛c, July 43⅝c to 43¾c, Sept. 43¼c to 43⅜c. Lard closed 2½c to 7½c lower; ribs unchanged; bellies 10c to 12½c. Local cash sales were 11,000 bu wheat, 89,000 of corn, 63,000 oats.

Suspension of the Armour Grain Co., one of the largest grain trading corporations, failed to have any particular market influence. It is expected that business transacted through this company will affect the business handled through other houses so long as the suspension from Board of Trade privileges continues.

There was further precipitation over the grain belt from South Dakota downward, but clearing conditions were indicated, which should let the farmers back into the fields soon. The seaboard advised of a good export demand with some business in red winters to France. Minneapolis stocks decreased 175,000 bushels for four days.

Argentine exports this week are expected to total a little over 3,000,000 bushels, due to the Easter holidays and the port strike. The Government estimate of the crop is 222,000,000 bushels, or 1,000,000 less than the previous estimate, with 110,000,000 remaining for export.

Corn prices made new season's low records again, due to May liquidation and some stop-loss selling. There was an absence of any sustained buying power. Cash interests bought May on the break and July at 5¼c difference. Shorts took profit, checking the decline.

Oats were heavy and depressed owing to wet weather. Continued delay in seeding, due to wet weather, and some export business in domestic white oats left little demand for spot.

Provisions were lower with corn.

REPORT ON WEATHER FACTOR IN COTTON

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 13.—The cotton market opened steady today at an advance of 2 to 4 points on buying which appeared to be promoted by unfavorable weather reports from the South and unfavorable features in the weekly report of the Weather Bureau.

Southern selling and realizing at the advance to 14.44c for July and 14.88c for December was absorbed at reactions of a few points, with some trade buying reported in the old crop months, while nervousness over prospects for further delays in farm work was reflected in commission house buying of new crop positions.

Liverpool cables reported local and continental buying in the market there on the unfavorable weather reports from the south.

Buying promoted by the early weather news was supplied on the advance to 14.44 for July and the market quieted down, with fluctuations comparatively narrow. There was considerable switching from May to later deliveries but without much change in the differences between months. At midday the market was quiet at net advances of 2 to 4 points.

NORTHERN PACIFIC AND ERIE ANNUAL MEETINGS

NEW YORK, April 13.—The annual meeting of the Erie Railroad yesterday was attended by the largest representation in its history, while the Northern Pacific lacked a quorum and, unable to elect directors, adjourned its annual session to Oct. 18.

President John J. Bernet, presiding over his first meeting of Erie stockholders, promised an honest and economical administration of the road's affairs but declined to predict when dividends would be inaugurated.

Two holders of first preferred stock, Dr. Henry L. Shively and Robert F. Hogan, created a slight stir in the meeting by asserting that their interests apparently were being sacrificed to the future welfare of common share holders, and declared that there should be a limit to the plowing of earnings back into the property. President Bernet promised the two men that their views would be presented to the board, but would not predict when payments would be made on the first preferred.

Responding to a question by Dr. Shively, G. H. Minor, vice president, declared that no official or employe of the Erie Railroad has any financial interest in subsidiaries which were organized by the Erie. The question arose out of an item of $8,000,000 representing advances which the road has made to its subsidiary companies.

At the meeting of the Northern Pacific, Chairman Howard Elliott said, in connection with the pending merger of Northwestern roads, that proxies were being turned in steadily, but that a majority of the stock had not yet come in. The consolidation could not be consummated until sufficient stock had been deposited to warrant submitting the plan to the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Due to the poor crop in the Northwest last year, Mr. Elliott said, March gross earnings fell about $215,000 below those of March, 1926, and first quarter operating income was approximately $1,000,000 under the total for the corresponding period of last year. He expressed confidence, however, that the loss would be made up in the last nine months of 1927.

Aside from the St. Paul road, Mr. Elliott replied to a stockholder's question, there is no opposition to the Northwest merger.

Boston Bank Merger.

BOSTON, April 13.—The National Shawmut Bank of Boston absorbed the Citizens' National Bank of Boston after the board of directors of the Citizens' National, with more than two-thirds of the stockholders assenting, had approved the merger at a meeting late yesterday. Details of the merger were not made public.

Wall Street News and Comment

—SPECIAL DAILY—

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, April 13.—After a morning of hesitation the stock market hardened in the afternoon and net changes on the day for the active shares, at least, were mostly upward. At the same time trading was not as it had been. In the last half hour General Motors moved up briskly, but most of the day both this stock and U. S. Steel were neglected for new favorites. One of these was General Electric and another was Columbia Gas. Railroad shares were quieter than on any day in weeks and most of them were down fractionally, although there was some improvement.

In general it was a market of individual issues and not groups were prominent, the copper shares being about the only exceptions.

The copper shares had been under the depressing influence of the low-priced copper metal for nearly a month, and while quotations did not yield materially, they did advance. Today buying appeared in this part of the list and practically all of the active stocks improved. Chile Copper, Kennecott, Cerro de Pasco and Anaconda were all at one time or another higher. Stimulus was given to the movement by the decrease in stocks of refined copper as of March 31, compared with the preceding month, statistics for which were published today.

There was the same irregularity in the automobile stocks as on Tuesday. Mack Trucks was strong again, crossing 112 to a new high for 1927. The upward swing was accelerated as the quotation rose, showing that part of the buying at least was coming from the short interest. On the other hand, Nash Motors, which was a feature in the last hour Tuesday, came down. The Nash report for the quarter showed $1.43 a share for the stock, compared with $1.51 in the same quarter last year. General Motors about held its own, while Dupont was coming down and Yellow Truck and Coach was selling off.

Announcement of a reduction in Pennsylvania crude, brought further selling into the oils. Marland and Phillips were the chief sufferers, both yielding a point or more. This did not prevent a few individual issues from advancing against the trend but sentiment toward the oil shares was still pessimistic. In one respect, the market was true to its recent character and that was the way in which the specialties moved as interest waned in standard issues. Colorado Fuel, which had gone up over 4 points in the preceding session, pushed ahead to a new 1927 top and Commercial Solvents "B" added to its sensational gain of the day before, also establishing a new high mark for the year. Warner Brothers Pictures was another fast mover in this same general class but all these incidents threw no light on the future of the market as a whole.

More significant was the tendency in the high-grade railway list. Nearly all the important stocks in this group lost fractionally on a comparatively small turnover. Perhaps it represented nothing more than realizing sales after the extended rise. There was nothing new in the railroad situation to affect the market for the stock although more stress was being laid on the additions to the railroad expense item from higher wages. The equipment received good support with the always popular Baldwin running up again. There was a good deal of quiet buying of the utilities during the day.

Special issues continued to absorb attention as the afternoon went on. General Electric assumed the leadership of the high grade industrials and moved ahead, easily bettering its previous high for the year as it crossed 92. Corn Products came into prominence with buying that put the price up above anything seen since the par value of the stock was reduced from $100 to $25.

Columbia Gas was the star performer among the utilities, also higher than at any time previously since the new corporation was organized. Colorado Fuel added to its early gain but the rails were still comparatively neglected.

Money renewed at 4½ per cent, unchanged, but funds were plentiful. The volume of trading was substantially under that of Tuesday.

REPUBLIC STEEL ELECTION BRINGS "MERGER RUMOR"

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 13.—John A. Topping, chairman of the board of directors of the Republic Iron & Steel Co., today announced that election changes in the board of directors made at the annual stockholders meeting today were incidental to stock ownership changes and "without other significance." He added that no change in the management or policy of the Republic was contemplated.

Reports of the last few days had it that a merger of the Republic with three other steel companies was imminent, through stock purchases by Cyrus S. Eaton, Cleveland banker and steel magnate.

Mr. Topping's statement announced the directors unanimously elected to the class expiring in 1930 for the Republic Iron and Steel Co., were as follows:

H. M. Hanna, Cyrus S. Eaton, John S. Brookes Jr., and Edward B. Greene.

The directors whose terms expire in 1927, were Alexander Glass, Edward J. Berwind and J. Wilbert Deetrick. M. A. Brush resigned some time ago.

Mr. Eaton and Mr. Greene are from Cleveland and Mr. Brookes is from Pittsburg.

As to the outlook for business, said Mr. Topping, it was encouraging and the volume of business has materially improved since the first of the year. As prices were lower, however, profits, he said, would be somewhat less, although on the whole indicated earnings were satisfactory.

Denials at Cleveland.

CLEVELAND, O., April 13.—Authoritative sources in direct connection with the Eaton Steel interests here denied today that any merger of the Republic Iron & Steel Co., the Central Alloy Steel Co., the Otis Steel Co. and the Youngstown Sheet and Tube Co. is in immediate prospect.

How Cleveland Views Comments.

By the Associated Press.

CLEVELAND, O., April 13.—The statement of John A. Topping, chairman of the board of directors of the Republic Iron and Steel Co., in New York, that changes in the Republic board were "without significance" and the denials of impending steel mergers by persons close to the Eaton interests here today were regarded in Cleveland financial circles as setting at rest for the time all prospects of a consolidation involving several Ohio concerns.

It was not regarded, however, as precluding the possibility or even probability, later of some sort of merger, rumored long in advance of the acquisition by the Eaton interests of Republic stock.

What such a merger might involve has never been definitely defined in the talk here, but it has been regarded as possessing very broad scope.

The Eaton companies at present are the Central Alloy and the Trumbull, together with their new interests in Republic. No authoritative information has appeared yet as to whether this amounts to working control of the Republic.

Members of the firm of Pickands, Mather & Co. of Cleveland, and of the Cleveland-Cliffs Iron Co., also of Cleveland, including Samuel Mather, William G. Mather and Harry Coulby of this group, together with the Wick interests of Youngstown and Cleveland, are leading associates of Cyrus A. Eaton in the ownership of the three companies.

The Mathers are the largest owners of stock in the Youngstown Sheet & Tube Co., but that company has never been mentioned here as one of the probable participants in the effort to get together independent Ohio steel companies in an extensive merger.

Thus far Eaton has done more to assemble a unity of ownership among independent steel companies than any other man in this area and his achievements in that direction are looked upon as giving weight to a prophecy of an inevitable future development along that line.

DAILY AVERAGE CRUDE OIL PRODUCTION UP SLIGHTLY

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 13.—The daily average gross crude oil production in the United States increased 400 barrels for the week ended April 9, totaling 2,478,300 barrels, says the weekly summary of the American Petroleum Institute. Total, 2,478,300, increase 400.

Daily average imports of petroleum at principal ports for the week ended April 9 totaled 177,143 barrels, compared with 207,429 barels for the previous week.

Daily average receipts of California oil at Atlantic and Gulf Coast ports for the week ending April 9 totaled 43,286 barrels, compared with 33,571 barrels for the previous week.

WEEKLY FREIGHT LOADINGS FALL BELOW MILLION MARK

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, April 13.—Freight loadings for the week which ended April 2 fell below the million mark for the first time in three weeks, reaching a total of 992,745 cars, the American Railway Association announced.

This was a decrease of 16,143 cars as compared with the week preceding, but a gain of 64,442 cars over the corresponding week of 1926. The classifications were:

Miscellaneous freight, 389,765 cars, an increase of 38,058 over the same week of 1926.

Coal 175,176, an increase of 18,259.

Merchandise and less than carload lots, 269,041, an increase of 6899.

Grain and grain products, 37,957, an increase of 325.

Live stock, 26,873, an increase of 5509.

Forest products, 70,877, a decrease of 2538.

Ore, 10,944, a decrease of 1230.

Coke, 12,112, a decrease of 840.

Steel Industry Situation.

NEW YORK, April 13.—"Steel production has fallen off from the record March rate and demand has slackened," Iron Age says. "Both are still on a high level; fresh orders, small but numerous and diversified, adding to the accumulations of last month. Prices, in spite of the volume of business, remain favorable to buyers, as the close-range buying precludes filling up order books."

The Iron Age composite prices remain unchanged. Pig iron is $19.21 per gross ton. The finished steel composite is 2.367 cents per pound, the low point since 1922.

Earning Reports.

NEW YORK, April 13.—Pie Bakeries of America earned $5.76 a share on the class "A" stock, after preferred dividends, in the period from Dec. 27, 1925, to Jan. 1, 1927, with net profit of $445,423. The company operates plants in Chicago, New York, Detroit, Baltimore and Newark, N. J.

Collins & Aikman Co. reports net profit of $3,192,891 for 13 months ended Feb. 28, equal after preferred dividends, to $7.10 a share on the common.

Textile Market.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 13.—Cotton goods were quiet in the gray cloth division yesterday. There was a rush order demand for printed and other wash fabrics and rayon dress materials in sheer yarn dyed weaves, all goods due being asked for immediately. Raw silk was firmer and the markets were active here and abroad. Printed silks were active. Wool goods were quiet. Burlaps were firm in Calcutta where holidays will prevail until after next Monday, beginning tonight.

Dry Goods Market Review.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, April 13.—Cotton goods markets were quiet today at unchanged price levels. Print cloths were quoted at 6⅞c for 64x60s and 8c for 68x72s. Raw silks advanced 5 cents a pound for most grades in a fairly active market.

Argentine Crop Outlook.

BUENOS AIRES, April 13.—The Ministry of Agriculture has published its third crop forecast for the season 1926-27, the figures differing only slightly from the forecast made in mid-January. The forecast is as follows: Wheat, 6,010,000 tons; linseed, 1,755,000 tons; oats, 962,000 tons; barley, 400,000 tons; rye, 83,000 tons. Figures given out by the Ministry show that the exportable surplus of wheat to April 12 amounted to 2,988,225 tons and linseed to 981,784 tons.

Among the Utilities.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, April 13.—West Penn Electric, subsidiary of the American Water Works and Electric, reports earnings for the year ending Feb 28 of $34,989,899, compared with $31,834,632 in the preceding year. Net after charges and reserves was $4,800,247, against $3,686,888, and balance after preferred dividends was $3,251,518 against $2,138,159. The class A dividend took $414,806 this year, leaving a surplus of $2,863,712. The surplus a year ago was $1,123,353.

United Railways and Electric of Baltimore in its 1926 report, given out today, showed earnings for the stock equivalent to $2.49 a share, against $2.39 a share in 1925. Net income was $1,010,054, against $980,609 in 1925.

Bankers for the company have purchased for the account of Inland Power and Light Corporation all of the physical property and assets of the Missouri Power Co. This property, together with Trenton Gas and Electric Co., People's Gas and Electric Co. and Missouri Electric, Gas and Water Co. will be merged into and with the Missouri Public Service Co.

PRICES IRREGULAR ON BOND MARKET

NEW YORK, April 13.—The bond market today continued to mark time, with prices irregular within a narrow range. Wall street observers predict that quiet will prevail for about five weeks, until Secretary Mellon makes known the new Government financing plans.

The new $55,000,000 Duquesne Light Co. 4½ per cent bonds were promptly oversubscribed, and shortly afterward were being quoted over the counter at ⅝ of a point premium over the offering price of 95.

Among domestic listed bonds, American Telephone sinking fund 5s, Otis Steel 6s and Sinclair issues sold fractionally higher, while Canadian Pacific debenture 4s and Great Northern 7s yielded to selling pressure.

Rhinelbe 7s with warrants were in good demand, but there was simultaneous liquidation in the ex-warrant issue. Otherwise foreign obligations were quiet and irregular.

Federal Government bonds were steady but demand was limited.

New Securities

NEW YORK, April 13.—The Duquesne Light Co. offers $55,000,000 first mortgage 4½ per cent gold bonds maturing 1967 at a price of 95 and accrued interest to yield 4.78 per cent. This is the largest public utility bond issue so far announced this year. It is being handled by a syndicate headed by Ladenburg, Thalmann & Co., H. M. Byllesby & Co., the First National Bank, Harris, Forbes & Co., Lee, Higginson & Co., The Union Trust Co. of Pittsburg, and Hayden, Stone & Co. The light company operates in the Pittsburg territory. Proceeds of the loan will be used to retire $41,718,000 of first mortgage and collateral trust bonds July 1 and for other corporate purposes.

Southwest Power Co., through A. C. Allyn & Co., Arthur Perry & Co., West & Co. and Old Colony corporation offers $4,080,000 first mortgage 5 per cent gold bonds series 1957 at 96 and interest to yield more than 5.25 per cent.

Marion Steam Shovel Co., through W. A. Harriman & Co. and G. H. Walker & Co. offers $3,600,000 first mortgage 6 per cent 20-year sinking fund gold bonds, due 1947, at a price of 99½ and interest to yield more than 6 per cent. The financing is in connection with a recapitalization plan.

Distribution Terminal and Cold Storage Co. of Cleveland, through Taylor, Ewart & Co., Pogue, Willard & Co., and J. A. Ritchie & Co., offers $2,200,000 first mortgage 6½ per cent sinking fund gold bonds, maturing 1952, priced at par and interest. This is the first subsidiary company financing in connection with the formation of the Continental Terminals, Inc.

Ames Emerich & Co., Inc., and Strupp & Co. will offer early next week an initial block of $1,000,000 Saarbruecken Mortgage Bank 6 per cent bonds, which is the first external issue of this bank.

Submarine Boat Directors Rescind Action.

NEW YORK, April 13.—Stockholders of Submarine Boat Corporation have rescinded the action taken at the annual meeting last year reducing authorized capital stock from 800,000 shares to 191,730 shares and also the proposed change in name to Transmarine & Terminal Co. Directors were re-elected.

New York Sugar.

NEW YORK, April 13.—The raw sugar market was steady and unchanged early today. Demand was less active and the only sales reported was 21,000 bags of Philippines for the second half of May shipment at 4.77.

Trading in raw sugar futures was also less active and price movement were narrow and irregular. The opening was unchanged to 2 points lower which was due to a little commission house selling, but offerings were not aggressive and a steadier tone developed later on covering and trade buying. Prices at midday were net unchanged to 1 point higher.

The demand for refined sugar was only moderate, as buyers were inclined to hold off until after the holidays; prices were unchanged at 5.85 to 5.90 for fine granulated.

DELMAR GRADE RULING EXPECTED IN MAY

Case Argued and Submitted to Supreme Court at Jefferson City.

A ruling of the Missouri Supreme Court is expected in May or June, in the litigation between the city and the Wabash Railroad over the Delmar grade crossing. The case was argued before the court at Jefferson City yesterday, as to the question whether the 22-foot clearence law, passed in 1925, applies to the order of the Public Service Commission for a viaduct over the tracks at Delmar, the order dating from 1924. The United States Supreme Court recently remanded the case to the Missouri court on this issue.

Counsel for the Wabash argued, at yesterday's hearing, that the 22-foot law should apply to the Delmar case. The city's plan, approved by the State Commission, is for a viaduct with 18-foot clearance. A compromise on a 20-foot plan was proposed a year ago, and this proposal was renewed recently, but intervening property owners, who believe the city's plan the most likely to preserve real estate values in the district, have prevented and are still preventing consummation of this plan.

Associate City Counselor Senti appeared before the Supreme Court in support of the city's plan, arguing that the 22-foot law does not apply to cases instituted before it was passed. Marion C. Early and Lawrence McDaniel, for the property owners, joined with the city in its plea.

$165 TAKEN IN 4 HOLDUPS; BRANCH NEWS OFFICE ROBBED

Masked Men Take $90 From Manager and Newsboys; Store Robbed in Noon Darkness.

Two masked men with revolvers, obtained $90 in cash from a news branch at 3606 North Market street, where they held up the manager, Benjamin Meyers, and three newsboys, last night.

Howard Ralt, grocer at 2358 Menard street, was robbed of $12 by two men.

During the period of darkness at noon yesterday, a man with a revolver held up the Kroger store at 914 Whittier street, taking $58 from the manager.

De Witt James of 3449 Shenandoah avenue, was robbed of $5 by a masked man who held him up in the rear yard of his home after he had placed his automobile in his garage.

CITY LICENSE COLLECTIONS FALL OFF $203,000 IN YEAR

Manufacturers Paid $879,000, the Largest Single Item in Total of $4,322,262.

City License Collector Chapman's report for the fiscal year ending Monday shows total collections of $4,322,262.93 as compared with $4,525,737.28 for the previous year. The decrease is attributed to reduced business in this district.

Merchants' and manufacturers' sales, on which taxes are levied, totaled $1,402,269,000 last year, as compared with $1,427,044,000 for the previous year, a drop of $24,775,000.

The city's share of the collections is $2,959,880.90, the balance being divided among the State, the schools and various agencies, including the Art Museum, Public Library, and Zoo.

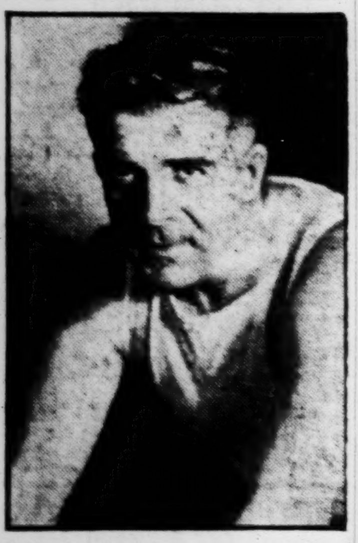
St. Louis merchants paid $773,618.35, and manufacturers $879,279.40 in city taxes on sales and stocks. Other large sources of revenue were: automobile licenses, $483,332.50; United Railways' mill tax, $257,871.45; motorbusses, $68,462.40; gasoline tax, $236,142.61; vehicles, $15,494; theaters, $18,375; peddlers, $18,195.65; dogs, $14,954.

MORO HOME MOST PRIMITIVE

By the Associated Press.

DAPITAN, Mindanao, P. I., April 13.—What are regarded by anthropologists as the most primitive dwellings in the world are to be found near here along the Iligan Bay region. These habitations are little more than nests built on poles instead of threes. A few sticks crosswise and one or two up and down and a little straw, materials which a large bird might carry, are thrown together above the water for the Moro's home.

The weather is always warm, cooked food rare, stoves unneeded. The inhabitants sleep on the floor, some of the more wealthy having straw mats. Wardrobes are virtually useless. The people live on fish mostly. Occasionally they row a canoe to shore and get a little rice and a cocoanut.



Sudden draughts in a hot room cause stiffness

RELIEVES STIFFNESS CAUSED BY CHILL

Pressman tells how newspaper workers keep fit

The pressmen working in a newspaper office at Dorchester, Mass., used to have great trouble with rheumatic stiffness owing to frequent sudden draughts of cold air when the doors were opened to take in rolls of paper.

One of their number began using Sloan's Liniment and now they all chip in to keep Sloan's always on hand for the entire shop.

"After my day's work I rub a little Sloan's Liniment on my back and legs. It never fails."

Sloan's gives real help because it doesn't just deaden the pain. It gets at the cause.

Apply gently, without rubbing. Right away you feel the comfortable glowing warmth as the new blood is brought to the sore spots, and soon the aching stops. Get a bottle today. All druggists—35 cents.

THE WOMAN OF IT

—By—

Marguerite Mooers Marshall.

WOMAN'S REQUIEM

When at the last
My bones are laid
In the still earth,
When I have made
An end of joy,
An end of grief,
At bloom of bud,
Or fall of leaf;
For epitaph,
Write this of me:
She was not all
She wished to be;
She was not witty,
Learned nor wise,
Nor versed in modern Sophistries.
But she was like
A swallow's flight,
So much she loved
Each keen delight—
The drum of waves
Along the shore;
Pine needles on
A woodland floor.
For sober things
She did not care,
She only loved
The earth and air;
The shine of street lamps
Down the street;
Autumnal woodsmoke,
Pungent, sweet;
The lilt of music;
Wings at dawn;
The little word phrase
Subtly drawn;
Brave laughter; flowers;
Ocean's gray;
Clouds racing; morning;
Woods in May.
She did no deed
Of high renown,
Was never toasted
In the town;
But she was kind
To all things small,
To all things hurt
And pitiful;
And life to her
Was wondrous fair
Without those brothers
Pain and care.
Essaying heaven
With eager breath,
What shall we ask
For her in death?
May Jesus in His love forgive
That she knew only
How to live!

ELINOR CHIPP.

Men's Rights.

Who says men never get an even break where women are concerned! First came Justice Seeger's decision protecting Daddy Browning against disbursement of one red cent of alimony to his one-time Peaches, and all tender-hearted, middle-aged, too, too impressionable gentlemen heaved sighs of heart-felt gratitude.

Now the legal safeguarding of men's rights is extended yet farther. Judge Cutler of Chelsea, Mass., has just ruled "that a man was justified in using a reasonable amount of force to prevent his wife from taking money from his trousers pockets."

We should hope so! It is high time that women got over the comic strip stuff in dealing with their men folk. How can a self-respecting, sex-respecting, modern woman feel anything but pitying disgust for the ancient dishonorable antics of some wives? Picking a husband's pockets for money, reading letters addressed to him, all snooping and sneaking efforts to grab his cash and guard his "love" are outlawed today by a sane "feminism" if not by the law of the land.

A WOMAN simply cannot afford to stoop to such bad manners. She may divorce her husband, or compel him to support their children, but she can fight in the open, if fighting is necessary. As a matter of fact, we doubt if there ever were much excuse for the domestic pickpocket. For years most American husbands have turned over to their wives rather more money than they could afford.

A man's personal privacy and the integrity of his personal possessions too often have suffered from the old-fashioned wife's meddlesome encroachments. It is the feminist wife who, demanding an even break from her husband, is just as ready to give it. The man married to her doesn't need a court to protect his rights!

THE REWARD OF VIRTUE.

And think of the possible reward of wifely virtue as those described above! Thirty years ago Mrs. Clara May Wilson signed, on her honeymoon, an agreement not to search her husband's pockets, open his letters or talk in bed at night. Now the Maryland Court of Appeals has just decided that, in keeping the agreement scrupulously, she won the right to demand $87.50 a month from her husband for separate maintenance. Probably any male Judge or jury would make a like decision.

At that, Mrs. Wilson earned her money if she didn't talk in bed—even once, in 30 years. Consider the strain of keeping to herself, until a husband wakes at noon, all the things a woman wants to say when he comes tumbling in over a chair at four a. m.!

Predatory Bugs All Foreign.—Headline.

Not much they are—some of them are New Jersey mosquitoes.

THEY NOW KNOW THE WORST!

A Harvard student, with a girl's silk stocking in his hand has just been caught in a Radcliffe dormitory, and the fact confirms the gloomiest forebodings of Yale men as to the pernicious influences cast by college girls upon a he-campus.

THE opening of "Spread Eagle" brought out one of the most diversified and interesting first-night audiences since Arthur Hopkins' last one. It ranged from the intellectually advanced to the socially elect. Tailored costumes seemed as correct as formal evening wear. Mrs. Norman Whitehouse looked attractive. Mrs. Morris Ernest wore a bright evening wrap of red velvet with ruffled collar. Edna Ferber wore an unusually smart white evening gown. It was noticed that many of the best dressed women were in white.

* * *

Minta Durfree Arbuckle looked very alluring as she sipped tea with Stephen Graham Sunday afternoon. It was a studio party, the usual people coming and going, but we were glad we came, if only to see Mrs. Arbuckle's new hat. Of soft black felt, it was shaped with a very high crown and brimless, and trailing down the left side almost to the shoulder hung three large, creamy, pink silk roses.

Two little debutantes were seen Monday much absorbed in the shopping question, Frances Gillmore and Constance Fox. Miss Gillmore had on a gray coat with a fluffy gray fox collar, and wore gray stockings with her black lizard oxfords. With this neutral background her hat of lipstick red boucle straw was particularly smart. Miss Fox was in beige and had on a close-fitting black velvet hat.

A trifle late, Mrs. James Howard stepped through the archway of Harry Hervey's studio Thursday afternoon. A lovely brocaded bag, of black shimmering silk embroidered in tiny gold beeds hung from her arm. When opened we discovered it to be fan shaped, and drawn together by a heavy black silk cord fastened at each end by carved jade pendants. Mrs. Howard smilingly told us that it came from Paris and that the friend who gave it to her said that while shark's skin and ostrich held sway for street wear, brocades were decidedly right for formal and afternoon attire.

More people were seen on the Avenue this week with that shopping look in their eyes, probably due to the fact that Easter is reported to be on the way. We passed Mrs. Allen Wellman in one of the shops wearing gray and green, and liked the unusual quilted collar which extended in tuxedo fashion to the bottom of her gray coat. Her felt hat of almond green was the only color contrast to her costume as she had on gray shoes and stockings.

* * *

THERE was a delightful camaraderie Tuesday in Bonwit Teller's between the clerks and the customers as the Junior League members were in charge. They had badges announcing this fact across the front of their good looking sport clothes, for most of them were in sport clothes, and blithely sold everything in sight. Rosalind Barnum, in the role of manager, was wearing gray blue, with a gray blue suede belt that repeated the design on the border of her frock. Sally Pratt busy in one corner, had on a tan checked sport suit, and the Jarvis twins, equally busy in another corner, had on blue tailored suits. Lydia Dadmun matched her long chain of Chanel red beads to her frock. Mrs. William Henry Barnum, with a lovely swirling gray bob was in gray crepe. Upstairs Louise Iselin serving tea, had on a colorful frock of coral red which showed glimpses of beige in front. All in all it was a gay event.

* * *

Lunching at Sherry's last week, we found Mrs. David Schwab seated at our left. We liked the simplicity and smartness of line expressed in her frock of black satin back crepe. But our interest was focused on the exquisite diamond band worn on her ringfinger. The narrow band was made of tiny oblong diamonds, named bagettes. The ring was called "The Empress," Mrs. Schwab told us, and was quite the latest in wedding rings.

IN SPITE of the cold winds when the Leviathan docked Monday we noticed some awfully smart spring outfits on the pier. Mrs. Milton Holden, still spoken of as "Fifi Widener," was wearing a coat of navy blue with an enveloping white fox callar; her navy hat was banded in front with white, giving it a pointed effect. Suits were much in evidence and not always the unimaginative blue twill or oxford mixture which we seem to be running so heavily here. We admired immensely a young girl who was wearing a suit of grey blue, the coat of plain material and the skirt with a vague stripe in the weave. Her small hat was navy and her accessories were beige bag, gloves and stockings. She wore beige fox fur fastened behind. Little silver balls were attached in mysterious fashion to the vamp of her navy blue kid shoes. Another returning voyager was wearing a navy blue box coat with a grey skirt. A fox fur with white splotches was worn with this and her navy felt hat had a bunch of crystal berries on the side. Her shoes were lizard and patent leather. Sir Thomas Lipton seemed as debonair as ever, and, as to sartorial information, he was also wearing navy blue and polka dotted bow tie.

Mrs. Louis Gouverneur Morris proved a charming chaperon for the sub-debs and their beaus as they danced at the Ritz last Thursday evening. Clad in nude pink chiffon, heavily embroidered with brilliants, she chatted with Mrs. Gerald Livingston, who, with Mrs. Eugene S. Reynal and Mrs. Stanley Wolff assisted her. We like the picture that this delightful costume dance of Adeline Robinson's left on our mind—sparkling crystal chandeliers, many colored spot-lights and the gorgeous costumes of the "Younger Set."

AUCTION BRIDGE AS PLAYED BY EXPERTS

FOR the final game in this season's series of Radio Auction Bridge Games, Mr. Work and Mr. Whitehead gave an instructive and interesting demonstration of modern partnership bidding, with particular stress laid on the correct bidding of two suit hands.

Mr. Work had for his partner one of the leading players of the West—James G. Stanley of Denver, Colo., while Mr. Whitehead was paired with Mr. R. E. Needham of Greenville, Pa.

These were the hands:

Mr. Whitehead, Dealer, in the "South" position: Spades, 3; Hearts, 9, 4, 3; Diamonds, A. Q. J, 2; Clubs, A, Q, J, 8, 4.

Mr. Stanley, "West": Spades, A, Q, J, 5, 4; Hearts, J; Diamonds, 10, 8, 7; Clubs, 9, 6, 5, 3.

Mr. Needham, "North": Spades, 7, 6, 2; Hearts, A, 8, 2; Diamonds, K, 9, 6, 3; Clubs, K, 10, 2.

Mr. Work, "East": Spades, K, 10, 9, 8; Hearts, K, Q, 10, 7, 6, 5; Diamonds, 5, 4; Clubs, 7.

Mr. Whitehead, holding a sound original bid either in diamonds or clubs, bid one diamond, following the principle that if a sound initial bid of either of two suits may be made, the suit of the higher value should be first named, even though the suit of lower value be longer or stronger, or both. This enables the original bidder to name the lower-valued suit on the second round of bidding, after which his partner, if he prefers the higher suit, can show his preference for it without increasing the number of tricks bid.

Mr. Stanley, the next bidder, said one spade. He had two quick tricks in that suit and would have said one spade as an original bid. As a following or defensive bid it was still more important for him to name the suit. Had he passed, he would have conveyed to his partner the false impression that he lacked quick trick strength for defense, or in support of any bid that his partner might make.

Mr. Needham bid two diamonds, as he held good support for his partner's minor bid, and had no better bid himself.

Mr. Work bid two spades. He could have bid two hearts, and would have done so had his partner bid a minor suit. But since he held better than normal support for his partner's major suit, a suit of game-going value equal to his own hearts, it was his duty to support his partner first, holding the heart bid in reserve. To have bid hearts on the first round would have denied spade support.

Despite the fact that his partner had supported his diamonds, Mr. Whitehead bid three clubs, to show the two-suited nature of his hand and also that his club suit was the longer or stronger of the two.

Mr. Stanley passed, as he already had bid the full strength of his hand. Mr. Needham bid three diamonds. Having better support for diamonds than clubs, he showed his preference without increasing his partner's offered contract. This bid was not in the nature of a second assist. It was simply a preferential bid.

Mr. Work bid three spades. He still reserved his strong heart bid, because of his exceptional supporting strength for spades. His singleton club, doubleton diamond, and four spades with the king, as well as his strong heart suit, demanded a second raise in spades.

Mr. Whitehead said four clubs, thus showing his partner clearly that diamonds, the suit first bid, were a suit of but four cards; while the club suit was of at least five and possibly six cards.

Mr. Stanley passed. Mr. Needham bid four diamonds, again showing his preference and also telling his partner that he had either better than normal help in diamonds or less than normal in clubs. Mr. Needham correctly inferred from his partner's bid that the higher suit first named by him was of only four cards.

Mr. Work, at this point, bid four hearts, hoping his partner could go on either with spades or hearts. No harm could result from the bid as his partner, if weak in hearts, could return to spades without increasing the contract.

Wr. Whitehead passed. Mr. Stanley bid four spades, simply as a denial of support for hearts. Mr. Needham said five diamonds. He reasoned that in view of Mr. Work's strong support for Mr. Stanley's spade bid, and his own holding of three spades, Mr. Whitehead could not hold more than one spade. He also figured on the discard of his two losing hearts on Mr. Whitehead's long clubs. He thus felt that game, or even a Small Slam, was most probable. Five diamonds held the bid.

Mr. Stanley opened with his singleton jack of hearts, hoping to find Mr. Work, who had bid hearts, with the ace, in which case Mr. Stanley would have been able to trump the suit on the return lead.

At first sight of Dummy, Mr. Whitehead, the Declared, saw that if the outstanding trumps were divided 3-2 his contract was assured, as he could draw the trumps in three rounds, leaving one in his own hand and one in Dummy's. These two remaining trumps could then be made separately by ruffing, giving him five tricks with trumps, five in clubs and the ace of hearts—a total of five-odd, and game. If the adverse trumps did not fall in three rounds, he could not make his contract. In any event, Mr. Whitehad had to try out the trump situation first. He played the ace of hearts from Dummy; Mr. Work played the 7; Mr. Whitehead the 3.

Dummy lead the 3 of diamonds; Mr. Work played the 4; Declarer the ace; Mr. Stanley the 7. Mr. Whitehead continued with the queen of diamonds; Mr. Stanley played the 8; Dummy the 6; Mr. Work the 5. Mr. Whitehead then knew his contract was assured.

Mr. Whitehead led the 2 of diamonds; Mr. Stanley played the 10; Dummy the king; and Mrs. Work discarded the 8 of spades.

Dummy led the king of clubs; Mr. Work played the 7; Declarer the 4; Mr. Stanley the 3. Dummy continued with the 10 of clubs; Mr. Work discarded the 5 of hearts; Declarer played the 8 of clubs; Mr. Stanley the 5. Dummy led the 2 of clubs; Mr. Work discarded the 6 of hearts; Mr. Whitehead played the jack of clubs; Mr. Stanley the 6.

Mr. Whitehead lead the ace of clubs; Mr. Stanley played the 9; Dummy discarded the 2 of hearts; Mr. Work the 10 of hearts. Declarer next led the queen of clubs; Mr. Stanley discarded the 5 of spades; Dummy the 8 of hearts; Mr. Work the 9 of spades.

Mr. Whitehead then led the 3 of spades; Mr. Stanley played the 4; Dummy the 7; Mr. Work the king.

Mr. Work led the king of hearts; Mr. Whitehead played the 4; Mr. Stanley discarded the jack of spades; Dummy trumped with the 9 of diamonds.

Dummy lead the 6 of spades; Mr. Work played the 10; Mr. Whitehead trumped with the jack of diamonds; Mr. Stanley played the queen of spades.

For the last trick Declarer led the 9 of hearts; Mr. Stanley discarded the ace of spades; Dummy the 2 of spades; and Mr. Work won with the queen of hearts. Mr. Whitehead, the Declarer, made five-odd, his contract and game at diamonds, scoring 35 trick points and 40 in the honor score for four honors divided.

If your pudding has a tendency to stick to the mold, place a hot wet cloth around it for a few minutes and it will slip out with very little trouble.

Economy on Ice.

During the between seasons when you "hate to take ice but have to just to keep the milk," why not try a substitute?

Fill a pan with cold water. Set the bottle of milk into this and cover the bottle with a wet cloth, allowing the ends of the cloth to hang in the water. Place the pan in a cool place and you will find the milk sweet for a couple of days, anyway. Butter may be kept from getting soft by following the same method.

Economic housekeepers find this a worth-while thrift item, as it reduces those ice bills considerably.

The Diary of a New Father

Tuesday evening.

I HAD a hunch all day today that something was wrong some place, and I must be psychic or something because when I came home Joan said, "I am glad you are here early. We can get dressed before dinner," and then I remembered tonight is the night the bridge club meets again, and when I thought something was wrong I was only half right, because the bridge club is worse than wrong; it is terrible.

I said, "Do we have to go? I don't feel very well," and Joan said, "What seems to be the matter?" and I said, "Oh, somehow I don't feel quite up to par," and Joan said, "I know what it is," and I said, "What?" and she said, "You have all the symptoms of not wanting to take me out." I said, "I feel just a little"—— and Joan said, "I know how you feel. Hurry up and get dressed."

That is a wife for you. She will make you take her some place as long as you can stand up, and there is something in the marriage ceremony about caring for you in sickness, but I guess it only means she is supposed to send you to a hospital if you get real bad, and I really do not feel very well this evening, either, because it is getting so you cannot eat two pieces of restaurant pie a la mode at one time any more, and I guess I should not have done it today, but I was kind of hungry.

Outside of the facts that I do not feel very well, and we have to drive the Stewarts over to the game, and I would rather be shot than play with that crowd anyway, I am going to enjoy myself a lot, if Joan ever gets dressed and lets us start. The janitor's daughter is going to stay with the baby again.

But I can always get Joan to give me all her sympathy by suggesting that we spend some money, and at dinner when I was watching the baby sitting in his buggy by the table and was thinking about that little fellow trying to crawl, I said, "We ought to have some pictures taken of the baby. He is so cute now," and Joan said, "That is a good idea. We haven't a single one of him, except those horrible snapshots you took." Well, I let that pass, and I said, "Can you take him down to the photographer's some day this week?" and Joan said, "Let me see. I can go either Thursday or Friday, I guess."

I said, "I know a cute way to take his picture. Undress him and have him lying on his stomach, raised up on his elbows and looking into the camera," and Joan said, "Now, isn't that a novel idea?" and I said, "Yes. It would be kind of cute, wouldn't it?" and Joan said, "Did you think that up all by yourself?" and I said, "Well, I remember having seen something on the same order," and Joan said, "No! Has it really been done before? It is so unusual that I thought you must have just invented it."

I said, "What are you trying to do? Kid somebody? Don't you like the idea?" and Joan said, "Oh, I just dearly love it," and I thought she would die laughing, but sh doesn't need to think she is so d smart because I have, too, se babies' pictures like that, and I cannot see that it is immode when it is just a little tiny bab

Beware of any but a true complexion soap—used this way

KEEPING the skin clean, the pores open, is only half the secret of a good complexion. The most important advice is to use ONLY a true complexion soap ever on the face.

A soap may be excellent for a thousand purposes, yet be too harsh for the skin. Good complexions are often thus imperiled.

Hence, largely on expert advice, thousands use Palmolive Soap. A soap made solely for ONE purpose—to safeguard good complexions. A beauty soap you know is safe to use.

Wash your face gently with Palmolive. Massage its balmy lather of olive and palm oils into the skin. Rinse off w warm w then with c If your s is inclined to be naturally dry, ap a little good cold cream. Do t regularly and particularly in t evening.

DOWNY the Woodpecker and Mrs. Downy had nested early this year. It was an early spring. The feathered folk who had spent the winter in the Sunny South had returned early and some of these were already housekeeping. Downy and Mrs. Downy, not having been away, had chosen their home early. It was in an old dead stump in the Green Forest. They had looked that old stump over many times during the winter. It was just the kind of stump that suited them.

So when they had made up their minds that the cold weather was really over they had promptly set to work to cut out the nicest, snuggest little home that ever was in that old stump. When the hole was finished they built no nest. All they did was to make a little bed of tiny chips and on this little bed of tiny chips Mrs. Downy laid one egg, two eggs, three eggs, four eggs. They were the daintiest of little white eggs. At first they would have looked pink to you, could you have looked at them, because the yolk could be seen through the pearly white shell.

My, how proud Downy and Mrs. Downy were of those eggs! "My dear," said Mr. Downy, "we have such an early start this year that perhaps we can raise two families."

"Wait until we've raised one before you talk of raising two," returned Mrs. Downy, "and see to it that you help protect these precious eggs. Whenever I have to leave them to get something to eat you must be on hand to see that nothing happens to them."

"What could happen to them?" asked Downy.

DON'T SPOIL WOMAN'S GAME.

When Rebecca West says that there is a sad lack of attractive men in the world she not only deals a solar plexus blow to the self-complacent sex, but incidentally gives her own sex away.

* * *

Of course, men are not as attractive as women. They don't have to be!

It is true that the average girl goes about with a lot of men who bore her to tears, just for the sake of having something in bell-bottom trousers sitting opposite her in a restaurant; and that she sometimes marries one of them just for the sake of having something besides an empty chair across the breakfast table and something besides the clock to make a noise around the house.

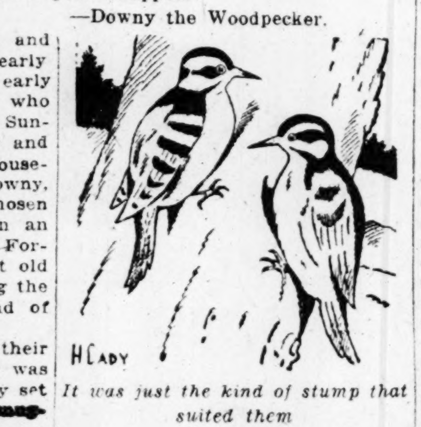
Who Stole the Eggs?

Some one or something, it is clear,
Must cause a thing to disappear.
—Downy the Woodpecker.



It was just the kind of stump that suited them

DOWNY the Woodpecker and Mrs. Downy had nested early this year. It was an early spring. The feathered folk who had spent the winter in the Sunny South had returned early and some of these were already housekeeping. Downy and Mrs. Downy, not having been away, had chosen their home early. It was in an old dead stump in the Green Forest. They had looked that old stump over many times during the winter. It was just the kind of stump that suited them.

So when they had made up their minds that the cold weather was really over they had promptly set to work to cut out the nicest, snuggest little home that ever was in that old stump. When the hole was finished they built no nest. All they did was to make a little bed of tiny chips and on this little bed of tiny chips Mrs. Downy laid one egg, two eggs, three eggs, four eggs. They were the daintiest of little white eggs. At first they would have looked pink to you, could you have looked at them, because the yolk could be seen through the pearly white shell.

My, how proud Downy and Mrs. Downy were of those eggs! "My dear," said Mr. Downy, "we have such an early start this year that perhaps we can raise two families."

"Wait until we've raised one before you talk of raising two," returned Mrs. Downy, "and see to it that you help protect these precious eggs. Whenever I have to leave them to get something to eat you must be on hand to see that nothing happens to them."

"What could happen to them?" asked Downy.

"I don't know, but something might," replied little Mrs. Downy as she popped into the nest and settled herself on those precious eggs.

For a day or two Downy couldn't be induced to leave for more than a few minutes at a time. Whenever it became time for Mrs. Downy to go hunt for her meals, Downy was right there to take care of those precious eggs. Never once did he see anything that might be dangerous. Never once did he see any one who would be likely to be looking for those eggs. He didn't worry over them at all, for the doorway to his home was so small that few could get through it. Of course, if Mr. Blacksnake should happen to find that home those eggs would be in danger. But Downy had never seen Mr. Blacksnake over in that part of the Green Forest, so he didn't worry about that. Of course, Chatterer the Red Squirrel was to be considered, but Chatterer had his home some distance away and he was very busy there. So Downy didn't worry.

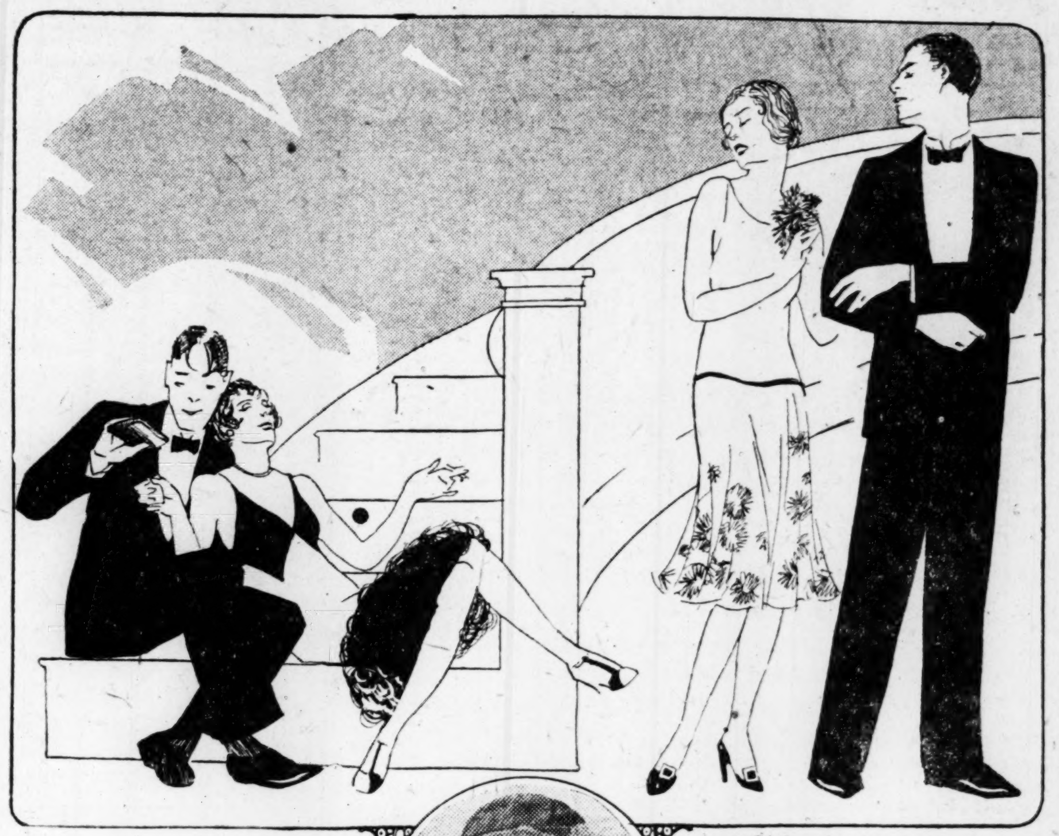
Then came a day when Mrs. Downy left Downy in charge while she went to get her dinner. For a few moments after Mrs. Downy left Downy sat in the doorway of his home. As he sat there he saw over on a tree a short distance away his cousin, Hairy the Woodpecker. Downy hadn't seen Hairy about for some time and he was anxious to know if Hairy had begun nesting yet.

"I won't be gone but a minute or two," said Downy. "Those eggs are perfectly safe." With this he flew over to pay his respects to his cousin, Hairy. He was gone longer than he realized. In fact, he got back just as Mrs. Downy returned. She whisked in through the doorway. In a moment she was out again, and such a look as there was on her face!

"What's the matter, my dear?" cried Downy.

"Some one has stolen my precious, precious eggs!" sobbed Mrs. Downy.

Youth Is Returning to Conservatism After Its Flareup, Says Mrs. J. Borden Harriman



No Longer Considered Smart to Drink, Pet and Violate All the Conventions, She Declares.

MRS. J BORDEN HARRIMAN

MRS. J. BORDEN HARRIMAN.

MODERN youth has passed the crisis in license of conduct, with drinking, promiscuous petting and a too loose freedom in the relationship of the sexes, judging by much that is in evidence, declares Mrs. J. Borden Harriman in the current May issue of "The Red Book Magazine." Basing her opinion upon widespread observations and talks with many young people, Mrs. Harriman says many girls have awakened to what they lose through too indecorous conduct and that there are many now who not only do not drink but who will not permit themselves to be kissed. In many girls' colleges it is no longer considered smart to be wild and among boys there is far less drinking.

"Already among the young there are signs of reaction," writes Mrs. Harriman, "already you see evidences of a return to the normal; in fact, already there is a tendency toward conservatism. Young people are beginning to take it for granted that they have liberties, and that it isn't necessary to exaggerate them to prove it. Girls who 'got away' with amazing things a year or two ago today find themselves criticized and cut by their friends, and they are calming down. It is no longer considered smart to become intoxicated or brag of affairs with any number of boy friends. I am told that three-fourths of the students at colleges are now conservative. At Princeton there is far less drinking among the students, and while it was considered the thing to carry flasks a few years ago, and the boy who drank was considered a great sport, there is a growing spirit of exclusiveness which bars from the social life of the element those who misbehave.

Conservative Working Girls.

"In the Government departments in Washington I know many gum-chewing, cigarette-smoking little girls who will talk about anything and are insistent upon their freedom and cocky in their defiance of conventions, but they are extraordinarily staid and conventional when it comes to relationships with men.

"A young girl I know attends a college not very far from Washington, D. C. A year ago, she said, it was common for the girls to boast of their indiscretions. They went to proms, where the boys brought flasks, and made no secret of their drinking. 'But this year everything is changing,' my young friend said. 'If a girl shows that she drinks too much, the other girls drop her; and among the students generally there is now little drinking. They've begun to feel it isn't quite right any more. There was one girl in college who was proud of her wild affairs with boys, and would brag of being out two or three times a week. Last week she was expelled.'

"Another girl I know of comes of a most conservative family in Philadelphia. The atmosphere of her home was proper to the degree of a depressing solemnity. Until she was 17 she never went out with boys. When she went to college she bloomed into a modern of the wildest kind. She went to proms and started drinking. In revolt against her previous repression she just broke loose. And she believed she was being up to date. Other girls told me her conduct shocked them. Things became so bad that the Student Council of one college where she attended the proms took action and asked the Council of her own college to expel her. As a consequence her family, shocked beyond measure, took her home, a much chastened girl."

Among the sheltered classes Mrs. Harriman says she knows many girls who not only do not drink, but will not allow themselves to be kissed.

"The fact is, the present generation has been given a black eye—much blacker than it deserves," continues Mrs. Harriman. "What generation hasn't condemned its successor? And as a result of the sensational agitation about the younger generation, nobody seems to believe they could be innocent. Because their manners are bad, people assume that their morals are worse. And the young know it—to the effect that many doubtless come to the conclusion, 'Well, they think the worst about us, anyway. Why not go the limit?'

"Many people don't stop to consider that while the young may be indecorous in their behavior, they may be innocent of any actual wrong-doing. What may seem a shocking profligacy may be only an effervescence of spirits carried perhaps beyond the bounds of reasonable restraint. The young are naturally prone to experiment; gayety is instinctive with youth; and temperateness and wisdom come only through proper training and experience. Older people don't always realize that prejudiced condemnation and unjust suspicion naturally rouse in the young a reaction of defiance. And in this misjudgment, in the biased denunciations which refuse to investigate fairly and see both sides of the problem, the older generation is mostly to blame."

Admitting that established standards have broken down, Mrs. Harriman says that even the wildest of the flappers "have not been any too happy."

"The very fact that they are restless, so lacking in all repose, always on the go, always seeking new sensations, proves that. Girls have said that they have tried so hard to find a new thrill, to get some big experience, that there is no illusion left. Give them the chance to find themselves in a happy middle course.

"There was much false romanticism when the mothers and grandmothers of the present generation were girls; but there was a true and beautiful romanticism as well. That must be regained. Romanticism is an essential part of love in youth—of all true love. Does the younger generation wish to take the color from the rainbow? Without the transfiguration of the sex relationship into an idealized and spiritual sphere, what is left but a thing essentially sordid, and grossly material? No purely physical sex attractions can ever last; after the first flare there is apt to be a reaction of mutual aversion and self-disgust.

"Girls who tolerate 'petting' make themselves incapable of responding to finer things, and when the big moment comes are unable to rise to the heights of a love spiritual and supreme. They either don't wait for an ultimate love, or are unable to meet it when it comes. In which I find the reason for the brevity of so many marriages, the tragic wreckage of young lives and increasing divorces of the day.

"In all this I believe the old ideals are right. Men and women are born to love, and should mate only through a great love. For that sacred experience, waiting as for some wonderful tryst, a girl should keep herself unspoiled until it arrives. She may be free to work out her own career in whatever way she desires, but she must not be corrupted by a degradation of ideals and fifth-rate sex philanderings.

"A young girl came to see me recently who spoke frankly about herself. 'I've liked a lot of boys, and I often wondered why I didn't hold any of them long. At first they made violent love, and would hug and kiss me, telling me I was the only girl in the world. But their interest soon cooled, and they would drift off to other girls. I'd say to myself the boys of today are like butterflies flitting from flower to flower. It hurt my vanity and made me feel cheap. Why couldn't I hold any single one? I wondered why I didn't get much of a thrill after the first kissing parties, and the more I 'petted,' the less thrill I got from the new boys I took up with. Then, I think, I did fall in love. I would have married Charles. I'd have given up everything for him. I was quite wild when he drifted away to another. We had a terrible quarrel one night.

" 'What do you expect?' " he said. " 'The boys you've been running around with were out only for a good time. When I marry a girl, it's going to be a different proposition—I'll marry one who hasn't been 'petted' and hasn't been an easy mark for any fellow who comes along'."

"Girls who got away with amazing things a year ago today find themselves cut by their friends."

THE RHYMING OPTIMIST
By Aline Michaelis

HERE'S the way a house is made; stately setting, light and shade, trees to give a background green, velvet sward to lie between. Skillful workers then to raise walls and roof that all must praise; well-proportioned, nobly lined, by an artist's hand designed; rooms where every care is spent that the inmates be content, every ease and comfort planned by a practiced, lavish hand.

Here's the way a home is made, city lot or forest glade, this one thought in view always; here is refuge for all days, be they dark or be they bright; 'round this earth lies our delight, ours to feel here joy and woe as the changeful seasons go! Joys made greater, griefs made less by love's tender watchfulness. City lot or forest glade, here's the way a home is made!

Half an Ear.

NEW YORK.—One can see with half an eye that half an ear will be exposed by many of the spring hats of the turban type. The turbans are of black satin, plain, and extremely tight. The lobe of each ear is exposed and is usually rouged, the coloring serving to provide a back drop for a huge pearl stud.

PURE BEAUTY
By Angelo Patri.

Angelo Patri is just the principal of a New York grade school, but the late Charles W. Eliot, president of Harvard, said Patri is doing more for common-school education than any other person in America. This school, a model in every respect, is a mecca for teachers from all parts of the country.

"I DON'T care. I'm not going to do it."

"Pure Benny. You'll sprout wings if you're not careful."

"That needn't bother you. My business is my business. Yours is your own."

"I can't see the fuss. Who's hurt if you hand in a paper for me? You do me a favor. Who's hurt?"

"I don't know, but I know I'm not going to hand in a paper as if you were present when I know you're having a good time downtown. It's not my idea of playing fair."

"All right. Don't. Somebody else will. Pure Benny."

Benny hated the nickname. He was simply trying to be honest with himself and his school and this was what he got for his pains. What was the use? As Piggy said, Who was hurt? Nobody but Pure Benny.

I think it was Piggy. Leaving aside all other questions, all other influences that might touch the question, Piggy's action was ugly. When this world was created Beauty was made manifest in all its parts. Go to the uttermost ends of the earth, examine the grandest works of nature, and the most insignificant, and in each of them you will discover a beauty that makes your soul ache with longing.

The tiny wild flower growing on the wastes of the mountain top is the perfection of line and color. It is pure beauty. The frost pictures that are breathed on the window — who can understand them? When you tell me they are frost crystals I must ask you what they are and how they come to be arranged in garden pictures that no earthly artist can hope to achieve.

But we were talking about people—about children, and their conduct. There is within each of us from birth to old age, a craving for beauty. It must have been instilled when the Creator made men. Instinctively a child turns from what is ugly to what is lovely. His training and education should strengthen and make sure that tendency. His conduct is its index.

When one does a selfish thing the expression of his eyes, of his face, of his body, is ugly. An act of kindness will erase the ugliness and beauty will shine through him once more. From then on there is a struggle between the two and in time, one or the other must win. Either beauty or ugliness characterizes one's life. Beauty means great happiness and a success beyond material things. Ugliness spells failure with success in nothing and bitterness of spirit in everything.

The child who tells what is untrue, who acts lies, who cheats, who lives ugliness will be ugly, and a failure. The child who sticks to what his own conscience tells him is right, will live in terms of beauty—and success. Make a collection of pictures of people good and bad. Put the good one beside the bad one and see written upon the faces the story of their living. Choose which you will have in your life—beauty or ugliness.

And remember this: Although you deliberately choose ugliness your soul will crave beauty to the end and you will be haunted always by a longing for pure beauty.

Sleeves.

NEW YORK.—One may have everything except the gas stove up ones sleeve and still it would not violate fashion's line for the kimono and cape sleeves are with us again in no small numbers. They are especially prominent on evening coats. The cape sleeves are formed of a series of small capes like those on a postillion's coat, which widen from shoulder to wrist.

RECIPES FROM "My Old Virginia Cook Book" Shalloped Meat.

USE any kind of cold, cooked meat desired. Cut it in small pieces or run it through a grinder. Butter a deep baking dish. Cover the bottom with bread crumbs. Then put in a layer of the meat, adding salt, pepper, and pieces of butter and a dash of catsup. Repeat until the dish is full, having a layer of crumbs on top. Now pour over all one pint of milk. Bake for 30 minutes and serve.

Housecleaning Hints.

This is the month for cleaning all the drawers in the house. The dresser drawers may require new pads, and these can be made before the real housecleaning begins.

* * *

Brush and dust all the drawers thoroughly and to avoid insects it is well to sprinkle an odorless exterminator or preventive over bottom of the closet drawers before putting in the fresh paper.

* * *

A house has many drawers, so cleaning these is a formidable task. Do not take more than one drawer at a time; then if you are interrupted in the work there will not be a "big mess" around to inconvenience the family.

* * *

When putting each drawer in order, discard all useless articles. Never put back anything with the idea of "looking it over some day." Cleaning time is looking-over time, and it should be thoroughly done at that time. This is systematic housecleaning.

THE CHARM OF NEW CHINTZ
By Wanda Barton

GLAZED and semi-glazed chintz are in the foreground of fashion for the spring household decoration. While the glazed material is shown in many new and attractive designs, the semi-glazed material is used where softness and pliability, without wrinkling, is needed. Both kinds are a full yard in width, but the plain colors in the semi-glaze used for trimming is double width.

Among the uses for the full glazed material are the accordion plaited lamp shades, finished with cord and tassels to match the darkest color in the pattern chosen. Where the material is used for plain Empire shades it is usually finished with a trimming border or cording of the plain color. The fine, small patterns, copies of English prints, are usually selected for shade making. For window shades the large patterns are selected. One of the newest and perhaps the quaintest one is a copy of the old block bed quilt. It is most effective. Another old design is the flower pot. The pot is the old red clay, and in it are old-time pinks, marigolds, zinias and other common garden flowers. Then there is a feather design which is very effective, and a broad scroll pattern of large twisted leaves in greens and browns on a shaded bronze-colored background.

The pillows covered with the unglazed material, are very attractive. There are round, rectangular, square, oblong and heart shapes. Some of the pillows are trimmed with plain banding, pointed borders, knife-plaited ruffles or pinked double ruffles. Again some have just the loose double hems of the material without trimming of any sort.

Where the chintz is used for drapery curtains they are generally trimmed with the plain materials. The trimmings may be in cords finishing the hems folded back on the right side, or the graduated bandings in three widths are used across the bottoms and tops of the draperies. Sometimes the curtains are scalloped at the bottom; then the scallops are corded with the plain-colored material.

Printed Linens.

NEW YORK.—In bygone days, tired women were well named. They tired themselves and their eyes out embroidering linen and other fabrics. Today those same beautiful designs which were wrought with such pain and labor are being reproduced in printed linens done by hand. Slightly heavier materials are used to reproduce the designs formerly used on furniture covers and curtains.

A NEW STORY OF LOVE, ADVENTURE AND MYSTERY

by HENRY C. ROWLAND

SYNOPSIS.

Granville Boyd, owner and navigator of the yacht Rigel, is about to start on a semiscientific expedition around the world. He is accompanied by his sister, Carillon, and a party of scientists. While anchored in the harbor at Hamilton, Bermuda, Carillon meets Bengal Dodd, who has brought his yacht Gunga to Bermuda on her maiden cruise, and she asks Dodd to tag along with the Rigel. Obtaining Boyd's consent, Dodd asks Jim Howland and his daughter Gertrude to accompany them. As they are about to leave, a widow at one of the Hamilton hotels loses her jewels and Carillon is suspected of the theft. Bengal Dodd is a former District Attorney of New York and he decides to do everything in his power to help Carillon clear herself of the suspicion. He suspects Mrs. Ransome's maid, Irma, who formerly worked for Carillon. While Boyd and Dodd are in Hamilton working on a clew, Mrs. Ransome, accompanied by Irma, comes aboard the Rigel and assures Carillon that she is certain of her innocence and tells her she is free to leave on the Rigel whenever she pleases. The two boats start off agreeing to meet at Port au Prince, but on the seventh day out Bengal sights the Rigel drifting north. On boarding her he finds that she has been abandoned, evidently the victim of pirates. Getting Howland's permission to have Gertrude accompany him as navigator on the Rigel, he takes the yacht and agrees to meet Howland and the Gunga at Ragged Island. Following a clew he finds on the chart he makes instead for Verde Cay, an uninhabited island off the beaten track. He arrives there just in time to see Carillon try to escape from one of her captors.

INSTALLMENT XVII.

A BAD JAM.

FOR a moment or two it looked as if Carillon would make good her escape. Once in the water she would be safe as a mermaid slipping off a ledge. Bengal did not believe the man would dare to fire on her, with witnesses so close.

Gertrude was screaming encouragement, sobbing, nearly wild with hope and fear. But Carillon seemed weakened, or else the bush was very dense and set with thorns. She could not seem to hasten but proceeded falteringly, once stopping as if in despair. Her pursuer gained rapidly, though his own going now seemed difficult. But he ran on, balancing like an eccentric dancer.

Then, as they watched in silent horror, aghast, outraged, Carillon tottered and would have fallen on the jagged rocks had not the man leaped forward to catch her. He lifted her in his arms, the girl now limp, unconscious perhaps, and returned as he had come, but slowly, picking his way and pausing now and then to rest, still holding the supine figure, a crushed and bleeding Carillon that wrung low whimpers from Bengal, like the whimpers of a hurt dog.

But a still more sinister note was still to be thrust on him in his agony. For scarcely had the captor passed over the low rise and disappeared with his helpless captive when a shock head and shoulders, the former swathed in a bloody bandage, thrust up from the brush. It was the man in blue denim.

He stared after the retreating figure, rubbed his forehead, and looked stupidly round him, then lurched drunkenly back over the rocks after the man who had tried to kill him.

"Steady, Bengal . . ." Gertrude laid her hand on his shoulder. "Don't let go."

He raised his haggard face. "I'm not giving up to despair. Just trying to dope out what to do."

"There's nothing we can do but stick around until somebody comes along. Their safety hangs now on our being here."

"Almost all of the ships through here are for the Windward passage, and they pass about 30 miles off. Only a steamer from Havana to Europe would be apt to cut in close. Meantime, we don't know what horror is happening, or has happened."

"Our being here ought to be some restraint," Gertrude said.

"It hasn't kept a man from being shot and Carillon run down and carried off before our eyes." The lines deepened in Bengal's tortured face. "Do you know what I think?"

"That they failed to recognize Rigel? That occurred to me. It was dark when they boarded her."

"Yes, the dinner table showed that they were at dessert. She was under power, drifting and waiting for a breeze with her sails lowered, to stop the slatting. The only sailor in the crowd, that brute in working clothes, may have been half drunk. He acted that way just now, and rum would account for his hanging their boat on the rocks. This devil with the rifle is probably the chief of the mob, the landlubber that thought he had scuttled the yacht. The last thing he'd look for would be to see her here, and so soon."

Gertrude nodded. "For one thing he believes she's on bottom, and for another he could never guess how we would know where to look for them. He may think we're a stray yacht hugging the lee of the bank for shelter from the nor-wester. This fellow may not have been in Bermuda. Some crook they signed on in New York."

"That's it. He is probably rigging a yarn to give us if we land. He wants us to go ashore to investigate, when he means to cut off the ship and make his getaway in her, leaving her people with the Rigel crowd . . . if they are over there."

"You don't think . . ." Gertrude lacked voice to finish her question, but it was asked by the horror in her wide blue eyes.

"There's no telling. Such a gang stops at nothing, nowadays. It's gone back to the slogan of the early pirates in these waters. 'Dead men tell no tales.' "

"Don't. That's too horrible. . . ." Gertrude sank on a chair at the chart table. "Some ship is bound to come along before nightfall."

"Not close enough to signal," Bengal said, "and I don't dare leave."

"How about Dad?"

"Can't count on him. Failing to find us at Ragged Island, he's apt to make for Jamaica Bay, and seeing we're not there he will think we've made the most of this nor'wester and held on for Port au Prince. He will realize that every minute of time gained is priceless."

"But what can we accomplish here, Bengal? Two of us will have to tend ship and you alone and unarmed can't hope to do anything."

"That's what I'm studying," Bengal muttered.

"Well, what? They've got the ship's arsenal beside their own weapons, and you haven't an arm of any sort."

"Here are two . . . ." Bengal stretched them out. "There will be meat knives and a cleaver in the galley."

"Try to be sane, Bengal. It's enough to drive you mad, I know, but you must keep your head . . ." Gertrude spoke soothingly.

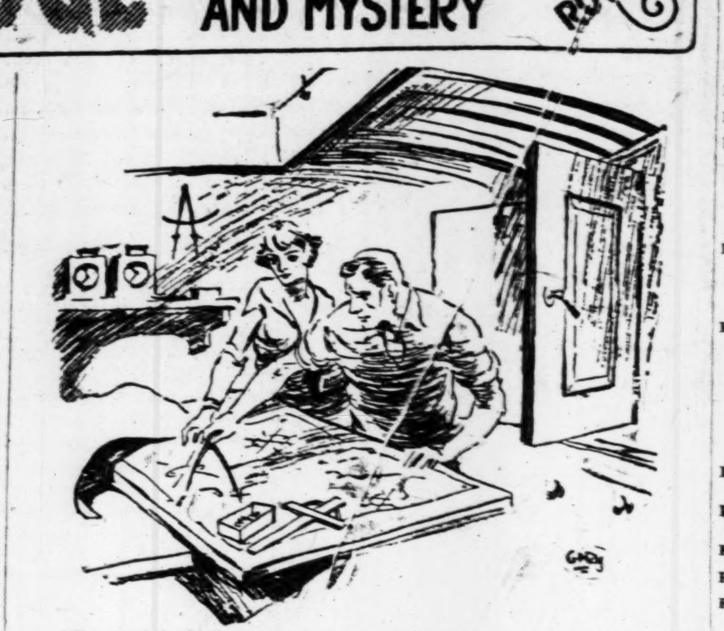
"I've weighed the chances. Look here, . . ." He picked up the dividers and leaned over the chart. "It's only 42 miles round the edge of the bank of Ragged Island harbor. It has a settlement, as the book mentions, two wells of good water and speaks of supplies being scarce, also advises taking a pilot to enter. Besides, with this breeze your father ought to fetch in there shortly after noon today. You can make it by that time, if you start right away."

"What are you planning to do, Bengal?"

"Go ashore and tell this crowd their game is up."

"You would be shot on sight. And they can't get away."

"I think they can. I've examined their boat through the glasses. She went on at full high water, and I can't see that she's damaged. The sea was smooth, and it's been smooth ever since, here in the lee of the land with the bank beyond. They must have a small boat or two, and now that they're discovered they are going to make every effort to get off with the next tide, and may succeed."



"I've weighed the chances. Look here. . . ." He picked up the dividers and leaned over the chart.

"But they must have tried that already, and failed."

"The tide might have been going when they went on. There have been two flood tides since, but no swell with the wind offshore. One thing is certain. It would be a simple matter to carry a stern line to her from Rigel and yank her off at high water, swell or no swell."

"You mean to offer them that if they release their prisoners and let you bring them off aboard?"

"I may offer a little more than that, and ask a trifle more in exchange. It all depends."

"How could you trust them to keep their bargain, Bengal?"

"I'll trust them about as far as I can heave our stockless anchor. The first thing would be to haul the boat clear. Then they will have to take a chance and trust me to turn her over to them after I get Rigel's people aboard."

Gertrude shook her head. "That looks to me like a stalemate."

"Well, they can choose between it and your going to fetch an armed posse here within the next eight hours. Anyhow, I can see what they think about it."

"If they give you the chance."

"They will, I think. They're in a bad jam, and must know it. Nothing greatly to be gained by bumping me off. I'll get in the dinghy and pull ashore, and if I am not back in half an hour, you are to beat it for Ragged harbor, and bring armed aid."

Tweed Wrap-Arounds.

NEW YORK.—The tall woman and the stout woman have been subjects of special attention by modistes for a long while, but now it is the petit woman's turn. One designer has just originated a spring coat for small women. It is of tweed and cut in the wrap-around style. The long rolling collar and cuffs are of plain tweed, while in the body of the coat, shades of gray and green merge almost imperceptibly one to another.

ANSWERS TO QUERIES

The Post-Dispatch reserves the right to reject any query. Personal and telephone calls or answers by mail cannot be given attention, except letters on medical questions of undoubted sincerity when accompanied by stamped addressed envelope.

MRS. L. A. J.—We suggest that you consult a professional dyeing company about the fur you desire to dye.

H. W.—You should consult the book collection at the Public Library for detailed descriptions of the different types of engines.

M. L. H.—The term youngster may be applied to any young living creature. It is often used to mean a young boy, but it is not limited to that meaning.

M. S.—To make sugar glaze for coating doughnuts, mix one ounce of gelatine with 10 pounds of sugar. Add enough boiling hot water to make of proper consistency, and whip the icing until it becomes white.

A. T. M.—Light is physically defined as radiant energy, which is capable of producing the effect of vision. Light waves consisting of vibrations in the ether sent out by the sun and other luminous bodies strike the retina of the eye, cause the optic nerve to vibrate, and produce the sensation of sight.

N. P. V.—The iceberg season may be said to cover a period of four months, from March 15 to July 15. The bergs decrease in numbers noticeably after the middle of June, and from the middle of July on until the following spring the area south of the Grand Banks is practically free from them. An isolated berg or two may drift down to the tail, but not often south of it, as late as October.

KATHRYN. — April Fool's day has long been known as the time to play jokes on one's neighbor. Just how long the custom has prevailed is not known. Some persons say that it started back in the beginning of time, when Noah sent the dove out of the ark before the flood had abated. The date of this is supposed to correspond with our first day of April. And, inasmuch as the bird went out upon an ineffectual mission, the custom gradually grew of sending one's friends on useless errands. But there are more plausible explanations. One writer believes the custom had its inception among royalty. In olden times it was the custom to allow the court jesters all sorts of liberties and prerogatives on the first day of April, while the jesters were in turn expected to furnish the monarch and court with some practical joke, calculated to provide entertainment for some time to come; in fact, it is impossible to read any of the chronicles of the Middle Ages without finding mention of the joke played by the court jester, especially on the day sacred to the cap and bells, namely All Fool's day. Peter the Great was much struck by the manner in which All Fool's day was celebrated in France, Holland and England during his sojourn in those countries, and on his return to his own dominions in Russia, he introduced the April fool custom quite forcibly among his people. On March 31, 1719, he erected a gigantic pile of wood and timber and garnished it with tar and other inflammable materials, on the open square in front of his palace in St. Petersburg. In the early morning hours of April 1 he lighted it and awaited results. He had not long to wait. The flames shot high up in the air and it looked from a distance as if the palace and the whole city were aflame. People came from all sides, some of the peasants traveling for miles to help put out the fire. When they finally reached the seat of the conflagration they were met by troops formed around the square. "Fools and donkeys," the soldiers cried, "fall back, by order of the czar, fall back! The Little Father has fooled you. It is the first day of April today." The czar's example was followed and the custom soon spread over Russia.

MEDICAL QUESTIONS

Health and sanitation questions of public interest only will be considered. Diagnosis or treatment of individual cases will not be given.

MRS. D.—The method you use in caring for your complexion is very good and should be continued as long as it gives satisfactory results.

UNHAPPY MOTHER.—The addition of a little syrup of ipecac would serve to make the drink nauseating and possibly thereby destroy a taste and appetite for it.

GERTRUDE.—For the information you desire you should apply at the Bureau of Municipal Nurses, second floor, Municipal Courts Building, Fourteenth and Market streets.

C. A. S.—Leprosy is a rare disease in this country. St. Louis has a record of four cases in 25 years, two of which were men, and two were women. The typical lesion of leprosy is a small nodule in the skin, within which the germs are found.

THANK YOU.—The only way to remove such hairs permanently is by the electric needle. If you desire us to recommend someone to you for this service write again, repeat your question and inclose a self-addressed, stamped envelope.

N. P.—The following lotion should relieve the enlarged pores: Mix 1 drachm of precipitated sulphur, 10 grains of powdered camphor, 10 grains of powdered tragacanth, 1 drachm glycerine and 2 ounces each of rose water and lime water. The lotion should be applied to the face each night and morning after the face has been steamed for 15 minutes.

ANXIOUS.—The sore and raw tongue is probably caused by some digestive disturbance and a torpid liver. You should try taking two teaspoonfuls of bisodol three times daily in a wine glass of water, before meals, and after meals two tablets of caroid and bile salts. If you will send a stamped, self-addressed envelope and repeat your question we will send you a diet list.

WORRIED WIFE.—Either an ulcerated tear or a tumorous condition might cause the trouble you describe. Either condition might become cancerous if you continue to neglect taking proper treatments. Douching would not help either condition. If you will send a stamped, self-addressed envelope, repeat your question and ask for the names of physicians, we will recommend them to you.

COURAGE.—It is true that you might go on in this condition without any more discomfort than you are now experiencing. It is also true, however, that such troubles go from bad to worse and hence should be corrected before any permanent harm develops. If you are not financially able to incur the necessary expense, you could be treated free of charge at the City Hospital if you are a citizen of St. Louis.

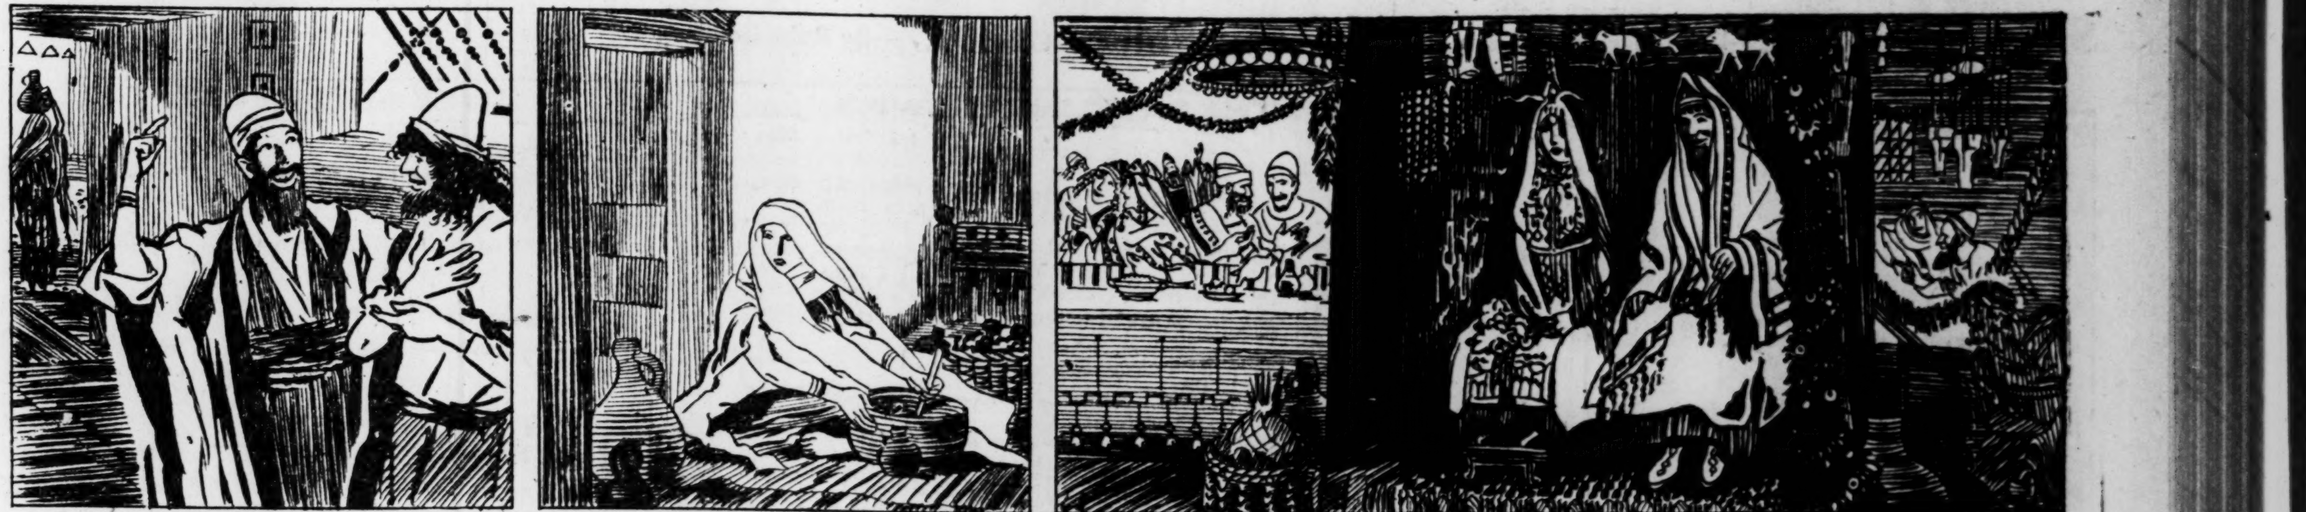
The Greatest Story in the World—By Kor

The Bible in Pictures



And Laban said to him, surely thou art my bone and flesh. And he abode with him the space of a month. And Laban said unto Jacob, because thou art my brother, shouldst thou therefore serve me for nought? Tell me, what shall thy wages be?

And Laban had two daughters: the name of the elder was Leah, and the name of the younger was Rachel. Leah was tender eyed; but Rachel was beautiful and well favored. And Jacob loved Rachel; and said, I will serve thee seven years for Rachel thy younger daughter.

And Jacob served seven years for Rachel. And Jacob said to Laban, Give me my wife for my days are fulfilled. And Laban made a feast. And in the evening, Laban brought Leah to Jacob. And it came to pass, that in the morning, behold, it was Leah: and Jacob said to Laban, What is this thou hast done unto me? did not I serve with thee for Rachel? And Laban said, It must not be so done in our country, to give the younger before the first born. We will give thee this also for the service which thou shalt serve with me yet seven other years.

And Jacob did so, and Laban gave him Rachel his daughter to wife also.

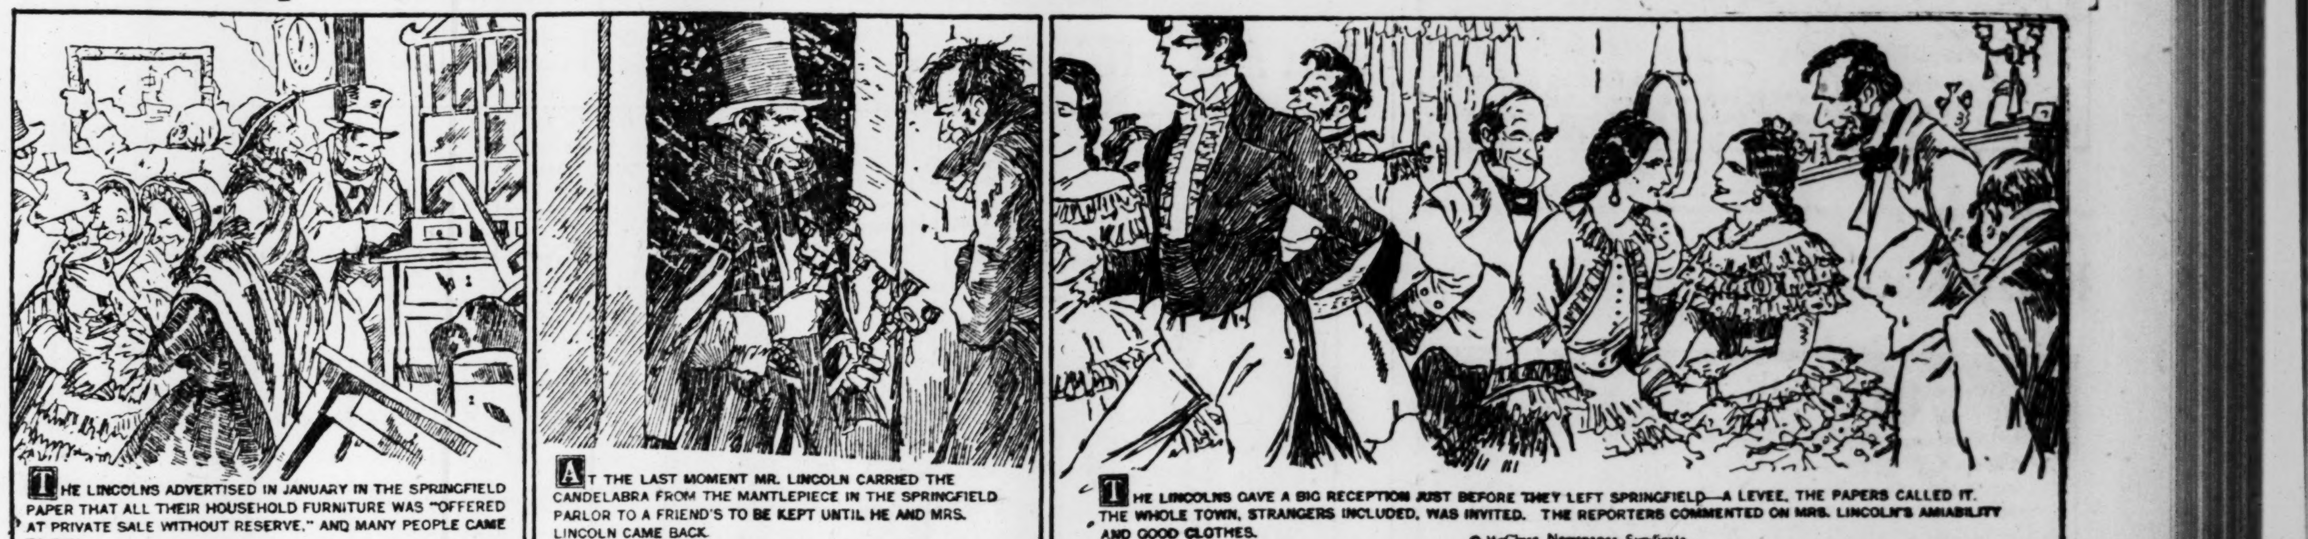
In the Footsteps of Abraham Lincoln

Pictures by Nicholas Afonsky
Text Edited by Ida M. Tarbell



THE LINCOLNS ADVERTISED IN JANUARY IN THE SPRINGFIELD PAPER THAT ALL THEIR HOUSEHOLD FURNITURE WAS "OFFERED AT PRIVATE SALE WITHOUT RESERVE," AND MANY PEOPLE CAME TO BUY.

AT THE LAST MOMENT MR. LINCOLN CARRIED THE CANDELABRA FROM THE MANTLEPIECE IN THE SPRINGFIELD PARLOR TO A FRIEND'S TO BE KEPT UNTIL HE AND MRS. LINCOLN CAME BACK.

THE LINCOLNS GAVE A BIG RECEPTION JUST BEFORE THEY LEFT SPRINGFIELD—A LEVEE, THE PAPERS CALLED IT. THE WHOLE TOWN, STRANGERS INCLUDED, WAS INVITED. THE REPORTERS COMMENTED ON MRS. LINCOLN'S AMIABILITY AND GOOD CLOTHES.

JAPAN DOUBLES MILITARY FORCE IN MANCHURIA

Division Due for Relief Will Be Retained Temporarily and Another Goes There to Strengthen Garrison.

CHIANG CALLS PARTY CONFERENCE

Meeting in Nanking Tomorrow Is to Determine Whether Dissension Shall Become Definite Split.

By the Associated Press.

TOKIO, April 14.—The Japanese garrison in Manchuria will be doubled temporarily.

The Fourteenth Division departed today for Manchuria to relieve the Tenth Division, whose term of service there has expired, but in view of the situation in China, the Tenth Division will remain temporarily.

Japanese Forces Control Concession at Hankow.

By the Associated Press.

HANKOW, April 14.—Japanese naval authorities were controlling the Japanese concession here today with a strong contingent of Bluejackets. The concession was heavily barricaded. It was announced there was no intention of surrendering it to the Cantonese.

Japanese business interests pointed out that the British gave up their concession in Hankow with the friendliest motives so as to be able to continue business and not to endanger life and property. Now, it was added, business was dead and it was dangerous for Britishers to walk on the streets. The Japanese declared they would not be led into a similar trap.

There has been friction recently in Hankow between the Japanese and the Cantonese. It was reported several days ago that Eugene Chen, the Cantonese foreign minister, had made an offer to the Japanese consul that the Nationalist Government would not interfere with the Japanese concession in Hankow, and immediately suppress all anti-Japanese agitation provided Japan agreed not to join Great Britain and the United States in an ultimatum to the Nationalist Government because of the Nanking outrages. Japan joined in a note of protest, however.

After many days of negotiations with Chen, and after a series of anti-British disturbances in Hankow, an agreement was signed on Feb. 19, whereby the concession there was withdrawn from exclusive British control and placed under a joint commission of administration. The British yielded on a number of other points in order to ease the crisis.

Conference of Nationalist Party to Meet in Nanking.

By the Associated Press.

SHANGHAI, April 14.—Intense interest centered in tomorrow's meeting of the Kuomintang (Cantonese political party) at Nanking, summoned by Gen. Chiang-Kai-shek, the Cantonese military chief and Moderate leader.

Call for the meeting was issued by Chiang with the reported object of rallying sufficient strength to oust the Hankow radicals from the party. Chiang's opposition to the radicals has reached the stage in the last few days of armed raids on headquarters of the red labor unions in this and other cities, with many casualties.

The conference was called to decide whether the Cantonese capital should be removed from Hankow to Nanking, or whether there should be a definite split, the Moderates functioning from Nanking and the radicals from Hankow.

At least 100 Chinese were killed and 250 wounded in fighting yesterday which grew out of raids on the native suburbs of Shanghai by Chiang's troops. The raids were a plan to rid the Kuomintang of "communists."

The police have received reports that the general strike called in protest against the raids was growing more extensive and it was estimated last night that 100,000 workers were out in various sections of the city, including the international settlement.

Protest by Chinese Women.

Chinese residing in the native city of Shanghai have protested to the authorities against the practice of foreign soldiers searching Chinese women who enter the foreign settlement.

The protest was made through Mrs. Herman Liu, wife of the former chairman of the Chinese Y. M. C. A., acting in behalf of various women's organizations. Mrs. Liu said that the Chinese women do not object to being searched, but that they wanted women to do the searching.

Capt. Uyematsu, commander of the Japanese landing force, replying in behalf of the authorities, said that the smuggling of arms and propaganda into the settle-
